Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 30th January, 1885, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. II OF 1885.

An Act to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

XVI of 1881.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1885.

XVI of 1881.

Amendment of section 7, Act XXVI of 1881.

2. In the fourth paragraph of section 7 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, for the words "When acceptance is refused and the bill is protested for non-acceptance" the following shall be substituted, namely :—"When a bill of exchange has been noted or protested for non-acceptance or for better security".

New section inserted after section 45 of the same Act.

3. After section 45 of the same Act the following shall be inserted :—

"45A. Where a bill of exchange has been lost before it is over-due, the person who was the holder of it may apply to the drawer to give him another bill of the same tenor, giving security to the drawer, if required, to indemnify him against all persons whatever in case the bill alleged to have been lost shall be found again.

Holder's right to duplicate of lost bill.

"If the drawer on request as aforesaid refuses to give such duplicate bill, he may be compelled to do so."

Addition to sections 61 and 64 of the same Act.

4. To section 61, and the first paragraph of section 64, of the same Act, the following shall be added :—

"Where authorised by agreement or usage, a presentment through the post office by means of a registered letter is sufficient."

Addition to section 101 of the same Act.

5. To section 101 of the same Act the following shall be added :—

"A notary public may make the demand mentioned in clause (c) of this section either in person or by his clerk or, where authorised by agreement or usage, by registered letter."

Section inserted after section 104 of the same Act.

6. After section 104 of the same Act the following shall be inserted :—

When noting equivalent to protest.

"104A. For the purposes of this Act, where a bill or note is required to be protested within a specified time or before some further proceeding is taken, it is sufficient that the bill has been noted for protest before the expiration of the specified time or the taking of the proceeding; and the formal protest may be extended at any time thereafter as of the date of the noting."

Section 108 of the same Act, in part, repealed.

7. In the same Act, section 108, the second sentence is repealed.

Amendment of section 109 of same Act.

8. In the same Act, section 109,

(a) for the words "in the presence of a notary public subscribe the bill with his own hand and" the following shall be substituted, namely :—"by writing on the bill under his hand"; and (b) the last twelve words are repealed.

Amendment of section 113 of same Act.

9. In the same Act, section 113, after the words "the person so paying" the words "or his agent in that behalf" shall be inserted.

New chapter added to same Act.

10. After Chapter XVI of the same Act, the following shall be inserted :—

"CHAPTER XVII.

"NOTARIES PUBLIC.

Power to appoint notaries public.

"138. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint any person, by name or by virtue of his office, to be a notary public under this Act and to exercise his functions as such within any local area, and may, by like notification, remove from office any notary public appointed under this Act.

Power to make rules for notaries public.

"139. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance and control of notaries public appointed under this Act, and may, by such rules, (among other matters) fix the fees payable to such notaries."

R. J. CROSTHWAITE,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 30th January, 1885, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. III OF 1885.

An Act to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882; It is hereby enacted as follows:— 1882.

Amendment of section 1 of Act IV of 1882.

1. For the fifth clause of section 1 of the said Act the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"And any Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt, either retrospectively or prospectively, any part of the territories administered by such Local Government from all or any of the following provisions, namely:—

"Sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three."

Addition to same section.

2. The following clause shall be deemed to have been added to the first section of the said Act from the date on which it came into force, namely:—

"Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing part of this section, sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall not extend or be extended to any district or tract of country for the time being excluded from the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, under the power conferred by the first section of that Act or otherwise." III of 1877.

Addition to section 4 of same Act.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added, namely:—

"And sections fifty-four, paragraphs two and three, fifty-nine, one hundred and seven and one hundred and twenty-three shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act, 1877." III of 1877.

Addition to section 6 of same Act.

4. To section 6 of the said Act the following clause shall be added:—

"(i) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize a tenant having an untransferable right of occupancy, the farmer of an estate in respect of which default has been made in paying revenue or the lessee of an estate under the management of a Court of Wards to assign his interest as such tenant, farmer or lessee."

Amendment of section 69 of same Act.

5. In section 69 of the said Act—

(a) after the words "is valid in the following cases" the words "and in no others" shall be inserted; and

(b) after the words "Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist," in both places where they occur, there shall be inserted the words "or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified in this behalf by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette."

The Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Bill, 1885.

(Chapter II.—General Registry Offices of Births, Deaths and Marriages.—Sections 1-9.)

A Bill to Provide for the voluntary Registration of certain Births and Deaths, for the establishment of General Registry Offices for keeping Registers of certain Births, Deaths and Marriages, and for certain other purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the voluntary registration of births and deaths among certain classes of persons, for the more effectual registration of those births and deaths and of the marriages registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and for the establishment of general registry offices for keeping registers of those births, deaths and marriages;

XV of 1872.

And whereas it is also expedient to provide for the collection and preservation of certain existing registers made otherwise than in the performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which the register was kept, and to declare that copies of the entries in those registers shall be admissible in evidence;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1885; and

[Act XV of 1872, s. 1.]

(2) It shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, directs.

Local extent.

2. This Act extends to the whole of British India, and, so far only as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty.

Definitions.

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"prescribed" means prescribed by a rule made by the Governor General in Council under this Act; and

"Registrar of Births and Deaths" means a Registrar of Births and Deaths appointed under this Act.

Saving of local laws.

4. Nothing in this Act, or in any rule made under this Act, shall affect any law heretofore or hereafter passed providing for the registration of births and deaths within particular local areas.

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL REGISTRY OFFICES OF BIRTHS, DEATHS AND MARRIAGES.

Establishment of general registry offices and appointment of Registrars General.

[Cf. 6 & 7 Wm. IV, c. 86 s. 2.]

5. (1) Each Local Government—

(a) shall establish a general registry office, for keeping such certified copies of registers of births and deaths registered under this Act, or marriages registered under Act III of 1872 (to provide a form of marriage in certain cases), or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, as may be sent to it under this Act, or under either of the two last-mentioned Acts as amended by this Act; and

XV of 1872.

(b) may, from time to time, appoint to the charge of that office an officer, to be called the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages, for the territories under its administration.

[Cf. Act II of 1877, s.

(2) Provided that the Governor of Bombay in Council may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, establish two general registry offices and appoint two Registrars General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories under his administration; one of such general registry offices and of such Registrars General being established and appointed for Sindh and the other for the other territories under the administration of the Governor of Bombay in Council.

Indexes to be kept at general registry office.

[Cf. 6 & 7 Wm. IV, c. ss. 37 & 38. See also A III of 1872 s. 77.]

6. Each Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages shall cause indexes of all the certified copies of registers sent to his office under this Act, Act III of 1872, or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, as amended by this Act, to be made and kept in his office in the prescribed form.

XV of 1872.

Indexes to be open to inspection.

7. Subject to the payment of the prescribed fees, the indexes so made shall be at all reasonable times open to inspection by any person applying to inspect them, and copies of entries in the certified copies of the registers to which they relate shall be given to all persons applying for them.

Copies of entries to be admissible in evidence.

8. A copy of an entry given under the last foregoing section shall be signed by the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages, and shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the birth, death or marriage to which the entry relates.

Superintendence of Registrars by Registrar General.

9. Each Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages shall exercise a general superintendence over the Registrars of Births and Deaths in the territories for which he is appointed.

The Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Bill, 1885.

(Chapter III.—Registration of Births and Deaths.—Sections 10-18.)

CHAPTER III.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS AND DEATHS.

A.—Application of this Chapter.

10. The persons whose births and deaths shall be registrable under this chapter are as follows, namely :—

Persons whose births and deaths are registrable.

(a) in British India, the members of every race, sect or tribe to which the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applies, and in respect of which an order under section 332 of that Act is not for the time being in force, and all persons professing the Christian religion ;

(b) in the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty, subjects of Her Majesty being members of a like race, sect or tribe or professing the Christian religion.

B.—Registration Establishment.

11. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, appoint, either by name or by virtue of their office, so many persons as it thinks fit to be Registrars of Births and Deaths for such local areas within the territories under its administration as it may, from time to time, define.

Power for Local Government to appoint Registrars for its territories.

[. Act III 1877, s.

(2) The Local Government may suspend, remove or dismiss any person appointed under this section and appoint another person in his stead.

(3) A Registrar of Births and Deaths may resign by notifying in writing to the Local Government his intention to do so, and, on his resignation being accepted by the Local Government, he shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

12. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, appoint, either by name or by virtue of their office, so many persons as he thinks fit to be Registrars of Births and Deaths for such local areas within the territories of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty as he may, from time to time, define.

Power for Governor General in Council to appoint Registrars of Births and Deaths for Native States.

[. 37 & 38 ., c. 88, s.

13. (1) Every Registrar of Births and Deaths shall have an office in the local area for which he is appointed.

Office and attendance of Registrar.

(2) Every Registrar of Births and Deaths to whom the Local Government may direct this sub-section to apply shall attend at his office for the purpose of registering births and deaths on such days and at such hours as the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages may, from time to time, direct, and shall cause to be placed in some conspicuous place on or near the outer door of his office, his name, with the addition of Registrar of Births and Deaths for the local area for which he is appointed, and the days and hours of his attendance.

14. (1) When any Registrar of Births and Deaths to whom the Local Government may direct this section to apply, not being a Registrar of Births and Deaths for a local area in the town of Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, is absent, or when his office is temporarily vacant, any person whom the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages appoints in this behalf, or, in default of such appointment, the Judge of the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the Registrar's office is situate, shall be the Registrar of Births and Deaths during such absence or until the Local Government fills the vacancy.

Absence of Registrar from his district or vacancy in his office.

[Cf. Act III of 1877, s. 10, also 37 & 38 Vic, c. 88, ss. 24 & 25.]

(2) When any such Registrar of Births and Deaths for a local area in the town of Calcutta, Madras or Bombay is absent, or when his office is temporarily vacant, any person whom the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages appoints in this behalf shall be the Registrar of Births and Deaths during such absence or until the Local Government fills the vacancy.

(3) The Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages shall report all appointments made under this section to the Local Government.

15. The Local Government shall supply every Registrar of Births and Deaths with a sufficient number of register books of births and of register books of deaths, and shall make suitable provision for the preservation of the records connected with the registration of births and deaths.

Register books to be supplied and preservation of records to be provided for.

[Cf. Act III of 1877, s. 13.]

C.—Mode of Registration.

16. Every Registrar of Births and Deaths, on receipt of notice of a birth or death within the local area for which he is appointed, shall, if the notice is given within the prescribed time and in the prescribed mode by a person authorized by this Act to give the notice, forthwith make an entry of the birth or death in the proper register book.

Duty of Registrar to enter births and deaths of which notice is given in register.

[Cf. 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 86, ss 17 & 18 ; also Act III of 1877, s. 16.

17. The following persons are hereby authorized to give notice of a birth, namely, the father or mother of the child, or, in default of the father or mother, the occupier of the house in which to his knowledge the child is born, or any person present at the birth, or the person having charge of the child.

Persons authorized to give notice of birth.

[Cf. 37 & 38 Vic., c. 88, s. 10.]

18. The following persons are hereby authorized to give notice of a death, namely :—

Persons authorized to give notice of death.

[Cf. 37 & 38 Vic., c. 88, s. 10.]

(a) In the case of any person dying in a house

(Chapter III.—Registration of Births and Deaths.—Sections 19-25.)

after the date on which this Act comes into force, the nearest relatives of the deceased present at the death or in attendance during the last illness of the deceased, or, in default of such relatives, any other relative of the deceased dwelling or being in the local area of the Registrar of Births and Deaths within which the deceased was at the time of his death, or, in default of such relatives, any person present at the death, or the occupier of the house in which to his knowledge the death took place, or, in default of the persons hereinbefore in this section mentioned, any inmate of that house; and

[Cf. 37 & 38 Vic., c. 88, s. 11.]

(b) in the case of any person dying in a place which is not a house, or of a dead body being found elsewhere than in a house, after the date on which this Act comes into force, any relative of the deceased person having knowledge of any of the particulars required to be registered concerning the death, or, in default of such relative, any person present at the death, or finding, or taking charge of, the body.

Entry of birth or death to be signed by person giving notice.

19. (1) When an entry of a birth or death has been made by the Registrar of Births and Deaths as required by section 16, the person giving notice of the birth or death must sign the entry in the register in the presence of the Registrar.

(2) Until the entry has been so signed, the birth or death shall not be deemed to be registered under this Act.

[Cf. 37 & 38 Vic., c. 88, s. 30.]

Grant of certificate of registration of birth or death.

20. The Registrar of Births and Deaths shall, on application made at the time of registering any birth or death by the person giving notice of the birth or death, and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, give to the applicant a certificate in the prescribed form, signed by the Registrar, of having registered the birth or death.

[Cf. 6 & 7 Wm IV, c 86, ss. 32 & 34; also Act III of 1877, s. 56]

Duty of Registrars as to sending certified copies of entries in register books to Registrar General.

21. (1) Every Registrar of Births and Deaths in British India shall send to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which the local area for which he is appointed is situate, at the prescribed intervals, a true copy, certified by him under his hand, in the prescribed form, of all the entries of births and deaths in the register book kept by him since the last of those intervals:

Provided that, in the case of Registrars of Births and Deaths who are clergymen of the Churches of England, Rome and Scotland, the Registrar may send the certified copies in the first instance to his ecclesiastical superior, who shall send them to the proper Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

In this sub-section, "Church of England" and "Church of Scotland" mean the Church of England and the Church of Scotland as by law established respectively; and "Church of Rome" means the Church which regards the Pope of Rome as its spiritual head.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply to every Registrar of Births and Deaths in the territories of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty, with this modification, that the certified copies referred to in that sub-section shall be sent to such one of the Registrars General of Births, Deaths and Marriages as the Governor General in Council, from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, appoints in this behalf. [Act XV of 1872, s. 56]

Searches and copies of entries in register books.

22. (1) Every Registrar of Births and Deaths shall, on payment of the prescribed fees, at all reasonable times allow searches to be made in the register books kept by him, and give a copy of any entry in the same. [Cf. 6 & 7 Wm IV, c. 86, s. 35; also Act XV of 1872, s. 79.]

(2) Every copy of an entry in a register book given under this section shall be signed by the Registrar of Births and Deaths, and shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the birth or death to which the entry relates.

D.—Penalties.

Penalty for wilfully giving false information.

23. If any person wilfully makes, or causes to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of births or deaths, any false statement in connection with any notice of a birth or death under this Act, he shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years and with fine. [Cf. 6 & 7 Wm. IV c. 86, s. 41; 37 & 38 V c. 88, s. 40; Act XV of 1872, s. 68]

Penalty for omission to enter birth or death in register, or loss of register.

24. If any Registrar of Births and Deaths refuses, or without reasonable cause omits, to make an entry in the proper register of any birth or death which he ought so to enter under this Act, or if any person having the custody of any register book of births or deaths carelessly loses or injures or allows the injury of the book, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees. [37 & 38 V c. 88, s. 3]

E.—Correction of Errors.

Correction of entry in register of births and deaths.

25. (1) If a Registrar of Births and Deaths discovers any error in the form or substance of any entry of a birth or death in any register kept by him under this Act, he may, in the presence of the persons who gave the notice of the birth or death, or, in case of their death or absence, in the presence of two other credible witnesses, correct the error by entry in the margin, without any alteration of the original entry, and shall sign the marginal entry and add thereto the date of the correction. [Cf. 6 & 7 Wm.IV, c. 86, s. 44; 37 & 38 V c. 88, s. 36; See also Act XV of 1872, s. 78.]

(2) Every entry made under this section must be attested by the witnesses in whose presence it was made.

(3) If a certified copy of the entry has already been sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages, the Registrar of Births and Deaths shall make and send a separate certified copy of the original erroneous entry and of the marginal correction therein made.

The Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Bill, 1885.

(Chapter IV.—Amendment of Marriage Acts, 1872. Chapter V.—Special Provisions as to certain existing Registers.—Sections 26-31.)

CHAPTER IV.

AMENDMENT OF MARRIAGE ACTS, 1872.

Addition of new section after section 13, Act III of 1872.

26. After section 13 of Act III of 1872 (to provide a form of marriage in certain cases), the following section shall be inserted:—

Transmission of certified copies of entries in marriage-certificate book to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

"13A. The Registrar shall send to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which his district is situate, at such intervals as the Governor General in Council, from time to time, directs, a true copy certified by him under his hand, in such form as the Governor General in Council, from time to time, prescribes, of all entries made by him in the said marriage-certificate book since the last of such intervals."

of 2.

Amendment of the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872.

27. In the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, the following amendments shall be made, namely:—

(a) at the end of section 3 the words "'Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages' means a Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages appointed under the Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1885," shall be added;

(b) for the words "Secretary to the Local Government", wherever they occur, and for the words "Secretary to a Local Government" in section 79, the words "Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages" shall be substituted;

(c) for the words "at such places as the Local Government directs" in section 62, the words "in the office of the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories of the Local Government by which the person who keeps the register-book was licensed" shall be substituted;

(d) in section 81, after the words "Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages" the words "in England" shall be added.

CHAPTER V.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS AS TO CERTAIN EXISTING REGISTERS.

3 & 4 c. 92,

Permission to persons having custody of certain records to send them within one year to Registrar General.

28. If any person in British India, or in the dominions of any Prince or State in India in alliance with Her Majesty, has for the time being the custody of any register or record of birth, baptism, naming, dedication, death or burial of any persons of the classes specified in section 10, or of any register or record of marrige of persons of the class of those to whom Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, applies, and, if such register or record has been made by him otherwise than in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which the register or record was kept, he may, within one year from the date on which this Act comes into force, send the register or record to the office of the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which he resides, or, if he resides within the dominions of any such Prince or State as aforesaid, to such one of the Registrars General as aforesaid as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, from time to time, directs in this behalf. XV of 1872.

Appointment of Commissioners to examine registers.

29. (1) The Governor General in Council may appoint so many persons as he thinks fit to be Commissioners for examining the registers or records sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages under the last foregoing section. [Cf. 3 & 4 Vic., c. 94, s. 2.]

(2) The Commissioners so appointed shall hold office for such period as the Governor General in Council, by the order of appointment, or any subsequent order, directs.

Duties of Commissioners.

30. (1) The Commissioners appointed under the last foregoing section shall enquire into the state, custody and authenticity of every such register or record as may be sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages under section 28, [Cf. 3 & 4 Vic., c. 92, ss. 2 and 4.]

and shall, from time to time, deliver to the Registrar General a descriptive list or lists of all such registers or records, or portions of registers or records, as they find to be accurate and faithful.

(2) The list or lists shall contain the prescribed particulars and refer to the registers or records, or to the portions of the registers or records, in the prescribed manner.

(3) The Commissioners shall also certify in writing, upon some part of every separate book or volume containing any such register or record, or portion of a register or record, as is referred to in any list or lists made by the Commissioners, that it is one of the registers or records, or portions of registers or records, referred to in the said list or lists.

Searches of lists prepared by Commissioners and grant of certified copies of entries.

31. (1) Subject to the payment of the prescribed fees, the descriptive list or lists of registers or records, or portions of registers or records, delivered by the Commissioners to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages shall be, at all reasonable times, open to inspection by any person applying to inspect them, and copies of entries in [Cf. 3 & 4 Vic., c. 92, s. 5.]

The Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Bill, 1885.

(Chapter VI.—Rules.—Sections 32-33.)

those registers or records shall be given to all persons applying for them.

(2) A copy of an entry given under this section shall be signed by the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages, and shall be admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the birth, baptism, naming, dedication, death, burial or marriage to which the entry relates.

CHAPTER VI.

RULES.

[Cf. 37 & 38 Vic., c. 88, s. 27; also Act XV of 1872, s. 82.]

Power for Governor General in Council to make rules.

32. The Governor General in Council may, from time to time, make rules—

(a) to fix the fees payable under this Act;

(b) to prescribe the forms required for the purposes of this Act;

(c) to prescribe the time within which, and the mode in which, persons authorized under this Act to give notice of a birth or death to a Registrar of Births and Deaths must give the notice;

(d) to prescribe the registers to be kept, and the form and manner in which Registrars of Births and Deaths are to register births and deaths under this Act, and the intervals at which they are to send true copies of the entries of births and deaths in the registers kept by them;

(e) to prescribe the particulars which the descriptive list or lists to be prepared by the Commissioners appointed under Chapter V are to contain, and the manner in which they are to refer to the records or registers, or portions of records or registers to which they relate; and (f) generally to carry out the purposes of this Act.

Procedure for making and publication of rules.

33. (1) The Governor General in Council shall, before making rules under the last foregoing section, publish a draft of the proposed rules in such manner as may, in his opinion, be sufficient for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

(2) There shall be published with the draft a note specifying a date at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration.

(3) The Governor General in Council shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(4) Every rule made under this section shall be published in the Gazette of India, and the publication in the Gazette of India of a rule purporting to be made under the last foregoing section shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IT is proposed by this Bill (1) to establish a system of voluntary registration of births and deaths for the benefit of such classes of the community as would be likely to avail themselves of such registration, (2) to establish general registry offices for keeping registers of the births and deaths so registered, and of marriages registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872 (XV of 1872), and (3) to provide machinery for giving evidential value to certain existing registers of births, baptisms, deaths, burials and marriages, which have been kept under no law.

2. The subject of the registration of births and deaths among Europeans in India has been long under the consideration of the Government, whose attention has, moreover, been frequently directed to it by memorials from various Christian religious bodies urging very strongly the need for legislation.

3. The Indian Statute-book contains at present no general law for the registration of births and deaths. There are, indeed, enactments which provide for the registration of births and deaths within certain specified areas, principally municipalities and cantonments, but, in the first place, these enactments are strictly local in their nature, leaving the greater portion of the country unprovided for, and, in the next place, their provisions, being directed primarily to statistical purposes, are not of such a nature as to make the registers of births and deaths kept under them of value for purposes of evidence.

4. As to the numerous registers of baptisms and burials which are kept by ministers of religion in all parts of the country, it is doubtful how far they can be relied on for giving accurately the requisite particulars as to births and deaths, and most of them would, moreover, be inadmissible in evidence.

5. This being the state of the law, and considering the importance of the subject generally, and the memorials above referred to, and having regard to the fact that references are frequently made to the Secretary of State for India and to the Government of India for proof of age or of deaths in connection with questions involving large individual interests, such as rights to property, the Government of India is of opinion that it is expedient to enact a permissive law under which full facilities for registering births and deaths should be given to persons valuing unimpeachable evidence of these events.

6. As to the second object of the Bill, it is obvious that no system of registration of births and deaths can be complete or of practical value unless it provides for the establishment, at certain centres, of general offices where the information registered at the various local offices shall be collected and so arranged as to be readily available for public reference.

7. In this connection, the attention of the Government of India has been directed to the unsatisfactory nature of the system of registration of marriages under the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and Act III of 1872.

Documentary evidence of all marriages under the former Act is, by the provisions of the Act or the orders thereunder, sent to the Secretary to the Local Government, who is also empowered to grant certified copies which are receivable in evidence. It would seem, therefore, at first sight, that nothing further was required. But, as a matter of fact, not only are no arrangements made for maintaining an index to the marriages the records of which are retained in the local Secretariat, but the greater portion of the marriage records which are received in the local Secretariat have, under section 81 of the Act and the orders in force, to be sent on in original to the Government of India in the Home Department for transmission to the Secretary of State; so that the greater number of the marriage records which reach the local Secretariat do not remain there for purposes of reference, and such as do remain are, owing to the absence of an index, practically valueless.

As to Act III of 1872, this Act makes no provision for the marriages solemnized under it being reported to any central authority. The marriage-certificate books for which it provides are retained by the Registrar, who is not even required to index them. Their value as records of the marriages to which they refer is accordingly much diminished.

8. The Government of India have, therefore, availed themselves of the opportunity of the proposed legislation for the registration of births and deaths to remove these defects in the marriage-registration law, by providing for general registry offices for keeping registers, not only of the births and deaths which may be registered under the proposed law, but also of marriages which may be registered under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872.

9. The present Bill extends (section 2) to the whole of British India, and, so far as regards subjects of Her Majesty, to the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty.

10. As there seems to be no way of utilizing for the special purposes in view the compulsory system of registration of births and deaths which is prescribed by the local laws referred to in paragraph 3 above, or of separating the registration of the limited classes affected by the Bill from that of the general population which is required under those laws, it has been found necessary to save the laws providing for the registration of births and deaths within particular local areas at present in force or which may hereafter be passed; and this is done by section 4. The result of this section will, therefore, be that the persons to whom the provisions of the Bill relating to the registration of births and deaths are applicable will be bound, as heretofore, to satisfy the statistical requirements of such local Acts, and will be at liberty to re-register births and deaths under the Bill for evidential purposes.

11. Chapter II provides (section 5) for the establishment by the Local Governments of general registry offices of births, deaths and marriages, and the appointment of Registrars General of Births, Deaths and Marriages. By section 6 indexes are to be kept at the general registry offices of all the certified copies of registers which may be sent to them under the Bill or under Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872. These indexes (section 7) are to be open to public inspection, and copies of the entries in the certified copies of the registers to which they relate are to be given to all persons applying for them; and such copies are (section 8) to be admissible in evidence. By section 9 the Registrar General is given the superintendence of the Registrars of Births and Deaths.

12. Chapter III deals with the subject of registration of births and deaths. Section 10 defines the persons whose births and deaths are registrable as, in British India, the members of every race, sect or tribe to which the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applies and in respect of which an order under section 332 of that Act is not for the time being in force, and all persons professing the Christian religion, and in Native States all like persons who are British subjects. These provisions of the Bill will therefore, generally speaking, apply to East Indians, Jews, Armenians and Pársís as well as to Europeans and Native Christians. These are believed to be the only classes of persons in the country who are likely to avail themselves of the benefits of a law of this nature.

13. The chapter then provides for a registration establishment, empowering (sections 11 and 12) the Local Government in British India and the Governor General in Council in Native States to appoint either by name or by virtue of their office fit persons to be Registrars of Births and Deaths for definite local areas. It is proposed to appoint under the general powers given by these sections persons authorized or licensed to perform marriages under either Act III of 1872 or the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, and, in order to provide for the receipt of notices from persons who may prefer not to resort to the Marriage Registrars, other suitable persons, one of whom it is intended should be appointed for each local area for which a person who is also a Marriage Registrar is appointed. It is to the latter class of Registrars that sections 13 and 14, which lay down certain provisions as to the office of such Registrars, and for the filling up temporary vacancies in the office of such Registrars, are intended to apply. Section 15 provides for the supply of register books and the preservation of records.

14. The chapter next treats of the mode of registration. It imposes (section 16) a duty on every Registrar of Births and Deaths to make an entry in his register book of all births and deaths of which notice may be given to him within the prescribed time and in the prescribed mode by a person authorized to give him such notice. It then (sections 17 and 18) specifies the persons who shall be authorized to give notice of births and deaths respectively.

Section 19 provides that the entry of the birth or death is to be signed by the person giving notice, and declares that until it is so signed the birth or death shall not be deemed to be registered. By section 20 every Registrar of Births and Deaths is required to give on application made at the time of registering any birth or death by the person giving notice of the same, and on payment by him of the prescribed fee, a certificate of having registered the birth or death.

Section 21 provides for the sending by every Registrar of Births and Deaths at prescribed intervals to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages of certified copies of all entries in his register books. In the case of Registrars in British India, the copies are to be sent to the Registrar General within whose jurisdiction the local areas for which the Registrar is appointed is situate, an exception being made in the case of Registrars who are clergymen of the Churches of England, Rome and Scotland, who may send them to their ecclesiastical superiors to be forwarded by them to the Registrar General. In the case of Registrars in Native States, the copies are to be sent to such one of the Registrars General as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf. Section 22 provides for searches, and grant of copies of entries in register books which shall be admissible in evidence.

15. Sections 23 and 24 prescribe penalties of imprisonment which may extend to three years and fine for wilfully giving false information to a Registrar of Births and Deaths, and of fine, which may extend to five hundred rupees, for Registrars of Births and Deaths omitting to enter births or deaths in the register or losing or injuring register books.

16. Lastly, section 25 prescribes the procedure by which errors in the form or substance of any entry in a register book of births and deaths may be corrected.

17. Chapter IV (sections 26 and 27) makes the amendments in Act III of 1872 and the Indian Christian Marriage Act, 1872, which are necessary in order to make the provisions of these Acts fit in with the scheme of the Bill, under which certified copies of entries in the registers kept under these Acts are in future to be sent to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages.

18. Chapter V deals with the last of the three subjects referred to in the first paragraph of this Statement. As noted above, registers of births or baptisms and deaths or burials are at present kept in all parts of the country by ministers of religion. Registers of marriages were also similarly kept before the marriage-registration law came into force. Most of these registers are, as the law now stands, inadmissible in evidence, and possibly many of them should never be admitted in evidence owing to the irregular manner in which they have been compiled. At the same time, others are probably fit for admission as public registers. Under these circumstances, it seems advisable to follow the analogy of what was done in England (see 3 & 4 Vic., c. 92) and provide a procedure under which such of these registers as are worthy of recognition may be validated and certified copies of entries made in them declared admissible in evidence. This is accordingly done by Chapter V.

19. That chapter first (section 28) declares that any person having custody of any such records may, within one year from the date on which the Bill comes into force, send them to the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for the territories within which the person resides, or, if he resides in a Native State, to such one of those Registrars General as the Governor General in Council, by notification, directs. It then (section 29) provides for the appointment by the Governor General in Council of Commissioners to examine the registers so sent to the various Registrars General, and prescribes (section 30) the duties of the Commissioners, which are to inquire into the state, custody and authenticity of every register submitted to them, and to prepare lists of all such registers or portions of registers as they find to be accurate and faithful, and to certify upon some part of every book or volume containing any such register or portion of a register as is referred to in any such list that it is one of the registers referred to in the list. Section 31 permits, on payment of a fee, searches to be made of the lists so prepared, and provides for the grant of certified copies of the entries in the registers which shall be admissible in evidence.

20. Finally, Chapter VI (sections 32 and 33) empowers the Governor General in Council to make rules with regard to certain matters connected with the purposes of the Act, and prescribes the usual procedure for the making and publication of such rules.

From Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 1147—VII-279-19, dated 5th November, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 11].
From Bábú Charu Chandra Mookerjee, dated 2nd November, 1884 [Paper No 12].
Extract, paragraph III, from Proceedings of the Meerut Association, No. 13, dated 16th November, 1884 [Paper No. 13].
From Under-Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No 1326—VII-277-23, dated 13th December, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 14].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Bengal, No. 3001 J., dated 19th December, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 15].
From Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 1375—VII-277-26, dated 23rd December, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 16].
Memorandum by Bábú Gridhar Dás, Honorary Magistrate, and Vice-Chairman, Municipal Fund, and Member of the District Board, Zila Etawah, No. 1, dated 20th December, 1884 [Paper No. 17].
From the Hon'ble Mr. Justice S. Mahmúd, Allahabad, dated 13th January, 1885 [Paper No. 18].

2. It is generally admitted that the provisions of section 1 (a) of the Bill will amend the Act satisfactorily, but there are differences of opinion as to clause (b) of that section. The Government of Bombay, Mr. Justice West and others are strongly in favour of making the exemption from the provisions of section 41 of the Act local and not personal. It has also been urged, especially by Mr. Justice Mahmúd, that power should not be given to exempt from the provisions of section 41. Mr. Mahmúd says, "As I understand the law, the provisions of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act are nothing more or less than the repetition of the rule of natural equity which belongs to almost every department of law connected with the dealings of one human being with another. The rule of equitable estoppel is so important that, irrespective of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, I, speaking for my own part, would, regardless of the nationality of parties, apply it to all transactions which came before me and which furnished circumstances for its application."

3. After considering the matter we are of opinion that, if section 41 of the Act contains, as we believe it does, a rule of equity which our Courts should follow, the section should be in force wherever the Act is in force. If that section were excluded from the Act, the Courts would probably, on general principles of equity, follow the rule which it contains. We think, therefore, that it is unnecessary to give any power to exempt from the provisions of section 41, and have struck out clause (b), section 1 of the Bill.

4. With regard to some questions raised as to the effect of section 3 of the Bill, we may mention that the Transfer of Property Act in requiring that certain transfers shall be made by a registered instrument does not conflict with the Indian Registration Act. That Act requires that certain documents shall be registered in order to render them capable of affecting certain property and admissible in evidence of any transaction affecting such property. The Transfer of Property Act, on the other hand, provides that certain transfers can only be effected by a registered instrument.

5. With reference to section 4 of the Bill, it has been suggested that section 69 of the Act should be restored to the form proposed by the Indian Law Commission. The question whether a power of sale should be valid in all cases where the property secured by the mortgage was of a certain value was fully discussed at the time the Act was passed. It was then decided that the valuation test should not be adopted, and we consider that it is inexpedient to re-open the question now.

6. Objections have been raised relating to the chapter on leases of immoveable property. These are sufficiently met by section 117 of the Act, which exempts leases for agricultural purposes from the provisions of the chapter.

7. We have taken the opportunity of adding to section 6 of the Act a clause (i) containing a proviso like that of sub-section (j), section 108. If the chapter on leases does not apply to leases for agricultural purposes, then the proviso to sub-section (j) will not be in force. It might therefore happen that an untransferable right of occupancy, the farm of an estate in respect of which default had been made in paying revenue or the lease of an estate under the Court of Wards might be held to be transferable by virtue of the general power of transfer conferred by section 6.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1875, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 30th January, 1885 :—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Indian Ports Act, 1875, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

Endorsement by Officiating Under-Secretary to Government, Bengal, No. 111, dated 14th January, 1885, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].

2. At the suggestion of the Government of Madras we have inserted in the Bill a section (1) amending section 42 of the Act. That section directs that the orders of a Local Government made in pursuance of the Act shall be, in addition to other modes of publication, fixed up in the custom-house, if any, of every port subject to this Act. A difficulty is experienced in carrying out this direction, and we consider that it will be sufficient to provide that the order shall be fixed up in some conspicuous place in the office of the Conservator, and at the custom-house, if any, of every port to which the order relates.

3. We have amended section 1 of the Bill (now section 2) so as to provide for cases where the service of a person entitled to pension has been partly at the port and partly elsewhere.

4. At the request of the Bombay Government we have provided in section 3 of the Bill that money may be spent from the Port Fund Account for the support of hospitals for seamen or for providing sanitary superintendence and medical aid for the shipping and seamen belonging to ships in the ports.

5. We have altered the rate of port-dues prescribed in the first schedule of the Act for the Cuttack ports, as the Government of Bengal finds that the present rate does not yield an income sufficient to meet the necessary expenses of the ports.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd January, 1885 :—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our report.

From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 393, dated 3rd April, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 1].

From Chief Secretary to Government, Madras, No. 1579, dated 26th June, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 9].
From Officiating Secretary to Chief Commissioner, British Burma, No. 106—7L., dated 4th July, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 10]
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Punjab, No. 661, dated 23rd July, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 11].
From Officiating Registrar, High Court, Calcutta, No. 1872, dated 30th July, 1884 [Paper No. 12].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Bengal, No. 1339T.—R., dated 31st July, 1884 [Paper No. 13].

2 With regard to lost bills it has been pointed out that the Act provides no machinery whereby the owner of a lost bill or note can get a duplicate from the drawer or maker. We think that this omission should be supplied, and have accordingly inserted in the Bill a section (2) taken from section 69 of the English Statute. Actions on lost bills are sufficiently provided for by section 61 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

3. With reference to the remarks forwarded by the Government of Madras, we think that clause (a), section 101 of the Act, does seem to imply that to render a protest valid the demand must be made by the notary public in person. If the law be so understood, it will cause inconvenience, and to remove all doubts we consider that the section should be amended so that it may be clear that a demand may be made by a notary public's clerk in person. The Act might also, we think, be still further amended so as to afford greater facilities for presenting bills and demanding acceptance or payment. The English Act [section 41 (1) (c) and section 45 (8)] provides that a bill is duly presented for acceptance or payment when presented through the post office in cases where such presentment is authorised by agreement or usage. We think that it is desirable to extend to this country similar facilities for presenting bills, but we consider that when presentment through the post office is allowed it should be made by means of a registered letter. We have accordingly, in section 3 of the Bill, made additions to the Act which will validate a presentment through the post office by means of a registered letter when such a presentment is authorised by agreement or usage We have also, in section 4 of the Bill, added to section 101 a clause to the effect that the demand mentioned in clause (c) may be made by the notary public in person or by his clerk in person or, where authorised by agreement or usage, by a registered letter.

4. It has been pointed out that while section 108 implies that acceptance for honour may take place when a bill has been noted or protested, the definition of "acceptor for honour" (section 7) shows that an acceptance for honour is made after a bill is protested. It might be held therefore that there could be no acceptance for honour until a bill had been protested as well as noted. To meet this difficulty we have inserted in the Bill a section (6) taken from section 93 of the English Statute, and have slightly amended the definition in section 7 of the Act so as to make it agree with section 108.

5. The Chambers of Commerce of Bombay and Rangoon have suggested an amendment of section 113 of the Act which would have the effect of rendering a declaration before a notary public unnecessary in the case of a payment for honour. We have considered this suggestion and we think that some formality is desirable. We are of opinion that it would not be safe to relax these formalities regarding payments for honour further than they are relaxed by English law.

6. It has also been suggested that power should be taken to make rules for the control of those notaries public who have not been appointed under the Act. We think that it is not desirable to make rules for the control of notaries not appointed by the Government of India.

7. We have been asked to make a provision for cases in which the services of a notary public are not available, by adopting section 94 of the English Act which provides that in such cases a protest may be made by means of a certificate signed by a householder or substantial resident. Having regard to the power given to Government of appointing notaries public, the number of appointments that have been made and the possible abuses that might arise if a householder or substantial resident were substituted for a notary, we think that it would be unwise to adopt this provision of the Statute.

8. It is said that the proposed amendment of section 113 will raise doubts whether the words "acceptor," "acceptor for honour," "payee" and "drawee" are intended to include an agent of an acceptor, payee or drawee. We think that section 27 of the Act, which provides that a person may bind himself by a duly authorized agent, will answer all questions of this nature that may arise.

9. The Chief Commissioner, British Burma, suggests that the Local Government should be authorized to appoint notaries public. This question has already been considered, and we would not re-open it.

10. With regard to the question whether section 45 of the Contract Act unduly limits the negotiation of bills, we are not disposed to think that it does. We are not aware that that section has given rise to any difficulties in this respect, and the saving in the Contract Act of all usages or customs of trade will probably meet such difficulties if they do arise. If any amendment in this respect is necessary, it should take the form of an amendment of section 45 in the Contract Act, as such an amendment would perhaps be required for other cases besides those under the Negotiable Instruments Act.

KANUNGOES AND PATWARIS.

The Hon. Mr. MacDonnell said:—I have the honour to move for leave to introduce a Bill for the amendment of the law relating to Kanungoes and Patwaris in the provinces under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

In asking for leave to introduce this Bill, I would remind Honourable Members of the remarks which you, Sir, made in connection with this subject on the occasion of our first meeting this session. You stated that one of the most salutary provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill is that one which contemplates a cadastral survey and record of rights wherever the relations between landlord and tenant are strained or unsatisfactory. Dwelling on the difficulties which your Government experiences in ascertaining even the simplest agricultural facts, you said—and in saying it you but expressed the opinion of all competent judges on this question—that in the ascertainment and proper registration of the various rights and interests in the soil lay the true remedy for most of those agrarian troubles which now beset the path of the administrator in Bengal.

But to ascertain facts and to record them is but the initial step in a policy of agricultural and administrative reform in Bengal. Circumstances alter from time to time, and a record true to-day may be inaccurate to-morrow, if no provision be made for a competent and trustworthy agency for its maintenance up to date. You have informed the Council that plans are now being matured with the consent of the Secretary of State for a survey and record of rights in Behar as an experimental measure, but if we carry these plans into effect, yet have no agency to maintain that record in harmony with the march of events, we shall have laboured in vain. We work for the future, not for the present only, and we therefore deem it essential to establish a competent agency to maintain the record in a correct and useful condition. Granting the necessity in Bengal for a record of facts,—and I presume no one will deny the necessity,—the rest follows as a matter of course.

Sir, during the discussions on the Tenancy Bill, which have occupied so much of the public attention, no charge has been more frequently levelled against the supporters of that measure than the charge of needless innovation. I am not concerned on the present occasion with defending the policy of the Bengal Tenancy Bill; I am content to leave that policy to the verdict of history, confident that history will, in the fulness of time, approve it, as instinct with the spirit of true conservatism which prunes the plant to secure for it a fuller growth. But if there have been even a semblance of reason for the charge of needless innovation made against the Government in connection with the Tenancy Bill, there is surely none for such a charge in connection with the Bill which I am to lay before this Council. In regard to it, at all events, we may claim from our opponents the respect which may be due to those who follow authority and who venerate ancient custom. For, as I proceed to show, the measure I now propose is built on lines of immemorial antiquity, and is vindicated by the results of a century's experience. In order to prove this, I must ask the Council to bear with me, while, at much risk of being tedious, I explain the origin of the system of patwaris and kanungoes, and the causes which have brought that system to its present most unsatisfactory condition.

In Bengal, Sir, from the earliest historic times, the land has been the principal source of public revenue as well as of private wealth, and the regulation of matters connected with the land has therefore always been a chief object of attention with the ruling power. From Hindu times, we possess but little information as to the policy practically adopted in reference to land revenue administration, or as to the effects of that policy. We know indeed from the Institutes of Manu that the Hindu rulers of the country claimed a certain proportion of the produce of the land, but we have no reliable means of knowing how the rights of Government were enforced, or what agency was employed to enforce them. There are good reasons for believing that the village patwari played an important part in the Hindu system of land revenue administration, and that, when the Mahomedan system was established, the conquerors did not create the office of patwari, but finding it in existence, skilfully turned it to use.

The earliest authentic information which we possess on the Mahomedan system is contained in the Institutes of Timur, but it was not until Sher Shah came to power in 1540, a century and a half after Timur had abandoned India, that systematic efforts were made to regulate the assessment and collection of land revenue. Sher Shah, however, did not live to carry his plans into effect, and it thus remained for the renowned Emperor Akbar to establish, through the agency of his great Minister, the Hindu Rajah Todar Mull, an effective system of land revenue administration. On the details of that system we have sufficient authentic information in the Ain-i-Akbari, but for my present purpose it is unnecessary that I should discuss them further than in relation to the institution of kanungoes and patwaris.

Thus limiting my consideration of the question, I may say that the first step taken by Akbar's Government towards effecting an accurate assessment of the land revenue was a measurement of the land and a classification of the soil. The next step was to ascertain the average produce of each bigha of land and to fix the proportion payable to Government. The third step was to lay down rules under which the Government share of the produce might be commuted for a money payment. By this procedure the contribution of each ryot of the soil was proportioned to his capacity to pay; in other words, the rates at which he paid were adjusted to the productiveness of the soil. These rates were called the pergunnah rates, and having regard to the principles on which they were fixed, it is no wonder that throughout the length and breadth of the land the people clung to them tenaciously. They still cling to their memory, though through circumstances which I need not now describe, what was a boon to the people has become a bane. What was their shield against unjust exactions has been converted into a formidable weapon by which unjust exactions are enforced.

So much for the assessment of the revenue: I will now say a few words regarding its collection under the Mahomedan system. The revenue was actually collected by officials who were the prototypes, and doubtless in some few cases the progenitors, of the zemindars of to-day. But to secure the interests of Government, it was obviously essential that the dealings of those tax-collectors and their subordinate agents or gomastas with the actual cultivators should be subjected to some check. Accordingly, in order to obtain and preserve the accounts necessary to exercise such a check, the system of patwaris was remodelled, and the system of kanungoes established.

As originally constituted, the kanungo or "expounder of laws" was an agent of the Imperial Government associated with the tax-collector or zemindar for the purpose of checking and supervising the zemindar's proceedings in regard to the collection of the public revenues. The patwari was the kanungo's subordinate, just as the village gomasta was the zemindar's, and he bore to the gomasta the same relation which the kanungo bore to the zemindar. Thus there was created a double check on the proceedings of the zemindar, while there was also established an office of record and account to which the cultivators could appeal in defence of their rights and privileges.

The kanungo and patwari were therefore, under Akbar's system, entirely unconnected with the actual collection of the revenue. Their business was to see that no more than the due amount was taken from the people by the zemindar and his agent, the village gomasta; that the fact of payment was duly recorded; and that other matters connected with the agricultural well-being of the community were duly attended to. In the language of the Fifth Report, "the kanungo was the confidential agent of Government, the depository and promulgator of the established regulations, whose office was intended as a check on the conduct (in financial transactions) of all the other village officials. Under the superintendence of the kanungo, or of one of his appointed agents, was placed a certain number of adjacent villages, the accounts of which, as kept by the patwaris, were constantly open to his inspection, and the transactions in which, with regard to the occupancy of land and the distinction of boundaries, came regularly under his cognizance in a form that enabled him at any time, when called upon, to report to the Government the quantity of land under cultivation, the nature of the produce, the amount of rent paid, and generally the disposal of the produce. To his office, moreover, reference might be had to determine contested boundaries, the use of rivers or reservoirs for irrigation, and generally in all disputes concerning permanent property or local usage within the limits of his official range."

Toder Mull's settlement, on the above principles of the Soubah of Bengal, was introduced about the year 1582 A.D., and lasted without material alteration for more than a century. At the end of that period, however, the Mogul Empire had passed its zenith, its hold over the outlying provinces had become relaxed and weak, and the system was introduced of farming the revenue to the highest bidder—a system which, in Eastern countries at least, has always had pernicious results. This state of things soon became incompatible with the maintenance of a system of minute local supervision, and the farmers of the revenue set at nought the inspection of the kanungo, who thus lost his status and power. In fine, the system of village accounts, which had worked efficiently under the strong rule of Akbar and his great successors, had fallen into decay before the commencement of British rule.

It is generally known, Sir, that although the victories of Clive made the British power paramount in Bengal in 1757, it was not until 1772 that the East India Company assumed the Dewani, or formal administration of the province. Having added the semblance to the substance of sovereignty, one of the Governor-General's first acts was to resolve his Council into a Committee with the object of prescribing certain regulations for the conduct of business and the government of the country. In the proceedings of this Committee, under date 29th August 1772, occurs the earliest mention of the kanungo's office which I have been able to discover in the records of our Government. "The Committee," so runs the passage, "are of opinion that the utility of the kanungo's office is almost totally suppressed from the change which has taken place in the revenue system. Out of tenderness, however, for the ancient form of Government, and deference to the grants which they hold for their office from the Court of Delhi, the Committee think the head kanungoes may be continued, either receiving their present rusooms, or whatever may be considered as an adequate pension, but that all the dues allotted for the support of their officers in the districts may be attached, and these officers enrolled among the monthly servants of each Collector's cutcherry. Thus the Government will still reap the benefit of their knowledge and experience in carrying on the business, whilst a considerable saving will be produced from the resumption of the dues they have hitherto received." This, as I have said, is the earliest reference that I can find to the status of the kanungoes at the time of the assumption of the Dewani by the East India Company. The Company had a few months previously (in May 1772) arranged to let zemindaries throughout the country in farm to the highest bidders with a view to ascertaining what their real assets were, preparatory to a more permanent arrangement. Under a farming system, as I have already said, a knowledge of agricultural details was deemed of slight importance. Hence the kanungoes were at a discount and of as little use to the Company as they were under similar circumstances to the Emperors of Delhi.

The results of letting estates in farm were not, however, satisfactory; and it was deemed expedient to collect additional information by more direct methods as to the real produce and value of the land. A Commission was therefore appointed for the purpose, with the result that in the new settlements made in 1777 the farming system was abandoned, a preference was given to the zemindars, and a settlement made with them, when they agreed to the terms offered. But with the abandonment of the farming system the necessity for agricultural statistics again became apparent, and therefore in February 20th, 1781, by an order of Council, "kanungoes were reinstated in the complete charge and possession of all the functions and powers which constitutionally appertain to the office." During the enquiries made by the Commission to which I have just alluded, the existence and status of patwaris had been already recognized; so that in 1781, a few years before the completion of the decennial settlement, the system of patwaris and kanungoes was formally re-established in Bengal.

The next landmark in the history of the question is the Act 24, Geo. III, Ch. XXV, known as the "Regulating Act." In forwarding this Statute to India, the Court of Directors expressed their opinion that it would be most in accordance with the spirit of the Act to fix a permanent revenue on a review of the collections of former years. They added that the settlement should in every practicable instance be made with the zemindars, rules being at the same time made for maintaining the rights of other classes according to the usages of the country. Lord Cornwallis was the bearer of these instructions; and on his assumption of office, enquiries were at once set on foot preparatory to the decennial settlement, which was afterwards made permanent. Among other matters the kanungo question was dealt with, and, as may be inferred from appendix III to the Fifth Report, it was proposed to draw up specific rules for the establishment of kanungoes. The proposal, however, never came to anything, and as, under the permanent settlement, a detailed knowledge of agricultural statistics was no longer necessary to the collection of the revenue, the kanungo's office was abolished in July 5th, 1793, as unnecessary and expensive.

No such fate, however, overtook the patwari. Under the original rules for the decennial settlement, every proprietor was bound to establish a patwari in each village of his estate to keep the ryots' accounts, and when these rules were re-enacted in Regulation VIII, 1793, special provisions regarding patwaris were inserted. It is true that, owing to the limitation of the Government demand, patwaris' accounts were no longer needed for revenue assessment and settlement purposes, but patwaris' accounts were necessary to facilitate the decision of suits in courts of justice between landlord and tenant, and to enable the Collectors to divide estates under the partition laws, without loss to individuals or to Government. Rules were accordingly framed in section 62, Regulation VIII, 1793, and proprietors laid under an obligation to appoint patwaris. This obligation remained, however, honoured more in the breach than in the observance.

The zemindars' inaction did not pass without remonstrance from the revenue officers, for we find from certain papers described as the Revenue Selections, No. 288, that they soon felt the want of the detailed information which the patwaris and kanungoes' accounts used to furnish. The remonstrances had some effect, and Regulation VII, 1799, section 23, directs Collectors to ascertain whether patwaris had been universally appointed, and if not, to appoint them. The injunctions of 1799 were followed up by Regulation 29 of 1803 prescribing in detail the procedure for the appointment of patwaris, and the accounts which they were to furnish. It was, however, all to no purpose. The zemindars met the orders of Government with passive resistance in most cases; while, where patwaris were appointed, the position of zemindari servants, into which they soon sank, nullified the value of their accounts as public records.

At the Permanent Settlement, patwaris (to use Mr. Shore's words) "whether they received their nomination from the kanungoes or from the zemindars, or from any public officers, were servants of the State, and responsible to it for their trusts." In that light they had ever been considered by every native Government; they had formed a necessary link in the chain of public functionaries belonging to the Revenue Department. The Court of Directors therefore recognizing, in 1815, the utility of the patwaris' services for the protection and security of public as well as of private rights, resolved that their position should be improved, and that a reversion should be made to the state of things which prevailed before Lord Cornwallis' legislation. Accordingly, in the Government letter of 12th August 1815, the Board of Commissioners were directed to give effect to the order of the Court of Directors. "It is the wish of Government," sa, s this letter, "that you should not confine yourselves on the present occasion solely to the establishment of such rules as may be necessary to render the patwaris more immediately the officers of Government, but that, taking the most comprehensive view possible of the subject, you should submit a well digested plan for the constitution of those offices and likewise of the pergunnah kanungoes in the manner best calculated to promote the best interests of Government and of the community." "It will," continues Mr. Secretary Butterworth Bayley, "be of course understood from the preceding remarks that the principal objects to be accomplished are the means of defining the rights of the peasantry and of adjusting with facility such differences as may arise between landlord and tenant." Such, I may add, are some of the objects which the Bengal Government has now in view in introducing this Bill. The objects of its policy are those of Lord Moira's Government, with this addition, that we do not rely on the patwari for a definition of ryots' rights, but for their maintenance when defined by competent authority.

The policy of the Court of Directors and of the Government of the day was welcomed by the Board of Revenue, and the minutes recorded by the Acting President of the Board, Mr. Roche, as well as by that very distinguished revenue authority, Mr. Henry Colebrooke, are of extreme value, not only on the question now before the Council, but on the wider question of the relations of landlord and tenant as established by the Permanent Settlement. The minute of Mr. Colebrooke is very important, but too long for quotation. Honourable Members who desire to consult it will find it at page 378 of the Revenue Selections, volume I.

Thus there was no doubt in the minds of the Government and its revenue advisers in 1815 as to the expediency of the proposed revival of the system of village accounts, but the Judges of the Sudder Dewani Adaulut took a different view on the subject. The Sudder Adaulut was oppressed by the idea that the cost of a system of village Accountants and Registrars would be prohibitive, while the advantages of the system would be neutralized, to quote the Court's words, "by the interest and probable disposition of the landholders to employ other agents in keeping their village accounts and to conceal as much as possible their actual receipts from public officers, whom they will naturally view as checks upon their conduct and as protectors of their under-tenants." There were other objections of a similar nature urged, but the objections of the Sudder Adaulut in my opinion resolve themselves into the two heads of financial difficulties and the opposition to be encountered from the zemindars.

The objection of the Sudder Adaulut had weight with the Government of Lord Hastings in 1817, and there was much to justify the conclusion that a system of village accounts, which would wholly rely for its information on materials derived from the zemindars alone, would be altogether valueless as an independent record of agricultural facts. To be of value, such a system should be based on information derived from sources whose impartiality could not be impugned; from sources independent of the interests of either party; such sources, for instance, as our proposed survey and record of rights will give us. I am therefore free to admit that, while the objects aimed at by the Government of 1815 were laudable and necessary, the defect dwelt upon by the Sudder Adaulut was fatal. A survey, as was well pointed out by Mr. Sisson, Magistrate of Rungpore, in his remarkable report of 2nd April 1815, No. 8393, was essential to the re-establishment of order and the protection of the interests of the peasantry. But a survey did not form part of the Government scheme in 1815. It was too expensive, and some hope was still reposed in the possibility of amicable arrangements being come to between zemindar and ryot. As a survey was not thought of by the Government, the Sudder Adaulut's objections to the patwari system were practical objections, which convinced the Government of the day that a general measure of reorganisation on the lines proposed was inadvisable. The result was, as far as concerns the patwari question, the compromise embodied in Regulation XII of 1817, and as far as concerns the kanungo question, the enactment of Regulation I of 1819.

The compromise resulted in no practical good; for the improvements effected by it were altogether incommensurate with the object in view. In fact, where it has not been entirely ignored, I am ready to admit that Regulation XII, 1817, has only had the result of causing inconvenience to the zemindar without benefiting to any material degree the ryot or the Government. Under it the patwari is regarded as a Government servant appointed by the Collector on the nomination of the zemindar, and subject to the Collector's orders in regard to the production of his accounts. As the patwari, however, is paid by the zemindar, or by the ryots with the zemindar's approval, it will be readily understood that where the patwari and landlord have not quarrelled, the former is practically the latter's servant; while where they have quarrelled, the patwari loses not only his occupation, but practically his emoluments too. In fact, wherever the patwari is not the zemindar's servant he was a sinecure. It is true that the Regulation provides for the enforcement by the Collector of the patwari's dues; but it does not compel the zemindar to allow the patwari access to the village accounts. In my experience as District Collector, I have known patwaris practically shorn of emoluments and duties of their office by the will of the zemindars, yet maintained in nominal office by the orders of the Collector. It may be that we of to-day are wiser than our predecessors, but whether we are wiser or less wise, I find it difficult to imagine experienced men in 1817 satisfied with Regulation XII, or failing to perceive that it was from its very essence fore-doomed to failure. For the essence of Regulation XII, 1817, is an attempt to reconcile irreconcilable interests. It strove to make a man serve two masters whose interests were conflicting, and it placed it within the power of one master to checkmate the other. Of the many provisions in our old Regulations conceived in a spirit of trustfulness in the self-denial of a class, or in people's abnegation of their own pecuniary interests, none, in my opinion, surpasses Regulation XII for fatuity of conception or for sterility of results.

Heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time,

But although the Government of 1817 shrank from grappling with the patwari question in the only one effective method,—a method which possibly might have involved the consideration of ryots' rights under the common law of India, which was not then so obscured as it has since become,—they still adhered to the principle that the establishment of a system of village accounts was most desirable. Regulation XII of 1817 recognized that principle in Bengal and Cuttack, though in an inadequate, and, as the event proved, in an utterly ineffectual manner, and it was followed by Regulation I of 1819, which, while it extended the operation of Regulation XII to the entire province, also re-established the system of kanungoes. With Regulation I of 1819, as far as it dealt with the kanungo question, I have no fault to find. But as the most perfect machine is useless without the raw produce to feed its action, so the kanungo system for all practical purposes of its creation was useless without the materials which it was the patwaris' proper function to supply. After seven years of struggle, of attempts to make bricks without straw, the Board of Revenue reported thus:—"After careful consideration of the subject in all its lights and bearings, we beg to submit an opinion for your Lordship's consideration that the obstacles opposed by the zemindars and lakhirajdars to the kanungo system have hitherto rendered the records of the kanungoe's office useless as matter of judicial reference; that instead of affording information, they appear calculated to mislead those who require it; that the advantages realized from the establishment under its present constitution are by no means commensurate with the expense of keeping it up; and that until means are devised of ensuring the authenticity of the documents furnished, whether they relate to accounts, mensuration, or ryotwari assessments, the office of kanungo will mislead instead of giving any useful information."

In these last words lies the whole secret of the failure, which during half a century of more or less continuous effort had pursued all endeavours to re-construct the patwari system on the ancient constitutional lines. I have seen it stated that ill success has attended all these efforts at improving the patwari system because you cannot put new wine into old bottles. In my opinion, however, that is a very imperfect explanation to offer. The truth is that it was not to the interests of the zemindars that light should be thrown on the relations subsisting between themselves and their ryots. I would not be understood to say that the zemindars objected to publicity because their ways were dark. It is not my wish to say that: but still the fact remains that they did object to any interference as an encroachment on their rights, although the Government, when concluding the Permanent Settlement with them, had carefully reserved the right to interfere. To every attempt to establish an impartial record of facts the zemindars opposed a persistent and successful resistance, and they found a powerful ally in the law which imposed on the patwari a dual allegiance. Within the past few years, however, the relations of zemindars and ryots have undergone an examination more thorough and exhaustive in its character than the proceedings of our Indian Governments have yet exhibited. The lessons which past experience teaches us have been taken to heart by the Bengal Government, and none has been more appreciated than this, that if any good is to be got out of the ancient system of village accounts, the patwari must be made a Government servant. He must rely for his information on the unquestionable basis which will be furnished by a survey and record of rights. Wherever a survey and record of rights can be effected, there it will be not only possible but absolutely essential to remodel and revive the patwari system, but under few other circumstances can new life be instilled into its dry bones.

This Council will perhaps not desire that I should pursue the history of this question at much greater length. They will find it given in sufficient detail in an extract from Mr. McNeile's memorandum on the revenue administration of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, which forms one of the papers to be presented to Council. Briefly, I may say that the Government of 1837 was satisfied of the uselessness of maintaining an expensive staff of kanungoes for compiling accounts which, when not worthless, were mischievous. The kanungo system accordingly disappeared, and has not since been revived, for, as Honourable gentlemen know, the kanungoes of Sir George Campbell's subordinate executive service scheme had nothing in common with the kanungoes of the regulation but the name. The disappearance of the kanungoes, however, did not affect the patwaris, who were supposed to be in existence everywhere; and on the abandonment of the kanungo system, an effort was made to turn the patwaris to greater account. But this effort only served to bring to light the fact that in many districts of Bengal the patwari too had disappeared, his place being taken by the zemindari bailiff or gomasta; while if in other districts patwaris were still found, they had either sunk into the position of zemindars' servants, or the task of turning their records to any use was altogether hopeless. Impressed with the hopelessness of the task, the Board of Revenue recommended the abandonment of the attempt, and even the repeal of Regulation XII of 1817. This, however, was not done; and the question remained in abeyance till times within the memory of Honourable Members now present. The Commissioner of Patna broached the subject in 1863, and was promptly told to let it rest. It was not till the administration of Sir George Campbell, to whom administrative reform in Bengal owes so much, that the enquiries and consultations were begun which the papers before the Council exhibit, and which find their fitting outcome in the measure I have now to propose.

I have thus, at, I fear, wearisome length, traced the history of this measure. I have shown that in the earliest days of systematized native rule, the kanungo and patwari were essential factors in the revenue administration of the country; that they were essentially Government servants, whose function it was not only to record all agricultural statistics, but also to act as a check on the zemindar and his gomasta; that they gradually lost much of their independence when the exigencies of Mogul finance and the gradual decay of the imperial authority induced recourse to the farming or the thikadari system; that the patwari's status and utility were still acknowledged when the country emerged from the troublous first half of the 18th century into comparative peace under British ascendancy; that efforts were then made to restore the entire system to its pristine vigour and utility, as the custodian of the reciprocal rights of all interested in the soil; that these efforts ceased for a time when the Permanent Settlement was made, and the direct interest of the State in the soil curtailed. Finally, I have shewn how those efforts, when afterwards renewed, proved equally fruitless owing to the opposition encountered, and to the half measures adopted to overcome that opposition. No measure of reform could prove thoroughly successful unless based upon that knowledge of actual facts which a survey and record of rights alone can give, as Mr. Sisson and other experienced men of his day perceived. What we want in these provinces is a knowledge of the elementary facts of rural economy, such as is possessed by every civilized Government; such as in one form or other is possessed by all Governments in India except Bengal; such as is essential to all efficient administration. We want to know the precise area of every holding; the quality of its soil; the status and rights of the ryot who cultivates it; the rent he pays for it; the landlord to whom he pays, and so forth. We have been engaged for ninety years in a futile struggle to obtain this information. Our prolonged defeat has plunged us in an ever-rising sea of agrarian and administrative difficulties, and we now purpose, as far as in us lies, to bring them to an end

I now come to the provisions of the Bill, which are few and simple. They are entirely connected with matters of principle, questions of detail and of practice being left to rules which, following the precedent of the legislation on this subject in the North-Western Provinces, will be framed under the Bill. The leading principle of the Bill is that the patwari and kanungo are to be Government servants, owing no longer a dual allegiance. The second principle is that they are no longer to be an agency for the collection of rents, but an agency exclusively concerned with the record and attestation of accounts. These principles will no doubt alter existing relations between zemindars and patwaris in some parts of the country where patwaris still exist, but they are over a large portion of Behar in accordance with existing customs, and I have I believe shewn them to be historically and constitutionally unassailable. Furthermore, the papers to be now presented to Council will show that they are the only principles we could accept. All who have studied the subject unite in holding that an end should be put to the existing state of things, and all are agreed in thinking that this can be done in only one of two ways,—either by making the patwari a Government servant, or by making him the servant of the zemindar. But to make the patwari the zemindar's servant would be to stultify the proposals of the Tenancy Bill in regard to records of rights For it would be absolute folly to incur a large expenditure on a survey and record of rights, the results of which would be either not maintained at all, or maintained in the interests of one party alone. If, then, a record of rights is to be carried into effect as a measure fraught with good to the country. the organization of an independent agency to maintain the record up to date is essential.

Accepting then the position that the patwari is to be a Government servant, the important question arises, from what source is he to be paid? Here the Bengal Government has no doubt that the cost must fall on those whose interests the patwari directly serves.

There is, however, reason to think that the levy of patwaris' and kanungoes' allowances will impose no additional burden on the land. Indeed, it is probable that the execution of our plans will save both zemindar and ryot from much extortion now practised by the patwari, on both alike. For we cannot now form any clear conception of the extent to which the patwari, in addition to the recognized cess, levies contributions on the ryots on the occurrence of every festival or on the occasion of giving receipts or performing those other duties which it is his function to perform. The sagacious Manager of the estates of the Maharajah of Bettiah has observed in a report submitted to the Commissioner of Patna in 1878. "half the amount of money now expended by zemindars on the present staff of patwaris, if paid into the Government treasuries, would be sufficient to secure the services of efficient men, and would be a saving to the zemindars as enabling them to get rid of men who cannot afford to be honest on the small salaries they now receive."

I have stated that this Bill, if passed into law, will ordinarily be enforced only in districts or tracts in which a survey and record of rights have been carried out. It is proposed to enforce such measures in Behar as an experiment, and in that province we have in the existing customs a means of meeting the expenses necessary under our proposed Bill. For in Behar the people to a considerable extent already pay their patwaris, and there our first efforts must be directed towards regulating and controlling such payments. In Behar a patwari cess, called in the vernacular neg or hisabana, is a customary cess which the ryot pays. It is impossible on the evidence now before Government to say what is the precise amount of that cess. It is only by the enquiries which the record of rights will involve that we shall ascertain it with precision. But it seems that the recognized cess is rarely less than two pice on the rupee of the rent. If this be true, it is possible that the mere regulation of payments which are now made to the patwari by the ryots may enable us to command at once a sum sufficient for the payment of patwaris in the province of Behar Even the kanungo or supervising and controlling establishments may be found to be covered by the sums already fairly recoverable from the ryots as patwaris' allowances. It seems to the Government of Bengal that for the advantages, in the shape of a certain record of facts, which the proposals now made will secure to the ryots, they should, where they now bear the entire burden of patwaris' allowances, continue to bear them, if they do not exceed a reasonable sum. I am disposed to think that one-half an anna in the rupee of rent is, as a general rule, a reasonable sum for ryots to pay. If any additional cost is to be incurred, and it is not yet certain that any will be needed, such additional cost, up to a maximum of one pice on the rupee of rental, should be borne by the landlord. It is to be remembered that one of the grievances of landlords in connection with the realization of rent is the doubt which is often thrown on the amount of rent payable. It will be no slight gain to landlords to have in an official record of rights proof supplied to solve doubts of that description. Finally, the duty of collecting the cess will be the same as in the case of the Road and Public Works Cess.

Such then are the outlines of this scheme of reform which it has been my privilege to lay before this Council. It is, as you have already said, Sir, a corollary to that larger measure of agrarian reform which is approaching completion in the Governor-General's Council. Without this supplementary measure the Tenancy Bill will fail of its full beneficial effect in Behar, where its beneficial action is most needed.

I have now explained to the Council all that it seems necessary to explain on the present occasion. The Bill will be in the hands of Honourable Members this afternoon, and the papers which are voluminous can be laid at once upon the table on Monday. If leave be granted, I shall be prepared to introduce the Bill next Saturday, unless Honourable Members desire a longer interval to peruse the papers. There is no desire on the part of the Government to push the measure hastily through the Council, and though I would deprecate unnecessary delay, I should be the last to deprive all interested in the measure of any reasonable opportunity for considering its provisions.

In conclusion, I would bespeak for this Bill the best attention of this Council. Taken in conjunction with the Tenancy Bill, it will, to some extent, enable us to discharge a debt long owing to the people, especially to the people of Behar. It also possesses other and independent claims upon your attention as an effort to supply that greatest want of our time in connection with the administration of Bengal—a knowledge of facts. Fortified with an accurate knowledge of facts, with a true record of the precise relations between landlord and tenant, and with a competent agency to maintain that record, we may confront with a confidence which none can now feel those problems which the growth of population and its pressure on the soil are daily producing in ever-increasing complexity. And I entertain the hope that in our efforts to place the system of village accountants on a solid basis, we shall carry with us the good wishes and assistance of all reasonable members of the zemindari party. No one knows better than they do what a pestilent member of society the patwari often is, and always may become. He preys upon the tenantry and foments dissension among the landlords His peculations know no bounds, and his conscience no scruple. He does nothing without a fee, and if for a fee he gratifies the ryot, he also for a fee forswears himself to please the zemindar.

When to this I add that the patwari of to-day is, as a rule, as remarkable for intelligence and astuteness as for complete want of moral principle, Honourable Members will understand how desirable it is, apart from the larger questions of agrarian reform to which I have referred, that he should be brought under proper control. It will, I grant, be no easy task to reduce him to order, and to check the evil propensities which a century of mismanagement have engendered. But the task has been successfully accomplished in the permanently-settled districts of the North-Western Provinces, and what has been done on the right bank of the Karamnassa is surely feasible on the left. I believe that on the success of our present scheme largely depends the agricultural future of many millions of people, and impressed with this conviction, I commend to the best attention of the Council the Bill which I now ask leave to introduce.

His Honor the President said:—"I would desire to take the earliest opportunity of explaining to the Council the course which I would propose to take in the event of its assent being given to the introduction of this Bill. The measure is one of very great importance. The measure is one which can scarcely be put aside or postponed, if the intention of a survey and of a preparation of a record of rights in Behar forms finally a part of the Tenancy Bill which is now under the consideration of the Legislative Council of the Government of India. Now, having regard to the importance of our proposals regarding these village fiscal agencies, and the fact that, though an ancient and historical institution, it has, for reasons explained by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, lost much of its vitality and usefulness, I fully recognize that any measure which contemplates the revival and re-establishment of these bodies should receive the most complete examination and the widest publicity. I would wish therefore that if the motion before the Council to-day is carried, and the Bill is introduced at our next meeting and referred to a Select Committee, no further step should be taken during the current session to pass the Bill into law. It may possibly be necessary towards the middle of the year to convene the Council for a further consideration of the Bill then. But whether this be necessary or not, advantage will be taken of the interval to refer the Bill to all district officers in Behar, and to consult the opinion of all public bodies and others who may be interested in the subject. The official papers bearing upon the question will be placed before the Council, and thus all the information which Government possesses will be before them."

The HON. JOY PROKASH LALL said that, as the subject of this Bill was a most important one, and the papers connected with it were said to be voluminous, he hoped that a somewhat longer time than the usual period of one week would be allowed for their consideration.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he proposed to adjourn the Council for a fortnight, and he hoped the time thus allowed would be considered sufficient for the purpose.

The motion was then put and agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 14th February 1884.

REDISTRIBUTION OF TONNAGE AMONG THE MEMBERS OF THE PILOT SERVICE.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT—MARINE.

Calcutta, the 29th January 1885.

RESOLUTION.

The Report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of Special Pilots on the river Hooghly.

In the Resolution of this Government, dated the 19th September 1881, the following scale of tonnage was laid down for the purpose of determining what class of vessel pilots of each grade shall be entitled, under ordinary circumstances, to take charge of in the river Hooghly:—

Mate Pilots up to 800 tons.
Junior Master Pilots 800 to 1,350.
Senior „ „ 800 to 1,700.
Branch „ 1,700 tons and upwards.

It was observed at the same time that the tendency of shipping in the Port of Calcutta appeared to be towards a reduction in the number of vessels and a corresponding increase in their tonnage; and it was added that, should this tendency continue, it might be necessary to make a further redistribution of tonnage among the members of the Pilot Service. Since the foregoing scale was fixed, the results of its working have been reported on from time to time by the Port Officer, and have been brought to the notice of Government in memorials from members of the Pilot Service. In particular, it has been represented by officers of the Master's grade that they obtain an inadequate share of the work done by the Pilot Service, while on the other hand more ships fall to the lot of the Branch Pilots than they can actually take charge of. Thus the earnings of the Master Pilots from vessels within their proper tonnage are, it is alleged, unduly small, and their incomes fluctuate in proportion to the amount of work the Branch Pilots are able to do. As a remedy for this state of things, certain Master Pilots have suggested that all pilots of 20 years' service should at once be promoted to the grade of Branch Pilots, thus raising the numbers of officers in that grade from 12 to 30. It is, however, very doubtful whether this proposal, if adopted, would effect the objects which the memorialists have in view. By dividing the ships of Branch Pilot's tonnage among 30 officers, the earnings of the grade would be reduced to an extent which would entail grave hardship on the present incumbents without materially improving the prospects of the officers promoted; the scheme would throw upon the remaining Masters more work than they could do efficiently; while it would involve the financial difficulty in connection with pensionary and leave allowances. Without entering in detail upon the consequences of the proposal, the Lieutenant-Governor is satisfied that the injury it would inflict upon those officers who have worked their way up to the responsible position of Branch Pilot is sufficient to warrant its rejection. The same objection applies, though less strongly, to the proposal put forward by the members of the Special Pilots' Committee (the President dissenting), that Master Pilots of 25 years' standing should be allowed to take charge of the same class of vessels as Branch Pilots.

2. After careful consideration of the many complicated questions involved in the problem of adjusting the earnings of pilots equitably in relation to the conflicting claims of the several grades, and the continually changing conditions under which their work is done, the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the only practicable solution of the difficulty is that which has been resorted to before—a redistribution of tonnage. Statistics furnished by the Port Officer show that within the last four years the average tonnage of steamers visiting Calcutta has risen from 2,000 to 2,300 tons, while during the same period the average tonnage of all vessels, both sailing ships and steamers, has increased from 1,601 to 1,824 tons. Concurrently with this increase in tonnage the number of vessels has fallen off during the year 1883-84 by 134, the decrease being almost entirely under the head of sailing ships. Apart, then, from any special representations of hardship, it would be reasonable to expect that the earnings of the Master Pilots should have been to some extent reduced, and the Lieutenant-Governor sees no reason for doubting the allegations of the memorialists, corroborated as they are by the records of the Port Office, that this has actually been the case. Here, however, it may be observed that the system on which the officers of the Pilot Service are remunerated of itself involves occasional fluctuations of income. Any depression in trade which affects the number of vessels visiting Calcutta results, as a matter of course, in reducing the earnings of some of the Pilots, and it must be insisted upon, as a matter of principle, that temporary vicissitudes of this kind cannot be put forward as giving a claim to redress in the form of a redistribution of tonnage. In the present case, however, there are strong reasons for believing that the reduction of earnings complained of by the Master Pilots arises from the permanent cause of a change in the size in vessels, aggravated, it may be, by the slackness of trade. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the lower grades of Pilots are fairly entitled to such a measure of relief as will counterbalance the effects of the former cause upon their earnings and in this view he is pleased to order the introduction of the following scale of tonnage with effect from the 1st of February 1885:—

Mate Pilots up to	...	...	900 tons.
Junior Master Pilots	...	...	900 to 1,450 tons.
Senior Master Pilots	...	...	900 to 2,000 tons.
Branch Pilots	...	...	2,000 tons and upwards.

This redistribution will of course be subject to the existing rule whereby each lower grade can pilot vessels allotted to higher grades when a higher grade Pilot is not available; and higher grade Pilots can pilot vessels of lower tonnage when a lower grade Pilot is not procurable.

3. In the course of the present discussion some doubt has been thrown upon the accuracy of the statistics available for testing the effect of a particular scale of tonnage on the earnings of Pilots. The Port Officer will, therefore, be requested to pay special attention to this question, and to report, for the information of Government, the precise manner in which these intricate calculations are made.

A. P. MACDONNELL,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

APPOINTMENTS TO THE SUBORDINATE EXECUTIVE SERVICE.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

Calcutta, the 3rd February 1885.

RESOLUTION.

READ AGAIN—

Resolution of this Government, dated the 23rd February 1883, prescribing the conditions upon which appointments will in future be made to the Subordinate Executive Service in these Provinces.
Resolution dated the 21st April 1884.
Notifications dated the 18th December 1883 and the 8th January 1885.

In the Resolution of the Appointment Department of the 23rd February 1883, it was stated that the Lieutenant-Governor had determined on gradually introducing a system under which appointments to the Subordinate Executive Service should be thrown open to competition. It was then resolved that in order to meet the claims of those who, under the nomination system, had been waiting their turn for appointment, all vacancies during 1883 should be filled by candidates then borne on the Government list; that in January 1884 those on the list who had not succeeded in getting appointments should, together with the men in the first and second grades of Sub-Deputy Collectors, be allowed to compete for the appointments falling vacant in that year; and that in January 1885 all appointments in the Subordinate Executive Service should be thrown open to public competition.

In 1883 there were unfortunately only two vacancies, and in consequence several candidates borne on the Government list, and who had received pledges of appointment, were left unprovided for. Among these was an Inspector of Police who had been promised an appointment under the following circumstances. In 1882 Sir Ashley Eden, on the recommendation of the Inspector-General of Police, authorized the latter to send up each year the name of a first grade Inspector of Police to be entered in the Lieutenant-Governor's list as a candidate for admission to the Subordinate Executive Service, in which he was to be provided with an appointment within reasonable time. In July 1882 Sir Rivers Thompson directed the Inspector-General of Police to submit, in March 1883, the name of a first grade Inspector for the post of Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, while a similar nomination was to be made in March 1884. In compliance with this order, the name of an Inspector was submitted to Government during the year 1883, but it was found impossible to provide him with an appointment during that year. Subsequently, in 1884, the name of another Inspector was submitted by the Inspector-General.

In order to meet the claims of these gentlemen and others similarly situated, the Lieutenant-Governor decided to fix six as the limit of the number of appointments to be filled up by competition in 1884, and to fill up any vacancy which might occur beyond that number from the list of those who had received promises of appointments before the Resolution of February 1883. On this principle there were four appointments made without examination during the past year in addition to six filled up by competition. But there still remain on the list some candidates whose claims to direct appointment cannot, in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion, be overlooked, and Sir Rivers Thompson, while adhering to his expressed determination to introduce the system of appointment by competition, has decided that its complete introduction must be temporarily postponed. He has therefore fixed twelve as the number of appointments to be filled by competition during the current year, and any vacancies which may occur above this number will be filled up from the list of those who had received positive promises of appointments previous to the 23rd February 1883. There were three vacancies available on the 31st December last, and the Lieutenant-Governor has decided to appoint the following gentlemen to them:—

Baboo Probhat Chundra Chatterjee, a first grade Inspector of Police. Recommended by the Inspector-General of Police in 1883.

Baboo Toolsi Das Mookerjee, who received a promise of appointment in March 1879, and Baboo Toolsi Churn Pal who received a similar promise in April of the same year.

All appointments falling vacant during the current year, up to the number of twelve, will be filled up according to the results of the recent examination.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

J. WARE EDGAR,

Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

CALCUTTA, the 30th January 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 30TH OF JANUARY 1885.

For the first three days of the week the weather conditions in Bengal do not call for much comment. The alterations from day to day were of the usual oscillatory character, and this period was not marked by any sudden or rapid changes of any kind, though it may be noted that pressure decreased rather more rapidly than it increased, and that the temperature was decidedly higher than the average, and that it appeared to be steadily increasing. Skies were clear and no rain was reported, except one or two local showers in Behar of no importance. On Tuesday, the 27th, however, a rapid fall of the barometer commenced in the Punjab, which was continued on the 28th and extended on that day also to the North-West Provinces. So rapid was the action, that in some instances the fall of the barometer on the latter day was nearly a quarter of an inch. The rapid reduction of pressure was accompanied by general rainfall, in some cases very heavy, over the Punjab and North-West Provinces, Delhi receiving 4·5 inches on the 28th. The disturbance reached parts of North Behar also on the 28th, and gave light rain to districts, but it extended in area on the 29th and gave light to moderate general rain to North Bengal and to North and South Behar. On the following day pressure increased at most stations and the disturbance disappeared, and on this day, except at one or two stations in Behar, no rain was reported. A noticeable feature in the meteorology of the past week has been that the wind directions at the southern stations in Bengal have become decidedly more southerly in character, and this tends to show that the north-east monsoon is now steadily weakening in force.

Pressure had been during the previous week distinctly above the normal. For the first two days of the present week pressure decreased steadily; this was followed by a rise extending over two days and by a further fall for the same period, and again the mean pressure for the week has been decidedly above the normal. The excess pressure has varied from 0·091″ at Durbhunga to 0·037″ at Saugor Island, so that again Behar shows a relatively high pressure as compared with the remainder of the Province.

The changes of temperature have also been of the same oscillatory character, and it fell generally during the first three days and rose again at the end of the week. The mean temperature for the week has been above the normal at all stations except Gya, but the average excess temperature for the whole Province has been only 1·5°. The greatest excess has been at Hazaribagh, where it equals 3·9°. It is again in the night temperatures that the greatest variation from the normal has occurred. In the following table are given the normal and actual mean maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations and these show that, while the night temperatures at these stations have been 2·4° in excess, the day temperatures were only 1·8° in excess.

Rainfall has been practically confined to the two days, the 28th and 29th, as above mentioned, and the divisions which have received light general rain have been North Bengal, except in the Pubna, Bogra, and Rajshahye districts, and North and South Behar. One or two local showers were also recorded in East Bengal and Chutia Nagpur, but these were of no importance. The average amount received during the week in North Behar was 0·38 inch, in North Bengal it was 0·32 inch, and in South Behar 0·13 inch. The quantities received in Chutia Nagpur and East Bengal were insignificant. In North Bengal and North Behar the amount of rain received during the week has been considerably above the normal; in South Behar it has been about equal to the normal fall, while in all other districts it has been far below the normal fall.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 30th January 1885 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

MEMORANDA.

THE principal results deducible from the vital statistics of the first class Municipalities in Bengal for the week ending 17th January 1885, as indicated in the table appended to this memoranda, are—

1. That births and deaths were registered in these Municipalities in the proportions per 1,000 of population of 22·7 and 29·7, respectively, as opposed to 24·0 and 31·6 per 1,000, respectively, in the preceding week ending 10th January, indicating a reduction in the registration of both events.

2. That the highest birth and death-rates were recorded in the following Municipalities :—

Births.	Ratio per mille.	Deaths.	Ratio per mille.
Darjiling	45·6	Jessore	49·0
Serampore	37·3	Suburbs of Calcutta	46·3
Hughli	36·2	Purneah	41·6
Monghyr	31·6	Hughli	40·2
Burdwan	30·5	Burdwan	39·7
		Poori	36·4
		Gya	34·9
		Darjiling	32 6
		Monghyr	31·6
		Midnapore	31·0
		Bhagulpore	30·8
		Chittagong	30 5

3. That the mortality from the several death-causes exhibited in the table above referred to was as follows :—

	Ratio per mille during the weeks ending—
	17th January 1885.	10th January 1885.
Cholera	1·8	2·0
Small-pox	·4	·2
Fevers	14·2	12·7
Bowel-complaints	5·8	6·9
Injury	·3	·1
Other causes	7·1	9·7

showing that, in comparison with the preceding week, there occurred a sensible increase of mortality from fever, with a decrease in that from those diseases recorded under the head of "Other causes," the other diseases exhibiting only fractional variations.

4. That while the casualties from violence were not noticeably large anywhere, the rest of the diseases exhibited their greatest activity in the following Municipalities :—

Cholera.	Ratio per mille.	Small-pox.	Ratio per mille.	Fever.	Ratio per mille.	Bowel-complaints.	Ratio per mille.	Other Causes.	Ratio per mille.

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken as the census of this section of the community taken in February 1881 was not reliable, owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans above alluded to cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorized form of age classification.

No. 49.—The following Resolution of the Government of India, Public Works Department, is republished for information:—

No. 195G, dated Fort William, the 4th February 1885.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

Civil Engineers' Provident Fund.

Read again:—

Public Works Department Resolution No. 1216G., dated 15th October 1884.

Read also—

Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 71, dated 13th November 1884.

RESOLUTION.—Since the publication of the Resolution now read again, the Secretary of State has ruled that contributions to the Civil Engineers' Provident Fund may be made compulsory on all Civil Engineers who may hereafter enter the Public Works Department. The Government of India has also authorized certain changes in regard to the accounts of the Fund. It has been found necessary therefore to issue a revised set of rules, which is appended to this Resolution.

2. The Secretary of State has also ruled that Officers now in the Department, who wish to join the Fund, may pay up arrears, within the authorized limits, from the commencement of service, or for any shorter time, in one sum, interest on which will be allowed from the date of payment.

ORDER.—Ordered that this Resolution be forwarded to the Local Governments and Administrations and Officers noted in the margin, and to the Department of Finance and Commerce, also that it be published in the Gazette of India and in all local gazettes.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Punjab, in the Public Works Department
The Chief Commissioners, Central Provinces, British Burma, Assam and Coorg.
The Resident at Hyderabad.
The Agents to the Governor-General for Central India, Rajputana and Beluchistan.
The Accountant-General, Public Works Department.
The Inspector-General of Military Works.
The Director-General of Railways
The Consulting Engineers to the Government of India for Guaranteed Railways, Calcutta, Lahore, and Lucknow
The Superintendent of Works, Simla, Imperial Circle.

CIVIL ENGINEERS' PROVIDENT FUND.

Character of the Fund.

1. Civil Engineers on the effective list of the Public Works Department.
2. Civil Engineers transferred to the Accounts Branch, or the Superior Railway Revenue Establishment, or to foreign service under Chapter III of the Civil Pension Code.
3. All civil members of the Superior Accounts Establishment who are not Civil Engineers.

I.—The institution of a Provident Fund on the following basis is sanctioned for the officers of the Public Works Department indicated in the margin:—

(1) The monthly deposit may be not less than 5 per cent. and not more than 10 per cent. on the salary (as defined in the Financial Codes) of each depositor for that month.

(2) In the case of officers now in the Department, the deposits will be voluntary, and may be discontinued and renewed at the option of the depositor. But officers joining the Department hereafter must contribute 5 per cent. of their salary to the Fund, and may contribute up to 10 per cent. of salary. Apprentices may contribute to the Fund, but will not be compelled to do so.

(3) Compound interest at 4 per cent. on such payments will be annually credited by Government to each officer subscribing.

(4) The sum which will thus accumulate to the credit of an officer to be his absolute property, to be handed over to him unconditionally on quitting the service, or, in the event of his death before retirement, to his legal representatives.

Administration of the Fund.

II.—The deposits received under the foregoing resolution will be placed in a Government Savings Bank named "Civil Engineers' Provident Fund." The administration of the Fund will rest with the Government of India in the Public Works Department.

Receipts of Deposits.

III.—Deposits will be received by the various Examiners of Public Works Accounts throughout India. They will be recovered by deduction from the pay bills, or may be made in cash. Deposits cannot, except in the cases provided for in the next rule, be made otherwise than through an Examiner of Public Works Accounts or an Executive Engineer who is in account with an Examiner.

IV.—An officer who is not on the books of any Examiner, but receives his allowances either from the Civil Department or from a local fund or a foreign State, may, if he has already been admitted as a depositor, pay his contributions either in cash into the nearest treasury, or, if he is paid by the Civil Department, by deduction from his salary bill. He must in either case specify the number of his account. His contributions will be passed on, by the Civil Accountant-General, to the Examiner, Public Works Accounts, of the Province who will exercise the responsibility mentioned in Rule VIII.

An officer of this class who has not already been admitted, must apply for admission (and assignment of number) to the Accountant-General, Public Works Department.

For the purposes of this rule, the Examiner for the Province is, in the case of Indian Treasuries, the Examiner of Military Works Accounts Withdrawals.

V.—No withdrawal will ordinarily be allowed from the deposit until the depositor quits the services or dies. But on Local Governments or Administrations being satisfied that the pecuniary circumstances of a depositor are such that the indulgence is absolutely necessary, a deposit may be temporarily withdrawn under orders issued by the respective Local Governments and Administrations—

(i) to pay for the passage of the depositor going on leave out of India on medical certificate, or returning after such absence;

(ii) to pay for the passage of any member of the depositor's family coming from beyond the sea, to join him, or going beyond the sea, sick, or from some urgent cause

A withdrawal thus sanctioned will be made after reference to the Comptroller-General to ascertain that it is covered by the amount at credit.

VI.—Withdrawals under Rule V will be recovered in 20 equal monthly instalments compulsorily deducted from salary in addition to contributions under Rule I, whenever full salary is drawn, until the whole is refunded. Such instalments may be paid in advance.

Deceased depositors.

VII.—The balances of deceased depositors will be paid according to Rules 58 and 59, Chapter 19, of the Civil Account Code, edition 1883, and Act V of 1873.

Responsibility of Examiners.

VIII.—For the proper admission of depositors, the correct realization of receipts, and the admission and payment of the withdrawals, the Examiners, as Audit Officers, will be entirely responsible. The functions of the Comptroller-General are purely those of keeping the account of the receipts and withdrawals as reported by the Examiners.

Examiner's account of deposit.

IX.—All sums received from depositors will be credited, and all sums withdrawn will be charged by the Examiners under the head "Civil Engineers' Provident Fund."

X.—The Examiner will, at the end of each month, forward to the Comptroller-General, Savings Bank Department, a statement of the sums he may receive on account of the Fund This statement will contain (1) the dates of receipt; (2) the numbers of the depositors' accounts; (3) name and official designation of the depositors; and (4) amounts of deposits. The total of this statement must agree with the corresponding credit in the Examiner's account as rendered to the Accountant-General. For number of depositors' account, see below, Rule XIII

Examiner's account of withdrawals.

XI.—The Examiner will similarly forward a monthly statement of withdrawals. This statement will give the following particulars, and the total of it must agree with the corresponding debit in the Examiner's monthly account as rendered to the Accountant-General:—(1) dates of payments; (2) numbers of depositors' accounts; (3) names and official designations; (4) amounts paid; (5) number and date of the orders of Local Government or Administration for payment as prescribed in Rule V. For number of account, see below, Rule XIII.

The Accountant-General will, together with his monthly account, send to the Comptroller-General a complete statement, by Examiners, of the total receipts and withdrawals on account of Provident Fund.

Accounts of Fund to be transferred annually to the books of Examiner, Military Works Accounts.

XII.—The yearly receipts and charges on account of the "Civil Engineers' Provident" Fund will be cleared from the books of the various Examiners by transfer to those of the Examiner of Accounts, Military Works, in whose books consequently the transactions of the whole Fund will be recorded.

Depositor's ledger.

XIII.—The account of each depositor will be posted in a ledger, to be kept by the Comptroller-General, Savings Bank Branch. The ledger will be closed as soon as possible after 31st March of each year.

Numbers of depositors' accounts.

XIV.—Every account in this ledger will receive a distinct number. The number so given to the depositors' accounts will be consecutive. When a new depositor is admitted, the Comptroller-General will, on reference, notify to the Examiner concerned the number to be given to his account, and this number will be quoted against all further deposits, and all withdrawals in the statements prescribed in Rules X and XI. A depositor's number will not be altered, nor will the numbers of closed accounts be given to new depositors. In the event of the depositor's transfer, the number will be noted on his last-pay certificate, in order that the next Examiner may be able to quote it in his deposit statements.

Interest.

XV.—Interest will be allowed for each calendar month upon the minimum balance of the depositor's account between the close of the fourth day and the end of the month. In calculating interest under this rule, the deposits received by deduction from salary will be considered as paid into the Fund on the 1st of the month succeeding that for which the salaries from which the deductions are made are due. The interest will be calculated monthly as provided for in the form of ledger, but will not be added to principal until the end of the official year, except when the account is to be finally closed, in which case the interest will be paid, after reference, as prescribed in the next section

Closing of account.

XVI.—When an account is to be closed, the Examiner who at the time is charged with the receipt of the deposits will submit to the Comptroller-General a statement of the transactions of the past six months, certifying them to agree with the debits and credits in his accounts (or submitting such certificate of any other Examiner in whose accounts they were included), and will apply for an order for payment of interest and principal up to date The account will be made up in advance, by the Comptroller-General, and issued in the Form A attached, with an order directing the debit.

Addition of interest.

XVII.—The amount of interest to be added to the balance of the Fund will be calculated each year by the Comptroller-General, who will issue a direction to the Accountant-General, Public Works Department, to credit the amount to the Fund by debit to Civil Department in the Exchange account between the Comptroller, Indian Treasuries, and the Examiner of Accounts, Military Works. This transaction must include the debits on account of interest paid during the year on closed accounts, which during the currency of the year is debited to the Fund itself.

Yearly advice to depositors.

XVIII.—As soon as possible after receiving the March accounts of the Accountant-General, Public Works Department, the Comptroller-General will make up each depositor's account, with interest, till March 31st, and will send him, through the Examiner in whose account his last subscription was received, a statement of his account in Form A annexed, or in some similar form. Depositors are required to satisfy themselves as to the correctness of these statements; and unless errors in them are brought to the notice of the Comptroller-General within one month from the date of their receipt, Government will not be responsible for any sums not thus acknowledged.

XIX.—Any depositor may, once in the official year but not oftener, receive, on application to the Comptroller-General, a copy of his account for the last official year, and for so many months of the current year as may have been posted and agreed with the accounts of the Department.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

At the half-yearly General Meeting of the Subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held at the Town Hall on Monday, the 26th January 1885, at 10 A.M.

PRESENT:—The Hon'ble Mr. Justice McDonell, v.c.; H. A. Cockerell, Esq., c.s.i.; the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Tottenham; the Hon'ble J. W. Quinton; A. Smith, Esq.; H. L. Harrison, Esq.; the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beverley; J. Westland, Esq.; E. F. T. Atkinson, Esq.; J. Scobell Armstrong, Esq.; H. J. S. Cotton, Esq.; C. A. Wilkins, Esq.; R. Logan, Esq.; J. Posford, Esq.; T W. Holderness, Esq.; H. M. Kisch, Esq.; J. F. Finlay, Esq.; C. S. Bayley, Esq.; O. T. Barrow, Esq.; H. Bell, Esq. (annuitant).

A. Smith, Esq., in the chair.

THE Managers presented to the Meeting the following report of their proceedings for the half-year ending on the 31st December 1884 :—

REPORT.

THE Managers submit the proceedings for the past Half-year for the consideration and sanction of the Meeting.

2. Subject to the approval of the subscribers, they have admitted to the benefits of the Fund the following families :—

Mrs. Dumergue	£ 300	The widow of the late Mr. J. S. Dumergue, Annuitant of 1862, who died on the 27th June 1884.
Mrs. Shakespear	£ 300	The widow and two daughters of the late Mr. A. Shakespear, Annuitant of 1873, who died on the 5th July 1884.
2 Daughters	£ 200
Miss Harvey	£ 150	The daughter of the late Sir G. F. Harvey, K.C.S.I., Annuitant of 1863, who died on the 4th November 1884.
Mrs. Pawsey	£ 300	The widow and two daughters of the late Mr. R. H. Pawsey, who died at Faridpur on the 10th November 1884.
2 Daughters	£ 160
Mrs. Ridsdale	£ 300	The widow of the late Mr. S. O. B. Ridsdale, who died at Fatehpur on the 15th November 1884.

3. The votes of the subscribers have affirmed the resolution passed at the General Meeting of the 28th July 1884 respecting the refund, with interest, to Mrs. Lane of the subscriptions paid by her to keep alive her late husband's interest in the Fund. One hundred and fifty-eight subscribers voted for, and three against, the proposal.

In the report presented to that Meeting it was said that the case of Mrs. Bruce Lane had been laid before Counsel, and a statement of the case as well as an opinion of Mr. Evans that Mrs. Bruce Lane can never participate in the benefits of the Fund were annexed to the report. The facts have again been represented to the Managers by Mr. C. S. Belli, Mrs. Lane's brother, and have again been under careful consideration and discussion. Although there is some difference of opinion among the Managers as to the action they should now take, there is none in regard to the sympathy felt for Mrs. Lane and in the desire, if possible, to enable her to participate in the advantages of the Fund in the event of Mr. Lane's death. The Managers feel also that they are under a special obligation to consider this case in consequence of the language used in their Secretary's letter of the 29th December 1879, which undoubtedly had the effect of misleading Mrs. Lane to suppose that her interest in the Fund would not be affected by the fact of her obtaining a divorce from her husband. It may be added that this misunderstanding was apparently also shared by the Divorce Court itself, for Sir James Hannen's decision directed that Mr. Lane should continue his subscriptions to the Fund for the purpose of securing to Mrs. Lane her pension in case she should survive him. This decree has not been obeyed by Mr. Lane, but in order to keep his interest alive, the subscriptions have been regularly paid by Mrs. Lane's brother. The resolution passed at the last General Meeting and confirmed by the Service authorised the Managers to refund these subscriptions, but Mr. Belli has refused to receive them. He still hopes that the case may be reconsidered and that, notwithstanding Counsel's opinion, the claim of Mrs. Lane may eventually be admitted.

The Managers, as they have already reported to the Subscribers, are not in a position to draft a rule to meet the circumstances of this particular case, and it is obvious that the eventuality which such a rule would contemplate may never occur. They are however of opinion that if Mrs. Bruce Lane should survive Mr. Lane, and should up to the time of his death have kept alive his interest in the Fund by payment of subscriptions on his behalf, her case will be one particularly deserving of compassionate consideration at the hands of the authority which may then be administering the affairs of the Fund. The Managers cannot pledge their successors in a matter for which no provision is made by the rules. Should, however, the negotiations now in progress result in the transfer of the management of the Fund to the Secretary of State, it would seem that the considerations which in their position as Trustees render it difficult for them to take action would no longer apply. They desire therefore to do all that lies in their power on Mrs. Lane's behalf by now placing on record their hope and wish that if at any time the contingency should occur which will make it necessary for her to apply for a pension from the Fund, a special exception may be made in her favour, and her case be favourably and liberally considered.

The Managers' proceedings in this matter are now laid before the subscribers for their approval.

4. The Managers desire to report for the information of the subscribers that in accordance with the resolution of the last Half-yearly General Meeting held on the 28th July 1884, they have addressed a letter to the Secretary of State through the Government of India on the subject of the proposed transfer of the Fund. A copy of the letter is appended to this report.

5. Mr. J. W. Muir has incurred the penalty specified under Article XXXVII of the Rules by his omission, for more than one year, to pay the subscriptions on his furlough allowances, necessary to keep up his interest in the contingent benefits of the Fund. Mr. Muir has explained that he was under the impression that all subscriptions due to the Fund were adjusted on the return of the subscriber to India.

The Managers submit the question of his re-admission on payment of all arrears of subscription, with interest at 8 per cent., for the decision of the Meeting.

The accounts for 1883-84 are submitted.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND OFFICE,
The 26th January 1885.

Proposed by Mr. Posford and seconded by Mr. Wilkins, that the Managers' proceedings in admitting to the benefits of the Fund the families of the late Sir G. F. Harvey, K.C.S.I., and Messrs. J. S. Dumergue, A. Shakespear, R. H. Pawsey, and S. O. B. Ridsdale, be confirmed.

Carried nem con.

Proposed by Mr. Logan and seconded by Mr. Finlay, that the Managers' action in regard to the case of Mrs. T. Bruce Lane be approved.

Mr. Kisch asked if there was not some inconsistency in the manner in which the case had been treated. A tender of a refund of subscriptions had been made to Mr. Belli on behalf of Mrs. Bruce Lane on the ground that she could never participate in the benefits of the Fund. This tender had been refused, and now the Managers had suggested to her that she might continue to subscribe, and perhaps ultimately be admitted to the benefits of the Fund.

Mr. Westland observed that the explanation of the apparent inconsistency was to be found in the position held by the Managers, who in view of the possible transfer of the Fund to the Secretary of State had not felt themselves at liberty to take any action which might have the effect of burdening the Fund with liabilities not contemplated by the rules, but who desired to place on record their opinion as to the hardship of the case and to suggest a means by which that hardship would possibly be obviated were the future management to remain in the hands of the Service. The course taken by them was in accordance with the advice of Counsel, whose opinion Mr. Westland desired the Secretary to read to the Meeting.

The following passage from Mr. Evans' opinion was then read by the Secretary :—

"I think the only safe course is for the Managers to inform Mrs. Bruce Lane and Mr. Belli that with every desire to meet so hard a case, they have no power to do so, and to decline to receive any future payments unless they are expressly stated to be made on behalf of Mr. Bruce Lane, after notice that they can be of no benefit to Mrs. Lane."

The resolution was then put to the vote and carried nem con.

Proposed by Mr. Wilkins and seconded by Mr. Armstrong—

"That Mr. J. W. Muir be restored to the rights of a subscriber on payment of all arrears of subscription with interest at the rate of eight per centum."

Carried nem con.

Proposed by the Hon'ble J. Quinton and seconded by Mr. Kisch—

"That the accounts for the year 1883-84 be approved."

Carried nem con.

Proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Justice McDonell and seconded by Mr. Westland—

That the following gentlemen be elected Managers for the ensuing year :—Mr. H. A. Cockeroll, C.S.I., the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Tottenham, Mr. H. L. Harrison, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Beverley, and Mr. H. J. S. Cotton.

Carried nem con.

The meeting separated with a vote of thanks to the chair.

PUNJAB PUBLIC LIBRARY.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. G. Wace, Financial Commissioner, Punjab, President.

Members:

The Secretary to Government, Punjab.

D. C. J. Ibbetson, Esq., C.S., B.A., Director of Public Instruction, Punjab.

E. W. Parker, Esq., District Judge, Lahore.

S. Wheeler, Esq., F.R.G.S., Editor, Civil and Military Gazette.

Pandit Rám Naráin, Pleader, Chief Court, Punjab.

J. Lockwood Kipling, Esq., Principal of the School of Art.

C. B. Brind, Esq., C.S., Assistant Commissioner, Lahore, Secretary.

THE LIBRARY.

This institution has been established, at the desire and with the assistance of the Punjab Government, in order to provide a Public Library for the use of all classes in the province.

Admission to the Reading-Room is free; and books will be lent out subject to rules and subscriptions, which can be ascertained on application to the Librarian.

A large contribution of books and pecuniary support have been promised by Government; but the Committee earnestly appeal to the public for further contributions of books, both European and Oriental.

Privileges will be given to donors of twenty volumes and upwards.

Assistance is especially desired towards securing a complete collection of books relating to India and the East.

Societies, Institutions, and Departments of Government are invited to contribute.

Donors of books may make it a condition of the donation that any of the books they give shall not be lent out, except to the Donor.

Communications should be addressed to——The Secretary, Punjab Public Library, Lahore.

THE READING-ROOM.

The Reading-Room is open to the public free of charge.

Books may not be removed from the shelves by any one except the Librarian.

Catalogues and application forms are on the table. The Librarian will get any book for which a form is handed to him; and books must be returned to him before leaving.

The Committee will exclude from the building persons who disregard any rules or damage the property of the Library.

CLOSED DAYS.—Queen's birthday; also from 1st to 7th October and from 1st to 7th April.

DAILY HOURS.—In the winter 8 A.M. to noon and 3 to 10 P.M., and in the hot weather 6 to 10 A.M. and 4 to 10 P.M.

RULES FOR LENDING OUT BOOKS.

Books will be issued on the following conditions:—

1. An applicant must deposit Rs. 10 with the Secretary. The deposit will be liable to forfeit for injury or loss of a book, or for breach of any of the rules.

2. An annual subscription of Rs. 5 must be paid in advance, which may be compounded for by a donation of Rs. 25.

3. Not more than six volumes may be kept out on one subscription.

4. Residents at Lahore or Mecan Meer shall return, within 20 days, every book so taken out. To residents at other places ten days longer will be allowed. But all books lent out must be returned by the 30th September and 31st March each year

5. The cost of forwarding books will be recovered by sending them by value payable post. Any charges due under Rules 1 and 2 may be added.

6. Books may not be transferred from one person to another.

7. The Committee will reserve from issue, under these rules, new or valuable books, at their discretion

8. Forms of application for books can be supplied, and their use is requested, but is not obligatory.

Deposits under rule 1 (if free of claims) will be returned on request to persons who have no books of the Library in their possession.

E. W. PARKER, Secretary,
Punjab Public Library Committee.

The following revised advertisement is published in substitution of that which appeared at page 1084, Part II, of the Calcutta Gazette of the 9th July 1884:—

The Indian Law Reports,

Published under Authority.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat; the copies for subscribers registered by Messrs. Thacker, Spink & Co., are distributed by that firm; and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January 1885, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows:—

Terms of subscription payable annually in advance.

For the complete series, including postage, Rs. 22-8.

	Without postage.	With postage.
For the Calcutta Series ...	Rs. 10 0	Rs. 12 8
„ each of the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series ...	„ 6 0	„ 7 0
„ a part of each of the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series purchased separately (inclusive of postage in India) ...	.....	„ 1 0

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—

Messrs. Thacker, Spink & Co., Calcutta.
„ Thacker & Co., Bombay.
„ Higginbotham & Co., Madras.
The Government Central Book Depôt, Bombay.
„ Curator of Government Books, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.
„ Superintendent of Government Printing, Bengal.

Orders and subscriptions for 1885 should be at once remitted.

RESOLUTION.

JAILS.

Calcutta, the 10th February 1885.

READ—

Letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department, to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, No. 1437P of 24th November 1884.

Report of the Official Visitors, dated 10th January 1885.

Letter from the Judicial Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Inspector-General of Jails, No. 158P, dated 17th January 1885.

Report of the Inspector-General of Jails, dated 29th January 1885.

Letter No. 945, dated 31st January 1885, with enclosures, from the Inspector-General of Jails, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department.

While the Lieutenant-Governor was in Behar last November, his attention was drawn to a letter in the Calcutta Statesman of the 20th November signed "Humanity," in which statements were made regarding the cruel treatment of the prisoners in the Presidency Jail. Upon his return to Calcutta, Sir Rivers Thompson requested the official visitors, in the absence of the Inspector-General who was on tour, to make a full enquiry into these allegations. Subsequently, further allegations of a similar nature appeared in the columns of the Statesman and elsewhere, and were thoroughly and minutely enquired into by the official visitors, Mr. Harrison, Commissioner of Police; Mr. Lambert, Deputy Commissioner; Mr. Marsden, Presidency Magistrate, Northern Division; Mr. Gupta, Presidency Magistrate, Southern Division; Syed Ameer Hossein; and Baboo Jodu Lall Mullick, and their conclusions are contained in a very impartial and exhaustive report, dated January 10th, for which the Government is much indebted to them. This was forwarded on the 17th to the Inspector-General of Jails for any remarks which he might desire to make, and he has now submitted a careful review of the whole case in which he has formulated the charges made in the Statesman and elsewhere against the management of Bengal jails in general, and specially against that of the Presidency Jail, and has detailed in parallel columns the result of the enquiry into such charges. Summarizing the very grave charges made against the administration of jails in the province, and especially as regards that of the Presidency Jail in Calcutta, the allegations were that prisoners in the Presidency Jail were frequently punished by having their hands handcuffed behind their backs and then drawn up by straps behind the shoulders till the palm rested on the nape of the neck, or till the fingers could reach the crown of the head; that the hands were kept in this position by a rope attached to the centre of the handcuffs and fastened to the prisoner's neck, thereby arching the body and causing intolerable pain; that while so tortured the prisoners were sometimes marched up and down in the burning sun for five and six hours, and sometimes thrown into the cells for hours; that while undergoing the treatment they were not supplied with either food or water; that these handcuffs were applied by convict warders of atrocious character, who were in the habit of beating and otherwise maltreating the convicts while wearing the handcuffs; that the groans and cries of the prisoners under this torture could sometimes be heard throughout the jail, and more than once had brought the Jailor to the place where the punishment was being inflicted, and that on one occasion the Jailor was only just in time to rescue from drowning a handcuffed prisoner who had fallen or thrown himself into a tank; that the Deputy Commissioner of Police, when visiting the jail, had noticed the bruised condition of the back of a youth named Jordon who had worn back handcuffs, and had noted in the Visitors' Book that the punishment amounted to actual torture; that for a number of days in succession this prisoner had been handcuffed in the manner above described, his arms being maintained at the level of his neck by a stick thrust under them; that in consequence he had to be taken to hospital in a broken and bleeding condition, and is now incapacitated for life from any work, with injured back and dislocated collar-bone; that numbers have died under similar treatment, and that one of these—Ruttun Das—was tortured and belaboured to such an extent while wearing back handcuffs that he died of inflammation of the shoulder joints attended with fever; that the inquest held, according to custom, by the Superintendent of the Jail was worthless, and the post mortem examination made by the medical officer defective; that another prisoner was about the same time admitted into hospital all but dead from the same cause, and that it is rumoured that he has since died; that floggings in Bengal jails are very frequent and brutal, being sometimes inflicted with a cat fitted with contrivances to cut and tear the flesh from the body; that in one case two hundred lashes had been inflicted on a prisoner, and that a man had been so brutally flogged that every atom of flesh had been torn from his back until the bare shoulderblade glittered in the sun; that the custom of inflicting such punishments renders jail officers so callous, that Dr. Mackenzie, when Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, had a photograph taken of a man being flogged, with the blood streaming from him; that an Afghan or Pathan prisoner, sentenced for some probably trivial offence, had been so brutally treated by a warder that he struck him and broke his jaw, for which he was sentenced to an additional term of seven years' penal servitude; that he implored Mr. Justice Norman, the Judge who tried him, to sentence him to death rather than imprisonment with the risk of such flogging as he had seen inflicted in jail; that he was afterwards repeatedly flogged for not breaking stones and eventually died in hospital; that his brother is supposed to have assassinated Mr. Justice Norman out of revenge; that the dietary in the jail was reduced some years ago to something like starvation point; that even now the food is so vile that prisoners cannot swallow it; that penal diet consists of an uneatable paste; that while prisoners are on this diet they are put to do full tasks; that the mortality of jails in Bengal is in a great measure due to insufficient food and inhuman punishments; that in the Presidency Jail prisoners are worked till 3 or 4 in the morning and again turned out at 5, while a man finishing his task at 9 or 10 is not allowed to go to sleep till his comrades have finished; that Mr. Beadon, the Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, never allows a prisoner to defend himself before him; and that if a prisoner ever went up to complain or speak to him he was gagged and confined in the dark cell for two days. The above seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to be a correct representation as a summary of the charges which have appeared from time to time in the Statesman newspaper and elsewhere since the 20th November last up to the date of the conclusion of the enquiry which the Lieutenant-Governor ordered to be made.

Turning now to the reports of the visitors and of the Inspector-General of Jails, the Lieutenant-Governor is very glad to find that, although a certain substratum of fact underlies some of these statements, by far the greater number of them are either absolutely false, or grossly exaggerated. It is true that Mr. Beadon, the Superintendent, in introducing the system used by him in applying back handcuffs, acted in a manner unauthorised by the Jail Code, and which would certainly not have been approved by Government; but it is not true that the prisoners' hands were drawn up in the manner described to the nape of the neck or till the fingers could touch the crown of the head, nor that they suffered the punishment when fasting, nor that water was denied to them. The statements that they were thrown into cells while so handcuffed; that a man so handcuffed was rescued from drowning by the Jailor; that the latter was often aroused by the cries and groans which filled the prison; that the convict warders who applied the handcuffs had been convicted of manslaughter or murder, and that their tickets of leave had been cancelled for ruffianism are also false. The statements regarding Jordon are a tissue of falsehoods. The Deputy Commissioner made no entry about him in the visitors' book; he was not handcuffed for days together, and never in the manner described in the columns of the Statesman; he was punished with back handcuffs on three occasions in August and September, but he was not in hospital for any cause whatever after May. The official visitors had him examined by Dr. Sanders, the Superintendent of the Mayo Hospital and a distinguished officer, who has never had any connection with the Presidency Jail. He certified that Jordon had no bruises on his body, nor any marks of old injuries; that he had no dislocation of any of his joints and no ribs broken, and that he appeared to be in good health. So far from numbers having died from similar treatment, it is shewn by the prison registers that among the prisoners who have died in the jail since the introduction of the punishment, only four had ever been sentenced to it, and that it was certain that the deaths of three out of these four could not be connected directly or indirectly with the punishment. The fourth was Ruttun Das, whose case formed a prominent part of the enquiry, and will be considered further below.

The statement that inquests in cases of death in the Presidency Jail are held by the Superintendent of the Jail is also untrue. They are invariably held by the Coroner of Calcutta with an independent Jury. The other prisoner referred to as admitted all but dead at the same time as Rutton Das appears to be Sharafat, whose arm was swollen and had to be punctured. This seems to have been caused by the punishment; but it is not true that the man was half dead, and he has since recovered. The statements regarding floggings in Bengal jails are almost all false. There was a very great number of floggings, for the most part of slight character, in 1879, but the free recourse to this punishment was checked immediately on its coming to the notice of Government, and as a matter of fact the number of floggings in the whole province has fallen from 8,324 in 1879 to 349 in 1883. The maximum number of stripes which can be awarded is thirty, which must be inflicted with a cane on the buttocks. Consequently the statements regarding the horrible lash alleged to be used in some jails and prisoners receiving two hundred lashes and the like are pure fabrications. The statements about the photograph taken by Dr. Mackenzie is a misrepresentation of an actual fact. It is true that such a photograph was taken several years ago of a prisoner sentenced judicially to be flogged when tied up to the triangle; but the photograph was taken before the punishment was inflicted, so that the story of blood streaming from the body, which formed the gravamen of the charge, is untrue. This photograph, which the Lieutenant-Governor has seen, was one of several taken under official orders to illustrate answers to enquiries which had been made respecting the modes in which various punishments were inflicted.

The story about the Afghan prisoner whose brother is supposed to have assassinated Mr. Justice Norman resolves itself, when examined, into almost pure fable. The official visitors report that an Afghan was sentenced to three years' imprisonment by Mr Justice Norman on the 24th January 1870, and was again sentenced to two years' imprisonment for striking a warder with a hammer on the head in the middle of 1872, nearly a year after the assassination of Mr. Norman. This man did not die in hospital. He was released on the expiry of his sentence, and sent to the frontier on the 28th January 1875, and since that date nothing has been heard of him. The connection of this prisoner with the murderer of Mr. Justice Norman could exist only in the mind of the fabricator of the fiction.

Referring to the subject of the food of the prisoners, it is found that on the recommendation of the Prison Conference, appointed by the Government of India in 1877, a scale of diet was introduced, which was afterwards considered insufficient. It was, however, increased early in 1880 under the orders of Sir Ashley Eden. The sickness and mortality in the Bengal jails were heavy in 1879, and it was held by the Inspector-General of Jails, and by the Government of Bengal, that this was to some extent due to the reduced diet; but the Government of India, in a Resolution dated the 3rd January 1882, recorded that, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, good grounds had been shewn for the conclusion that the connection between the mortality and the Conference diet had been too hastily assumed. The diet scales, however, still maintained in the Bengal jails, are the more liberal ones introduced in 1880, and not those recommended by the Prison Conference of 1877, and approved by the Government of India. The rules forbid penal labour being exacted from prisoners while on penal diet, and the Inspector General of Jails reports that there is no reason whatever for supposing that this rule has ever been broken in the Presidency Jail.

It now remains to examine the actual facts which have been brought to light in the course of the enquiry. Rule 655 of the Bengal Jail Code is as follows:—Handcuffs placed upon the prisoner's wrists behind his back may be used as a punishment for very badly behaved or stubborn prisoners. No prisoner shall be handcuffed for more than six hours at a time. The entry in the Punishment Book shall shew the mode in which the handcuffs are applied.

In 1880 the Superintendent of the Bhagulpore Central Jail represented that, when a prisoner was merely handcuffed with his hands behind, he could without much difficulty pass his hands and wrists under his legs, and so bring them in front of his body, and in order to meet this it was proposed to handcuff the prisoners in a standing position to a chain suspended from a beam or to the grating of a cell or wooden door during work hours. This proposal was disallowed by Sir Ashley Eden, who wrote that though the punishment had been recommended by the Jail Conference, he had, when reporting on the subject to the Government of India, rejected it on the ground that it was open to gross abuse.

In the same year Mr. Beadon, who was then Superintendent of the Midnapore Jail, introduced the practice of tying two pieces of jute rope to the wrists of the handcuffed prisoner and drawing them over the shoulder and under the armpits until the hands reached nearly to between the shoulderblades; the ropes were then tied, and the culprit turned loose for one, two, or three hours, as the case might be, or until he promised to go to work with a will. The sanction of the Government was not obtained at the time to the introduction of this punishment, and no special report on the subject was made to the Inspector-General of Jails. It is true that Mr. Beadon did mention and describe the punishment in his annual report for the year 1880, but the passage seems to have escaped the notice of the Inspector-General when preparing his own report to Government. This is not surprising, when it is considered that the Inspector-General's annual report is compiled from the reports of 47 Central and District and 83 Subsidiary Jails. It is a well recognised rule that matters involving change of practice or procedure should not be dealt with in these annual reports, but should be made the subject of specific proposals, and Mr. Beadon was not justified in assuming that the introduction of a new form of jail punishment had been approved of because no notice had been taken of the mention made by him of it in his annual report. He did, however, assume that it had been sanctioned, and, when he was transferred to the Presidency Jail last year, introduced it there. Instead, however, of using it, as stated in his Midnapore report, only in cases when prisoners persistently refused to work, or had been repeatedly brought up for short work, and then only until they consented to work properly, the punishment was used with great frequency in the Presidency Jail, and as the official visitors point out, it was always inflicted for fixed periods, and in several cases as the first punishment after admission. The Lieutenant-Governor is also compelled to record that he is not satisfied that in all cases sufficient precaution was taken to prevent the cords being pulled so tight as to cause actual pain, and the danger of abuse of power in this direction is obviously so great that he must at once decide that the punishment of back handcuffs, if they cannot be used without straps, must be discontinued.

Sir Rivers Thompson considers that Mr. Beadon is still more to blame for compelling the handcuffed prisoners to walk up and down in an open yard, where, even if there were shelter from the sun close to the walls, it was always in the power of the convict warders to expose the prisoners to its heat. The case of Rutton Das is a case in point, and though there is not a particle of evidence to support the charges of those who come forward to accuse, that this man was tortured and belaboured while he was undergoing back handcuffs and died from the results of such beating, the fact is established that he was subjected to five hours of that punishment, probably for a part at least of the time, exposed to the heat of a September sun, and died in hospital within 48 hours afterwards. An inquest was held on his body by the Coroner of Calcutta and a jury of five, who found unanimously that death was due to natural causes. Dr. Harris, who made the post-mortem examination, has recorded that though a few superficial marks were found on the wrist, he is certain that no joints were swollen, that there was no dislocation and no fracture of any limb. The truth is that the prisoner died from heat apoplexy; and from the circumstances of the case there can be little doubt that the ailment was to some extent connected with the exposure. It is true that on the representation of paid warder Shevelin the prisoners were in September removed to a sheltered corridor, and the Lieutenant-Governor acquits Mr. Beadon of any intentional cruelty. Still the proceedings in this matter betray a want of consideration and forethought, and the blame must rest upon the shoulders of the Superintendent under whose administration such proceedings were permissible.

The official visitors' conclusions on the subject of the alleged unwillingness of Mr. Beadon to listen to the prisoners differ in some respects from those formed by the Inspector-General of Jails, the latter being more favourable to Mr. Beadon. But even accepting Mr. Westmacott's view, it is clear that Mr. Beadon discouraged complaints most injudiciously, and that he disobeyed the rule of the Code which requires the Superintendent once in each week to hold a muster of the prisoners in order to hear their complaints, and to take such action on them as may seem necessary. Neglect in this matter is inexcusable in the Superintendent of a Central Jail, who has no other work to interfere with the performance of his jail duties, and who should spend a great portion of his time in ascertaining the actual condition of the prisoners, and in personally supervising all matters connected with the jail. The case of Ram Sunker Chackravarti, brought to light by the Superintendent himself, seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to indicate on the part of that officer a want of that vigilant attention to the details of prison management which is required from all Superintendents of Central Jails. Mr. Beadon states that Ram Sunker was sentenced to fetters for two months on the 3rd of last September; that between the 3rd and 16th September he was once punished with five hours' back handcuffs and twice pardoned for short work; that on the 17th he had to be sent to hospital with terribly bad sores on his legs caused by the fetters; and that he remained there till the day of his release on the 21st November, when he had to be sent in a gharry to the Campbell Hospital. It appeared to the Lieutenant-Governor surprising that the existence of these sores should not have become known to the Superintendent of the Jail or the Medical Officer previous to the 16th September, and he asked the Inspector-General of Jails to call upon those officers for an explanation. Mr. Beadon's reply is to the effect that prisoners undergoing the punishment of fetters are always supplied with leather gaiters or soft jute to protect the skin, and that consequently a sore would be likely to escape his notice until it became extremely aggravated, unless the sufferer himself complained. He also explains that prisoners frequently produce such sores intentionally in order to get sent to hospital. But Mr. Beadon has himself urged, as a reason for disliking the use of fetters, the fact that they are likely to cause sores, and it might have been expected that, knowing this, he would have taken special precautions to watch cases in which this punishment was inflicted, and have satisfied himself from time to time that sores were not being developed either by the fetters or by the prisoner's own action.

In the 35th paragraph of their report, the visitors give the following account of the circumstances under which some convicts had been kept at work after hours in August and September last:—

In the beginning of August there was a sort of combination among the European prisoners grinding wheat to reduce the task of 15 seers per diem. Mr. Beadon, in order to deprive them of the excuse that they could not finish the task in time, gave orders on August 7th that all who wished to escape punishment for short work might go on with their task after the usual closing hour (5 P.M.) till it was completed. We think it is pretty evident that this was interpreted into an order that they should be REQUIRED to go on, and, as a consequence, on the following day some men were kept up till 3 A M. The lateness of the hour may, we think, be taken as shewing conclusively that the convicts were not voluntarily endeavouring to finish their tasks. It looks more as if they were resolutely refusing to work, and the warders equally resolutely resolving that they should stay till they did. Mr. Beadon then ordered that they should never be kept up beyond midnight, so that it was only on one occasion that they were kept up till 3. Shortly afterwards Mr. Beadon states that the hour was reduced to 10 P M. The extracts from the Jailor's Report Book shew that the combination continued till the 5th September, after which the number of defaulters rapidly diminished till the 9th, on which date all European prisoners engaged on wheat-grinding gave their full task. After the 10*th September Mr Beadon stopped the practice, because, as he says, it caused much inconvenience and trouble to the prison officers, but it seems that by that time the combination had been overcome.*

Rule 581 of the Jail Code fixes the hours of labour for intramural convicts at 5-30 A.M to 11 A.M. and 12 noon to 4-30 P.M., from between the 15th March and the 14th October, and these hours cannot be altered without the sanction of Government. In 1881 the experiment was tried of keeping incorrigibly idle prisoners on work until 9 P.M. if their task were not completed before, and of postponing their evening meal until the work was done or until 9 P.M. When sanctioning this, it was distinctly stated that it should be regarded as merely an experiment, and in 1882 it was discontinued by the order of Sir Ashley Eden. Mr. Beadon's action in the present case was not even reported to the Inspector-General of Jails

Now upon a review of the whole case—and the Lieutenant-Governor is not conscious of having omitted any part of it—it is quite clear that the result of the enquiry held by the official visitors shows that the gravest of the allegations made in the Statesman and elsewhere are absolute falsehoods, or gross exaggerations or wilful distortions of facts; and the Lieutenant-Governor must express his surprise that such statements should have been published in a newspaper like the Statesman, apparently without any effort to test their truth. Sir Rivers Thompson is willing to recognise the right feeling which prompted the Editor of the Statesman to call attention to matters affecting men so situated as the inmates of our prisons, but he must agree with the official visitors that mis-statement or exaggeration in such a case "is the more to be regretted, as it must prejudice fair-minded persons against representations which, when made in an unvarnished manner, fully deserve to be dispassionately considered on their merits." Further, in disposing of the case as it affects Mr. Beadon, the Lieutenant-Governor confesses that a great difficulty presents itself. Here is an officer who in the discharge of an onerous and responsible duty has acted, it may be admitted, upon the extreme views of a strict disciplinarian. But the health of the prisoners as a body has not suffered under his administration. There has been no increase of mortality Discipline has improved in a manner to call forth the commendation of those whose duty it has been to criticise all his acts with the closest scrutiny. The total number of punishments in the Jail have decreased in a very marked manner since Mr. Beadon has held charge of it, while there have been comparatively few cases in which penal diet was awarded, and still fewer floggings. During the whole period of this official enquiry he has had to endure in silence charges publicly made against him in an influential newspaper, copied and reiterated with increased vehemence by other papers throughout the country, of systematic cruelty, torture, and inhumanity towards the convicts placed under his control. The effect of the accusations made against him personally has been heightened by allegations regarding the past management of the jails both in the interior and at the Presidency, for which not only no tittle of evidence is forthcoming, but most of which, even after a long lapse of time, are shown to be absolutely untrue. It is by no means the case that Mr. Beadon comes scatheless out of this enquiry, and the Lieutenant-Governor has already noticed the points on which he has exposed himself to condemnation. He had no justification for adopting on his own responsibility the mode of punishment enforced in the Presidency Jail. His frequent disregard of the complaints of prisoners and his action in the case of the man Weston merit the strongest condemnation, as also, though in a less degree, the order which, to break up a determined combination of prisoners against work, practically imposed for a brief period the continuance of labour beyond the terms prescribed by the Code. These established instances of dereliction of duty and inattention to rule are grave and serious offences, but when contrasted with the mass of open charges of brutality, now disproved and dispelled by the recent enquiry, they appear in a light which, in the Lieutenant-Governor's judgment, does not call for any severer penalty than the official censure which he records against Mr. Beadon, who must, however, be made to understand that any repetition of the faults which are here condemned will carry with it the forfeiture of his appointment. The Lieutenant-Governor does not forget that the warning which he now conveys to Mr. Beadon extends beyond him to all those officers in whose hand so large discretion is vested in the administration of our Jails, but they may be assured that, while he is determined to repress and punish all abuses of authority, he will be equally ready to support such authority where rightly exercised. It cannot be maintained that any man can be placed in the position of a Superintendent of one of these great Central Jails, in which a large number of prisoners of the worst character are confined, without the power of enforcing discipline and obedience by prompt punishment. The Lieutenant-Governor would never consent to curtail that power, and he certainly cannot be moved from the conviction of the necessity of maintaining it unimpaired by any such process of systematised misrepresentation as has been adopted in the present instance. The informants of the Statesman have gone back for arguments and illustrations in support of their charges so far back as 1872, 1877 and 1879. Many important reforms which are mainly due to Dr. Lethbridge and Sir Ashley Eden have been introduced into Bengal Jails, since even the latest of these periods, and the Lieutenant-Governor is quite certain that the supervision in the Department for many years past absolutely precludes the possibility of systematised or continuous misconduct in jail management

In most cases the Superintendents of Jails are the Civil Surgeons of the districts. Their duties are laid down with the fullest possible detail in the Bengal Jail Code, which has been prepared by the order of the Lieutenant-Governor and sanctioned by him. In this it is prescribed that the Superintendents should inspect the jails and visit all the prisoners once a day, and that they should be responsible for all matters relating to internal economy, food, discipline, labour, punishment, and general management. The Superintendents of District Jails are subject to the general control of the District Magistrates, who are bound to visit the jails once a week, or, if in any case unable to do so, to depute the duty to a senior Subordinate Magistrate. District Magistrates are official visitors of Central Jails, and Commissioners of Divisions and Sessions Judges are official visitors of all jails. These visitors are bound to inspect the jails regularly and frequently, and neglect of this duty is invariably brought to the notice of the Government by the Inspector-General. For the purpose of inspection, the Magistrate or official visitors may call for all books, papers, and records of every department of the jail, visit every ward, yard, and cell, and see every prisoner in confinement. They are bound to ascertain whether rules and orders are adhered to, and they are specially directed to examine carefully the punishment register and to bring to the notice of the Inspector-General any instance in which it may appear to them to be unnecessarily used. Their remarks and suggestions, together with any reply which the Jail Superintendent may have to make, have to be submitted to the Inspector-General of Jails for orders. Of course, in spite of all the precautions taken to provide effectual supervision and control over the management of jails, it is impossible absolutely to prevent the commission of improper acts by jail officials. The Lieutenant-Governor has now under consideration a case in which a warder is under trial for violence used to a prisoner. Again, neglect of the provision of the Jail Code, such as that to which the errors in Mr. Beadon's administration of the Presidency Jail were partly due, may remain unnoticed for a time, particularly when the health of the prisoners is not injuriously affected thereby. But such imperfections are inseparable from every system of administration, and the Lieutenant-Governor is confident that they are rare and wholly exceptional in Bengal jails.

Three of the visitors of the Presidency Jail in a note on the report now being considered recommend that corporal punishment should not be inflicted without the sanction of a Magistrate or of an official visitor. The Lieutenant-Governor is unable to accept this suggestion. At present corporal punishment is restricted to a comparatively small number of serious offences. It cannot in any case be inflicted until the prisoner has been examined by the medical officer and certified to be in a fit state to receive such punishment. Its use is narrowly scrutinised by official visitors, by District Magistrates, by the Inspector-General and by the Governments. Any further restrictions appear to Sir Rivers Thompson to be unnecessary and might become mischievous. The official visitors have also recommended that the Superintendent should be required to reside on the premises of the Presidency Jail. The Lieutenant-Governor fully concurs in the desirability of this, but, as is shown by the Superintendent in his letter of the 30th January, the measure is impracticable at present. The removal of the Jail from the existing site is now under consideration, and if this is decided upon, it would be manifestly a waste of money to build permanent quarters for the Superintendent, but the Inspector-General of Jails will be asked to consider whether some of the Jail buildings may not be made available for the Jailor and Warders, the number of prisoners from other jails being reduced, if necessary. The quarters formerly occupied by the Superintendent could then be restored to that officer.

ORDER.—That the papers be published in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

J. WARE EDGAR,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

No. 1437P, dated Calcutta, the 24th November 1884.

From—J. WARE EDGAR, Esq, Offg. Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial, Political and Appointment Departments,

To—The Commissioner of Police, Calcutta.

THE attention of the Lieutenant-Governor has been attracted to a letter signed "Humanity" in the Statesman newspaper of the 20th instant, and to the statements made in a leading article of the same paper, purporting to be on the authority of an official, regarding the alleged use of cruel punishments in the Presidency Jail. As the Inspector-General of Jails is absent on tour, the Lieutenant-Governor has directed me to communicate with the official visitors of the Presidency Jail on the subject. Mr. Rivers Thompson thinks that it would be desirable for you to call a very early meeting of the official visitors, and to make a full enquiry into the allegations contained in the letter and article referred to. He would be glad to receive a formal report of the result of the enquiry.

No. 150, dated Calcutta, the 10th January 1885.

From—The Official Visitors of the Presidency Jail, Calcutta,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department.

IN accordance with the orders of Government No. 1437P, dated the 24th November, the official visitors of the Presidency Jail met there on the morning of the 29th November, in order to make a full enquiry into the allegations contained in a letter, signed Humanity, in the Statesman of the 20th idem, and also in an article of the same date, and have subsequently held 5 meetings.

2. During the progress of the enquiry other articles on the same subject have also been published in the Statesman, and so far as they contain further allegations against the management of the jail, the visitors have deemed it their duty to bring these articles also within the purview of their enquiry.

3. For convenience of reference the letter of Humanity is herewith reproduced:—

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Some short time back, I remember to have read in your paper the reproduction of some remarks that originally appeared in the columns of a native contemporary, touching the very great and brutal extent to which the lash is used as a punishment upon the prisoners in the Presidency Jail of Calcutta, and advising all your local contemporaries of the necessity of watching the mortality bills of that jail. But putting the lash on the shelf for the present, will you permit me to refer to one of the several truly cold-hearted modes of punishment to which the unfortunate prisoners in the said jail have been subjected for the past six or eight months? The punishment to which I desire to allude is the "back-handcuffs." It is a punishment prescribed in the Jail Code, and if applied in the way intended by those who framed the Code, would not amount to anything very severe, as it would consist simply of a man being handcuffed with his hands behind his back, or resting upon his buttocks, and which I presume must have been, beyond doubt, the only way in which this punishment was originally intended to be applied. But the present Superintendent, almost immediately after he took charge of the Presidency Jail, adopted his own mode of applying it, and converted a punishment that was intended to involve ordinarily a little pain and inconvenience only into one attended with absolute torture and cruelty. I shall now describe his plan of administering it. The man's hands are handcuffed then behind his back, two rope traces attached to the left and right sides of the handcuff are made to fit round the shoulders, and a third is attached to the centre of the manacles. The hands are then drawn upwards until the palms fairly rest on the nape of the neck, or until the victim is able to reach the crown of his head with the tips of his fingers; this latter cord or rope is then fastened to his neck, thus throwing his whole frame into a crescentic form. With bodies thus arched, a dozen or more unfortunates at a time are made to perambulate up and down a yard, in the hot burning sun for five and six hours, during which they are not allowed a drink of water, and are permitted to partake of their first meal only after they have undergone this torture. The application of this barbarous punishment is entrusted to a convict warder, who is undergoing transportation for 10 years for manslaughter not amounting to murder, but perpetrated under most cold-blooded circumstances. This man, as may be fairly imagined, not only does all that his truculent nature can suggest to harass his victims, but belabours and otherwise maltreats them to an extent truly dreadful. The cries of the unfortunate sufferers at times, Sir, have been so great, that the Jailor who lives at the furthest end of the jail has been roused out of his slumbers, to proceed to the rescue, and on one occasion was just in the nick of time to save one poor fellow from a watery grave, he having stealthily found his way to a tank in the jail for the purpose of having a drink, accidentally fell into it whilst in the act of stooping, his hands being manacled at the time. On another occasion the Deputy Commissioner, whilst on his rounds during the latter part of August last, noticed the fearfully bruised condition of the body of a lad of the name of Jordan who had been subjected to this savage punishment, and on ascertaining the cruel way in which it was applied, made a note in the visitors' register, that it amounted to even something more than torture. But cui bono? So long as the authorities do not interfere, the humane officers of the jail care not a jot about the life of a prisoner under their care; and it is no exaggeration to say that hale, hearty strong men who are tortured in this truly fiendish manner are not only disabled sometimes for life, but almost always have to be admitted into hospital. On Sunday, the 14th September last, a robust hearty native who underwent this punishment was tortured and belaboured, moreover, to such an extent that soon after his admission the poor follow died. While suffering the greatest pangs he pointed out to the medical officer, who was enquiring into the circumstances, the convict warder, and affirmed that he had maltreated him whilst he was undergoing this awful punishment, which was the result of his suffering. And it would be truly interesting to know, Mr. Editor, what Doctor Harris attributed this poor man's death to. It is well known by every mortal in the jail, Sir, and I challenge anybody to repudiate it, that this man died from the effects of the torture and brutality to which he was subjected. Another native, equally healthy and strong, was admitted into hospital all but dead from the same cause, and at the same time with the deceased man. And it was rumoured that this poor fellow also had succumbed, but I never ascertained his fate, although I saw him being conveyed to the hospital. I am dealing with positive facts, which very little investigation, conducted in the proper way, will prove, and I unhesitatingly affirm that murders of a most atrocious character may be committed at any time in the Calcutta Presidency Jail if things are allowed to continue as they are. It is a positive slur upon the administration of Mr. Thompson to permit them to exist. I have been an eye-witness to all this, Sir, and for the sake of suffering humanity, make these disclosures in view to put a stop, if possible, to a state of affairs which no one would believe could exist in the very heart of a civilised community, and if you will accept them, I am prepared to supply you with a series of letters on matters connected with the Presidency Jail of Calcutta—assuring you that I shall be able to disclose matters the existence of which nobody but an eye-witness would ever believe. In conclusion, I might add that native prisoners are treated in a most merciless manner. It is a common thing to see them with bleeding and lacerated bodies wending their way to the hospital daily for treatment. The Jail Code lays it down that 30 stripes shall be administered only in very extreme cases, but from the time the present Superintendent took charge of the jail up to September last, in no instance did he administer less than the maximum number of stripes upon a native prisoner whom he thought it necessary to flog, no matter how trivial the offence. I can prove every word I have written, and you are at liberty to give up my name, if called upon to do so.

HUMANITY.

4. It will be seen that the main object of this letter is to draw attention to the punishment termed back-handcuffs, which the writer describes as "one attended with absolute torture and cruelty." Various other details are given, some of which are admittedly true, some are exaggerations, some are certainly false. We will first state the facts as we have ascertained them, and then submit our opinion on them for the consideration of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

5. Three kinds of handcuffs are authorised as a punishment; Sections 653, 654, and 655 of the Jail Code describe the mode of imposition, which is as follows:—

653. Handcuffs placed as a punishment on a prisoner's wrists, in front of him, shall in no case be kept on for more than 12 hours at a time by day or night; and they shall not be imposed for more than four days or nights consecutively.

654. Incorrigibly idle prisoners on whom other punishments have been tried without effect shall be fastened with handcuffs to a staple in the wall of the workshed during the hours of work only. They must be released and taken to the bathing, feeding, and latrine parades with the other prisoners of their gang. The staple in the wall will be high enough to prevent the prisoner sitting down, but shall not be higher than the prisoner's shoulder. This punishment shall not be combined with handcuffs behind the back, or solitary confinement.

655. Handcuffs placed upon the prisoner's wrists behind his back may be used as a punishment for very badly behaved and stubborn prisoners. No prisoner shall be so handcuffed for more than six hours at a time. The entry in the punishment book shall show the mode in which handcuffs are applied.

6. One of these methods is with the wrists behind the back—apparently it is intended to be the most severe of the three. Mr. Larymore, who was Superintendent of the Presidency Jail till the month of March last, told us in his evidence that he never resorted to this form of punishment, authorised though it is. One of his chief reasons for not doing so was that many convicts are so lithe that if their hands are simply handcuffed behind their back they can slip their body and legs through their arms, and bring their hands in front of them. Hence some arrangement of straps is necessary to fasten up the hands nearer the shoulders, and as the Jail Code is silent on this point, he thought it better not to resort to the punishment. He added however, that had he ever imposed it he would have applied straps. Dr. Mackenzie, a previous Superintendent, informed us that he had sometimes resorted to this mode of punishment, and had on such occasions also strapped up the hands for the reason stated by Mr. Larymore.

For ourselves, we cannot accept the necessity for the shoulder-straps, firstly because we think the number of prisoners who could pass their bodies through their arms in this way must be very small; secondly, because the convicts were all the time kept under the eye of a convict overseer; thirdly, because a simple belt round the wrist passed through the chain of the handcuffs would be completely effectual to prevent any attempt to evade the punishment.

7. Mr. Beadon, when at the Midnapore Central Jail, had tried the effect of this punishment as he considered with great success. In the annual report for the year 1880, he thus described his method of applying it:—

Paragraph 31.—"It is often difficult to decide upon the most applicable form of punishment for any of the above-mentioned offences, because the effect depends to a great extent upon individual circumstances. Corporal punishment being now only permissible for heinous offences, and abolished except as a very last resort for cases of idleness, it becomes difficult to devise means to induce many prisoners to perform full tasks. I have introduced a punishment here that seems to a great extent to meet the difficulty. Whenever a prisoner persistently refuses to work, or when he has been repeatedly brought up for short work, I place his hands behind his back and handcuff them together, making the palms meet;* two pieces of jute rope are then attached to the wrist and drawn up over his shoulders and under his arm-pits, until the hands reach nearly to between the shoulder blades; the ropes are then securely tied and the culprit is turned loose, like a trussed hen, for one, two, or three hours as the case may be, or until he promises to go to work with a will. It is a certain means of bringing a refractory prisoner to terms, and is an excellent punishment for repeated short work, and might, I think, with benefit be introduced into all our jails. Care must be taken to pull the string only so tight as to cause no actual pain, the chief merit of the plan being that after a short time the position becomes so irksome to the offender, that he begs to be released, and it also makes him an object of ridicule to his comrades, which I find has with many men a deterrent influence."

8. This may be taken as a description of the punishment as applied under Mr. Beadon's orders in the Presidency Jail, with the exception of the immaterial error noted regarding the palms meeting; but in the Presidency Jail it does not appear that it has ever been awarded until a prisoner promises to go to work, but always as a fixed punishment for a fault already committed. The duration of the punishment never depended on any promise the prisoner might make. Back-handcuffs were applied in our presence, and the convicts admitted that the apparatus was put on before us in the usual manner. It will be seen that with the exception of a rope round the neck (which is a misdescription), the description given in the letter of Humanity fairly corresponds with the admitted method of application, except as regards the all-important point of the degree of tension or force applied. Humanity says that the hands are drawn upwards till they rest on the nape of the neck, and the victim can reach the crown of his head with the tips of his fingers. This in the case of most men would be impossible. Individuals as we found differ greatly in this respect, and some could reach a point between their shoulder blades without pain which another person could not reach without breaking his arm. We take it, however, that the real question at issue is whether such force was used in drawing the hands upwards as amounted in any way to torture.

9. On this point, we find it extremely difficult to report with confidence. The custom was for the Superintendent to order the punishment during his daily round at about 9 A.M. The sentence was nearly always for 5 but occasionally for 6 hours' handcuffs. The prisoners were then taken to the refractory yard, and the handcuffs put on by a convict-warder, Sullivan till he was released in September, and then Kelly or Watson. This was done in the presence of a paid warder, who often assisted in the operation. Now we may take it as being admitted, and in any case it is undoubtedly a fact, that the hands were raised very much higher than is necessary to prevent the convict slipping his legs and trunk between his arms, raised high enough to make the position irksome. It is also evident that the border line between making the position irksome and painful is a narrow one, and that it rested more or less in the discretion of a convict-warder whether it should be overstepped or not. The convict, at the time of having the handcuffs put on, was required to bend forward with his head against the chest of the convict-warder or of the paid warder who was assisting. Nothing would be easier than for this man even unintentionally, still more intentionally (if so disposed) to drag up the hands so far as to make the position extremely painful. The jail officials assure us that there are some prisoners, especially habituals, who make it a practice to groan and complain of pain even from the simplest punishments, such as having to wear gunny-clothing, in order to convey the impression that they are suffering severely, and they stated that some of them would groan in this way while the back-handcuffs were being put on. The jailor, who had often been present on these occasions, stated that he believed in all such cases that the groaning was make-believe. But it follows that if the jailor or the paid warder who was present while the back-handcuffs were being put on could not attach any value to the groaning of the convict, he had hardly anything to enable him to judge whether the convict-warder was or was not applying that extra force which would make the position one of pain. Moreover, as the joints and muscles of one man differ so much in stiffness from those of another, the mere height to which the wrists were drawn up would be no sufficient test.

10. The evidence therefore comes to this. Several convicts and ex-convicts, both European and native, say that their hands were forced up so high as to be very painful. As regards the European witnesses, their evidence came before us under the following circumstances. Bason, who was released on the 29th November, applied to the Deputy Commissioner of Police for relief from the Claude Martin Fund. Mr. Lambert, who is one of our body, took the opportunity of questioning him about the jail, and obtained from him the names of Wakefield, Rebeiro, Francis, and Williams as prisoners who had been very recently released, and who were willing to come forward. Mr. Lambert then arranged with them to appear at our next meeting. Nearly all these witnesses, we are bound to say, were evidently quite willing to exaggerate and were often proved to be exaggerating; they are not therefore the class of witnesses on whom we should like to build with confidence any conclusion hostile to the jail officials; but still we can only say in reply that there is nothing to prevent their allegations that their hands were tied up painfully high being true; and assuming that the convict-warder had the will to make the punishment very painful to any particular convict, he could, we think, easily have done so.

11. But one of these witnesses was of a different class, in whose statement we could place greater confidence. A young man, named Williams, who was released from a four months' term of imprisonment on the 4th December, gave evidence before us on the 9th. He had uniformly behaved well in jail, had done his tasks, had never been punished, and admitted that prisoners who behaved themselves could get on without punishment. He had therefore no cause to feel any animosity against the jail officials, and he did not seem to feel any. He stated that when in hospital in August he could hear the prisoners groaning in the penal yard, about 80 yards off, as they were walking up and down back-handcuffed. He took us to the place, showed us the window from which he could see the men and hear them groaning, and we found on testing it that a man groaning in that yard could be heard in the hospital.

12. These considerations seem to us fully to justify Mr. Larymore's view that the punishment as practised is open to objection, because it may have the semblance of torture. It is not intended by Mr. Beadon that it should be torture, and we hesitate to say that it is proved that any jail official or even convict-warder has ever made it torture; but it is our opinion (1) that it could easily be made very painful; (2) that many convicts allege that it was so; (3) that the power of making it painful must rest in the hands of subordinates and even of fellow-convicts, because the very habit which some convicts have of complaining on insufficient grounds would operate to prevent superiors discriminating between cases of real and only of pretended pain. Hence we have no data to justify us in denying that in many cases the suffering has not been simulated.

13. As regards the charge of marching the convicts up and down in the burning sun for five or six hours during which they are not allowed a drink of water, and are permitted to partake of their first meal only after they have undergone this torture, we stand on surer ground. We have not heard of a single instance in which back-handcuffs were imposed on men fasting. Each prisoner receives 1½ chittacks of soaked gram with salt before he goes to his work, and this he would receive about 6 A.M., long before the Superintendent comes round; but "Humanity," who after much delay presented himself before Mr. Lambert on the 26th December, under a promise to conceal his name, said that he referred to the first regular meal, at 11-0 A.M. This meal the prisoners were (he says) not allowed to partake of till after they were released, which would be about 2 or 2½ P.M., and the correctness of this is acknowledged. The Superintendent adds that the men have never been exposed to the sun during the heat of the day, and that water is always stored and given in limited quantities to those who may at any time require it. Our enquiries fully bear out the latter statement; the convict-overseer in whose charge they were placed, might, of course, refuse water at his discretion, but it was provided and it was intended that it should be given, and it is not a complaint made to us that water was not given. But as regards exposure to the sun we think Mr. Beadon mistaken. The refractory yard has many walls, but no verandahs under which men can walk up and down, and we take it as certain that between 9 A.M. and 2 P.M. in April to August there are many hours when the sun is too vertical to allow sufficient shade to be obtained for men to walk up and down in it from walls only 9 or 10 feet high on the E. and S. and 15 to 20 feet high on W. and N. After midday these latter walls would give some shade. Indeed, paid warder Shevelin, who impressed us very favourably, virtually admitted that it was because there was no protection in the refractory yard against sun and rain that he got permission to bring the convicts undergoing this punishment into the adjacent penal yard, which has two verandahs in it, while about the end of September they were moved into the corridors, where they would be fully protected against sun and rain. Prior to this they must often have had to walk up and down in the sun, and the convict-overseer in charge could always make them do so if he liked.

14. To sum up, it is obviously a very grave objection to the mode of punishment that it leaves so much more to the discretion of the convictwarders than other punishments do; and though the evidence that this discretion has been abused in the Presidency Jail is not such as we can implicitly trust, there is evidently great danger of abuse.

15. As regards the effects of the punishment on the prisoners submitted to it, we are in a better position to speak. The evidence on the 29th November will shew that at our first meeting we picked out the 9 convicts who had been the last to undergo this punishment, and not one of them exhibited any external marks. Subsequently we had up in a row 44 more of the convicts who had also been most recently punished with back-handcuffs, and in no case did we find any injury of a serious kind. Some 5 had either slight bruises on the shoulders where crossed by the straps, or abrasions on the wrists. This confirms Mr. Lewis's evidence to the same effect. Either their flesh may have bruised more easily or their hands may have been tied up tighter than the remainder. Moreover, the evidence of Moonshee Abdul Guffoor, the Deputy Superintendent of the Jail, goes to shew that for one or two days after undergoing this punishment, the arms of prisoners would be so stiff or so painful that they could not work as efficiently as before, and that for nearly a week he would hardly expect full task from them. Of prisoners who had previously undergone this punishment, we have been able to find out three cases in which serious injury was alleged to have been caused by back-handcuffs, all of which we enquired into. The first of these, Rutton Das, who died on the 14th September, is evidently the man referred to by "Humanity." The second, Sharafut, is probably the second case referred to by "Humanity," as he was admitted to hospital on the 16th September. If so, he has not succumbed, but he has still a bad hand. The third is Rebeiro, released on the 24th August, who says that his left wrist has been injured. As regards the third case, Mr. Larymore, who was present, made Rebeiro admit that when he was in jail in Mr. Larymore's time he made the weakness of this very wrist a pretext for getting lighter work. Under such circumstances, the risk of injury to his wrist was obviously greater, but whether it has been made weaker than it was before or not, we cannot say. The witness certainly endeavoured to conceal the fact that his wrist had always been weak.

16. Sharafut had been discharged from hospital on the 29th November. His arm had swollen from back-handcuffs, for which it had to be punctured. His hand when seen by us was still bad, but it was not caused by back-handcuffs. They were imposed on him on the same day as on Rutton Das, 12th September, and he did not go to hospital till four days afterwards. In hospital he was found with a piece of glass which he had been using for cutting the sore on his right hand, and on another occasion also he was found aggravating it with a bit of bamboo. It may be doubted therefore whether the condition of his arm is fairly traceable to the handcuffs.

17. Rutton Das was punished with back-handcuffs on the 12th September. On the 13th he was admitted into hospital with high fever, and on the 14th he died of heat apoplexy. An inquest was held as usual, and the jury found that he died from natural causes. The proceedings are annexed (Appendix II). The medical officer of the jail sees no reason to connect his death with the punishment, and it is in evidence that he eat his food on being released on the 12th, and it was not till 24 hours afterwards that his high fever set in. Still there is the fact that heat apoplexy among natives is a very rare disease, so rare that we have to go back 10 years for a similar death in the jail; that in his case the punishment was imposed in the refractory yard, in which if the sun was not clouded over, he must have been exposed to it, and that no other cause is forthcoming to explain why he should have had heat apoplexy.

18. The allegation that "while suffering the greatest pangs, he pointed out to the medical officer who was enquiring into the circumstances the convict-warder and affirmed that he had maltreated him while undergoing this awful punishment" is one of the exaggerations which disfigure the letter of "Humanity." "Humanity" admitted to Mr. Lambert that this was only hospital gossip, of the truth of which he had no personal knowledge, and we see no reason whatever to doubt Dr. Harris's statement that when Rutton Das was admitted to hospital his temperature was 106, and that he never opened his mouth in hospital till he died the following day. It is, of course, possible that before becoming unconscious he may have made some such statement to his fellow convicts, but this is pure rumour, of which we have no evidence.

19. We ought to say here something regarding the case of another man, Ishwar Chunder Majumdar, though the injuries which he says he received from being pushed down while undergoing back-handcuffs were only abrasions on the elbow. He is one of "Humanity's" principal informants, and we only heard of his case after "Humanity" came forward to Mr. Lambert on the 26th December. We thought it proper to have an extra meeting in order to inquire into his case and the incidents arising out of it.

20. He is a Sub-Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector who was sentenced to 4 years' imprisonment at Dinagepore, and after transfer to the Presidency and then to Buxar, came back to the Presidency in the beginning of February 1884. He was punished with back-handcuffs once on the 19th August for stealing tape from the Press to tie up his junghia, but it is shown as his 16th offence since he came back in February. He states that the handcuffs were put on while he was in a sitting position. His head was held between the knees of paid warder Johnson while convict warder Watson dragged up his hands till he suffered most excruciating pain. Convict overseer Sullivan afterwards pushed him down for not walking up and down and when he fell he hurt his elbows, rubbing the skin off them. He says that back-handcuffs are much more painful than stripes, which he had a month or two previously. When released he could not eat his food. We are bound to say, however, that we cannot accept his evidence (which he gave in English and very coolly and collectedly) as trustworthy in all points regarding the manner in which back-handcuffs are applied. Not only was he contradicted by Johnson and Sheo Churn, a prisoner who was back-handcuffed at the same time, but also his exaggerations were evident. He said that Dr. Harris refused to admit him into hospital because he had orders from Mr. Beadon not to admit men suffering from back-handcuffs, a fact which Dr. Harris flatly denied, but also that Mr. Beadon used to strike prisoners with a thick stick, holding it in both hands. We thought it but fair, however, after what this witness had said, to ask the Inspector-General, Mr. Westmacott, who was present, to transfer him at once to Alipore, and this was done that same day.

21. Mr. Beadon claims for this punishment various advantages. He says that it proves an excellent deterrent; that it causes less corporeal injury than fetters which frequently cause nasty sores;* and that by its agency he has been able to diminish the number of punishments, and at the same time to improve the working and discipline of the jail; lastly, that his hospital and mortality returns will compare favourably with those of periods during which this punishment has not been resorted to.

22. We have carefully gone into the evidence of these contentions, and are in a position to report that it generally bears out all that Mr. Beadon says as summarised above. That the punishment is an effective deterrent is admitted; that it causes fewer sores and external marks than fetters do, may, we think, be also conceded; that it has enabled Mr. Beadon to reduce the number of punishments is also clearly shown from the comparative table (Appendix I) which we annex to this report. We have contrasted the period during which the punishment has been in vogue—March 18th to November 18th in 1884—with a similar period in 1883 and 1882.

23. It will be seen that during that period in 1882 the sentences to stripes were only 41 and to penal diet 177, but the total number of punishments amounted to 5,293, the favorite punishment being simple fetters, which were imposed in 3,227 cases. In 1883 the total sentences declined to 4,535: 41 sentences of stripes, the same number as before, and only 4 sentences to penal diet. The staple punishment as before was simple fetters imposed in 2,918 cases. In 1884, during the eight months tested, the total number of punishments fell to 3,480: stripes were inflicted only 27 times; penal diet 117; back-handcuffs appear as a new entry, and were imposed in the simple form 710 times, in lieu of which simple fetters fell to 1,037, being 1,881 less than in 1883, and 2,190 less than in 1882. In short, by imposing the more severe form of punishment about 750 times, nearly three times that number of lesser punishments have been saved. We have also reliable evidence that discipline and order have improved in the jail. Mr. Lewis, the Superintendent of Printing, and Mr. Ross, who is now Assistant Superintendent of Stationery, both testify to the improvement in the discipline of the Jail, which they consider better than it has ever been before, and we consider their testimony entitled to the highest weight. Again during the present year it has not been necessary to send, as it usually is, a consignment of the most incorrigible offenders from the Presidency Jail to Alipore. Mr. Beadon has proved equal to coping with his incorrigibles. Lastly, as regards mortality, the deaths which were 63 in 1879 fell to 37 in 1880, 26 in 1881, 28 in 1882, 32 in 1883, and 25 up to the end of November in 1884. This shews no increase, and unless Rutton Das is an exception, no death can be in the remotest degree connected with back-handcuffs.

* On this point we would draw special attention to the case of Ram Sunker Chakravarti referred to by Mr. Beadon in his report to the Inspector-General of Jails, which is printed at the head of the evidence. As irons are a fully recognised punishment, we have not gone into this case more fully, but the prisoner is now in the Campbell Hospital, to which he had to be removed by garree on his release.

24. Again we give (in Appendix G) the figures showing admissions to hospital from 1873 to 1884; from 1879 onwards the figures are as follows—

	No. of admissions.
1880	2,157
1881	1,981
1882	1,829
1883	1,564
1884 (up to end of November)	1,436

During all this period the average strength has not fluctuated materially.

25. We think therefore it must be admitted that so far as it is to be judged by the results claimed for it by Mr. Beadon, the new mode of punishment has been successful, and if we cannot concur with the Superintendent in "recommending that the sanction of Government be obtained to its being made a clearly defined and recognised punishment," it cannot be on the ground that it has failed in its object. That such sanction would be necessary admits, we think, of no doubt; for apart from the fact that tying up the hands so as to make the position irksome seems hardly to be in accordance with the spirit of the Code, it is equally clear that the punishment has not been reserved in the words of the Code for 'very badly behaved and stubborn prisoners.' Wakefield, it will be observed, had handcuffs imposed twice, though only in for one month, and we came across several cases in which convicts had been sentenced to it as the first punishment after admission. Our objection to the punishment especially as an ordinary resource is, as we have said, that it leaves the convict too much in the hands of the convict-warders and jail subordinates; that what is termed its irksomeness is too approximate to pain, and not improbably sometimes becomes very severe pain. The habitual who has become a confirmed malingerer is a well-known embarrassment in all jails, and especially in the Presidency Jail, and in the contest which he carries on with jail officials, these officers are under a constant temptation to resort to more and more painful punishments to break him. He, on the other hand, becomes more and more dogged in his resistance. Dealing with men of this class is apt to blunt the sensibility even of the kindest officers, and it is therefore that they need the check of a Code limiting them, save in most exceptional cases, to punishments which are of a comparatively humane character, and it may well be that it is better that a certain percentage of convicts should seem to triumph and spend a large portion of their confinement in separate cells or undergoing other mild punishments, than that the jail officers should be in a position to conquer the most obstinate convict by being armed with powers which are greater than can be safely entrusted to any one who is placed in charge of persons so helpless as are convicts in jail.

26. The case of Ishwar Chunder Mazumdar seems to us to be very much in point. At Buxar he did pretty well, but in the Presidency he has been continually offending in petty ways and manifestly braving the jail officers, with the result that he was constantly punished. He was sentenced to one month's heavy irons on April 2nd for refusing to take his night-soil gumlah to the Hospital. On the 5th May he was sentenced to wheat-grinding in irons. Then on the following day to bar fetters for ten days for leaving work and being noisy. While in irons he gave short work, for which he was first warned; and continuing to give short work while in bar fetters—a very severe punishment in itself—was on the 14th May given 30 stripes for a third case of short work, though only 5 lbs. deficient out of 30 lbs. It would seem probable that having only recently been put to this kind of task, and being in bar fetters, he hardly could give the full quantity at the time when this severe punishment was imposed. His ticket shews generally that he was a man who by this time was doggedly resisting, and that he was very severely dealt with.

27. The doubt we feel whether this sort of contest ought to go on lies at the root of the question, and if our view in this respect is not admitted, but it is considered that the Jail Superintendent must be in a position to conquer within a limited period the most determined malingerer, then he must have some effective deterrent, and there is something to be said for back-handcuffs as compared with other equally deterrent punishments.

28. Dr. Harris, it will be seen, is of opinion that if the punishment is legalised, a prisoner ought to be certified fit before undergoing it, though he thinks that it would only be detrimental in the case of one in every 200 or 300 convicts. Back-handcuffs were discontinued by Mr. Beadon as soon as this enquiry was ordered, the last case being on 26th November. It will be understood from the tenor of this report that our opinion is adverse to this mode of punishment as applied in the Presidency Jail, and with these remarks we would leave the matter to the decision of Government.

29. The other allegations made against the management of the Jail can be more briefly disposed of. A prisoner undergoing back-handcuffs did once make his way to the adjacent tank to drink while the entrance to the refractory yard was left open, but he did not fall into the tank nor was he nearly drowned. The jailor was called, but arrived after he was back again in the yard.

30. The Deputy Commissioner of Police, Mr. Lambert, once noticed a small bruise on the convict lad Jordan, but he made no entry in the visitors' book as alleged, as Jordan attributed it to a fall. It having been stated in a petition forwarded to us by Government that Jordan had been most brutally treated and injured, we examined him carefully, and also requested the Surgeon-General to appoint a medical officer specially for that purpose. Accordingly Dr. Sanders came to the Jail, examined Jordan, and certified that "he has no bruises on his body, nor any marks of old injuries; he has no dislocation of any of his joints, nor are any of his ribs broken." He is a half-witted boy, and we have no reason to believe that he has been maltreated. He has just been released.

31. We disbelieve the statement that it is a common thing to see convicts with bleeding and lacerated bodies wending their way to hospital. "Humanity" said to Mr. Lambert that he referred to prisoners who had been flogged.

32. Mr. Beadon admits that he usually imposes the maximum number of stripes, because he inflicts that punishment so rarely and only in bad cases. He certainly has resorted to this punishment but rarely.

33. Dr. Mackenzie has himself explained in an annexure the circumstances regarding the photograph of a prisoner at the triangles. We have seen a copy of the photograph; it is not the photograph of an Affghan prisoner, but of a well-known Calcutta thief sentenced to a judicial flogging, and it is taken before the punishment was inflicted, so that the insinuation that the man was kept in a painful position so as to be photographed is certainly untrue. Dr. Mackenzie withdrew from the enquiry after our second meeting in consequence of the remarks made against him, and for this reason his name is not attached to this report.

34. The belief that the assassination of Mr. Justice Norman was in some way connected with cruelties in the Presidency Jail is, we believe, entirely unfounded. It is true that an Affghan prisoner, named Mudday Khan, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Norman on the 27th January 1870. Mr. Norman was assassinated on the 20th September 1871, and the incident referred to, viz., this prisoner being put on the treadmill and striking a warder with a hammer, took place in the middle of the year 1872. The Judge who sentenced Mudday Khan for the new offence was Mr. Markby, and the sentence imposed was two and not seven years. Mudday Khan did not die in Jail, but was released on the 28th January 1875 and conveyed to the frontier.

35. In the issue of the 3rd December the Statesman draws attention to a fact which had come out in evidence that convicts had been kept at work till 3 A.M. to complete the daily tale of wheat-grinding. The facts of this matter are that in the beginning of August there was a sort of combination among the European prisoners grinding wheat to reduce the task of 15 seers per diem. Mr. Beadon, in order to deprive them of the excuse that they could not finish the task in time, gave orders on August 7th that all who wished to escape punishment for short work might go on with their task after the usual closing hour (5 P.M.) till it was completed. We think it is pretty evident that this was interpreted into an order that they should be required to go on, and as a consequence on the following day some men were kept up till 3 A.M. The lateness of the hour may, we think, be taken as showing conclusively that the convicts were not voluntarily endeavouring to finish their tasks. It looks more as if they were resolutely refusing to work, and the warders equally resolutely resolving that they should stay till they did. Mr. Beadon then ordered that they should never be kept up beyond midnight, so that it was only on one occasion that they were kept up till 3. Shortly afterwards Mr. Beadon states that the hour was reduced to 10 P.M. The extracts from the jailor's report book show that the combination continued till the 5th September, after which the number of defaulters rapidly diminished till the 9th, on which date all the European prisoners engaged on wheat-grinding gave their full task. After the 10th September Mr. Beadon stopped the practice, because, as he says, it caused much inconvenience and trouble to the prison officers, but it seems that by that time the combination had been overcome. We have examined the books on the days following the 10th, and find that nearly all the prisoners are reported as having completed their tasks.

36. It thus appears that there was a combination to reduce the daily task, that the Superintendent adopted this arrangement for overcoming it, and that he virtually gained his object. Whether he was justified in resorting to this expedient is a matter for the Government to decide. Our own opinion is adverse to it, because we think that in the interests of both jail officers and convicts, it is desirable that the powers of the former should be strictly limited by the Code, and it is better that attempts to give short work should succeed than that officers should strain their powers in the endeavour to break down a combination. We should add that the evidence before us goes to show that 15 seers is not too large a task, except for a new admission, till he gets accustomed to the work.

37. In the Statesman of the 5th December there is another article in the course of which it said "another old jail official paid us a visit a day or two ago, and in the course of conversation told us that he had himself known 200 lashes inflicted upon a prisoner, and had seen a man so brutally flogged that every atom of the flesh had been torn from his back until the bare shoulder blade of the man glittered in the sun." So astounding an assertion, in which no clue is given to the year, the jail, the victim, or the surroundings of the alleged outrage, it is of course impossible to disprove, but we are bound to say that we have come across nothing which affords the least colour to the supposition that anything of the kind can have happened in the Presidency Jail within any reasonable period of time. Such an atrocity would certainly be contrary to every rule and tradition of the jail, and so far as we can ascertain the lash on a man's shoulders has never been used in this jail, and the regulation maximum of 30 stripes with a rattan on the buttocks never exceeded.

38. In the Statesman of the 7th there is another article in which the heavy mortality of the jails is attributed to the starvation of the prisoners and the cruelties practised on them. It is said "are floggings till the men's backs are gangrened, back-handcuffs until their arms are torn from the sockets, imprisonment in total darkness for days together with nothing but the prison floor to lie on, and without a blanket even in the coldest weather, food so vile that the prisoner cannot swallow it, hard labour for 21 hours of the 24 day after day, not sufficient, we ask, to account for the death of these woebegone despairing wretches?"

39. We cannot regard this passage as anything but gross exaggeration, which is the more to be regretted as it must prejudice fair-minded persons against representations, which when made in an unvarnished manner fully deserve to be dispassionately considered on their merits.

40. The substratum of truth which underlies this sensational paragraph is that in 1879, when floggings and penal diet were very frequently imposed, the mortality did rise to an extent which makes it maintainable that there was some connection between the two.

The following table brings the figures so far as this jail is concerned into easy juxta-position. The periods compared are not the entire year but the 8 months March to November in each year, because it is for this period that the figures of 1884 are instructive:—

	Floggings.	Penal diet.	Penal labour.	Deaths.
1879	828	547	283	41
1882	41	177	80	16
1883	41	4	69	19
1884	27	117	7	17

The year 1879 was not a year of exceptional mortality in Calcutta; on the contrary, the death-rate was slightly below the average.

41. In the Statesman of the 21st December some of the evidence given before us is reproduced. Apparently it is a narrative from memory and somewhat coloured of what the witnesses said to us. As the evidence given before us is annexed to our report, it is unnecessary to pick out the passages which seem inaccurate. There is a note however attached to Rebeiro's evidence which is entirely incorrect. Mr. Beadon was not asked to produce the apparatus of back-handcuffs, and he did not say that they had all been destroyed. There is absolutely no foundation for this assertion. At our previous sitting they had been produced and applied in our presence.

42. In the paper of the same day there is an article commenting on some of the evidence taken before us which had been printed, a copy of which had apparently reached the editor. We do not know how this occurred, but we do not in any way complain of the occurrence, as there is no cause whatsoever for secrecy or mystery as regards our proceedings. We have not ourselves taken any steps to make our proceedings public only because we considered it more proper to send them in to Government in the first instance and leave the question of publicity to His Honor. In this article it is said that in the evidence of the Deputy Superintendent of the jail he stated that he had heard prisoners yelling under the torture from back-handcuffs in another portion of the jail. This is an error, though justified by a misprint in the papers. Mr. Ross stated that he had not heard the prisoners yelling from the torture, but by a clerical error the "not" was omitted. Mr. Ross himself came forward to correct the error. There is no evidence to justify us in concluding that prisoners used to "yell" under the infliction of back-handcuffs, but on the other hand it is admitted that they would often groan and complain, especially during the process of application, either from pain, or to simulate pain.

43. It is also said if any prisoner went up to Mr. Beadon he would straightway order him to be gagged and confined in the dark cells for two days. We do not find any reliable evidence to warrant so general a conclusion, but we are bound to say that many of the convicts complained that the Superintendent would not allow them to defend themselves, but would receive as true any false charge that might be made. Mr. Beadon seemed indeed to admit that he would not allow prisoners to speak except on Sundays, on which day any prisoner would be heard. The impression left in our minds by the evidence is that Mr. Beadon has been less ready to allow prisoners to speak in their own defence than the interests of justice necessitate. No doubt he has experience of the shifts and excuses to which habitual malingerers resort when reported for short work or other such offences, and probably he finds it more conducive to discipline to refuse to listen to such excuses, but the inevitable result is that the subordinate jail officers and convict warders become more influential, and the prisoners certainly seemed to think that some of the convict warders could do anything they liked with them, and would make them have a very hot time of it if they complained. Moreover it was ascertained by us that convict Weston who on one occasion made a complaint to an official visitor, Syud Amir Hossein, which that gentleman on enquiry considered groundless, was punished for so doing with one month's irons. We think it is improper that any prisoner should be punished for making even groundless complaints to an official visitor unless that visitor himself asks that this should be done.

44. In conclusion we may add that the only one visitor who ever saw back-handcuffs on is Dr. Mackenzie. This is easily accounted for by the hours during which they were applied. The visitors are nearly always obliged to visit the jail in the morning, while the handcuffs would not be put on till 9 or 9-30. Back-handcuffs being an authorised punishment so far as the name is concerned, there was nothing to attract attention to it in the punishment register which each visitor examines, and on no occasion did any prisoner make any complaint to an official visitor regarding it.

45. It is but just to draw attention to the fact that the Presidency Jail is a particularly difficult one to manage, on account of the large proportion of the convicts who were habituals, and also the large proportion who are educated, and therefore less given to passive obedience than convicts in mofussil jails. Also the jail is not provided with any solitary cells, except the few dark cells. These are characteristics of this jail which greatly augment the difficulty of managing the convicts.

46. We do not know whether we are exceeding our function in reporting that we are unanimously of opinion that the Jail Superintendent ought to reside at the Presidency Jail, as he did till very recently. It is not fair either to the prisoners or to the officer who holds the appointment that he should not be constantly on the spot.

47. In conclusion we would express a hope that we have exercised a reasonable discretion in enquiring into some of the most important complaints which have cropped up in the course of our enquiry, and ignoring the details which would have delayed our report indefinitely without any equivalent advantage. We have endeavoured to make our enquiry as complete as could be done within a reasonable period.

We have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient servants,

H. L. HARRISON,

B. L. GUPTA,
AMEER HOSSEIN,
JADULALL MULLICK,

Official Visitors of the Presidency Jail.

The undersigned official visitors desire to add that in their opinion a rule should be introduced that flogging should never be imposed as a jail punishment except with the sanction of a Magistrate or of an official visitor.

Copy of report made by MR. BEADON to the Inspector-General, Jails, in the letter signed "Humanity."

IT will not be difficult to ascertain that the defamatory letter signed by "Humanity" in the Statesman's issue of the 20th instant is the production of one Hawthorne, who was recently an inmate of the civil jail; for the correspondent authorizes the editor, if necessary, to disclose his name. Be he who he may, however, his untruthfulness can at once be established by the fact that it is absolutely impossible for a prisoner of the civil jail ever to see what is going on in the criminal jail; whereas "Humanity" says he was an eye-witness to all the atrocities he describes. I have purposely visited the civil jail in order to discover what view can be had from it of the criminal jail, and I find that only from one position, namely the upper verandah of the civil block, can any portion of the interior of the criminal jail be viewed. From this position all that can be seen are some upper cells of a neighbouring building which used to be occupied, only at night, by Europeans, but which have lately been entirely vacated, because it was discovered that Hawthorne had been in the habit nightly of conversing with the convict occupants, and a small corner of the upper verandah of the hospital block; and except at these two spots not a prisoner nor a particle of the interior of the jail enclosure is ever visible.

Civil prisoners on arrival at the Presidency Jail are marched round outside the wall and admitted through a gate at the back of the jail, which opens into the civil yard.

Similarly, when released, they are brought round to the main gate. "Humanity" had therefore no possible opportunity of seeing what he positively asserts he witnessed with his eyes. I will now endeavour to answer as briefly and clearly as possible the malevolent charges in the order as they are made by "Humanity."

"Back handcuffs" are not applied in the cruel manner described by "Humanity." He has, either in his ignorance or malevolence—probably both—grossly exaggerated my method of inflicting this form of punishment. This is how the punishment is actually enforced—

The prisoner's hands are handcuffed together behind his back; two straps running across the shoulders are then attached to the handcuff chain, and the wrists are drawn up to nearly the level of the shoulder blades, if they will reach thus far without a strain; if not, then only so far as they will conveniently reach: the straps are brought round under the armpits and fastened again to the handcuff chain, care being taken that they are not pulled tight enough to cause any pain: the throat and chest are perfectly free. The chief merit in this punishment is that in a short time the position becomes so irksome that the most refractory prisoner will gladly consent to work and behave himself if unfastened. It is very much dreaded, and is consequently proportionately deterrent.

During the hot weather months the punishment was carried on under a shady wall in the refractory yard, but lately on account of the rain, and because the prisoners are under better supervision, I have had it administered in the corridor of one of the habitual blocks.

Prisoners have always eaten their first meal before this punishment is applied: they have never been exposed to the sun during the heat of the day, and water is always stored and given in limited quantities to those who may at any time require it.

The handcuffs are applied in the presence of a paid warder of the jail, and they are likewise unfastened in the presence of a paid warder, who then marches the prisoners back to their respective worksheds and reports in his daily report book that none of them were in any way injured and that all had re-commenced work.

They are not to my knowledge maltreated or belaboured by the convict warders who apply the handcuffs, both of whom, by the way, are imprisoned under section 394, Indian Penal Code, and not for "manslaughter amounting to murder;" nor are the cries of the sufferers such as "Humanity" describes. In fact, quiet and order invariably reign throughout the whole jail.

I have freely practised this form of punishment since early in 1880, and in my annual report on the administration of the Midnapore Jail for that year, I fully and accurately described how the handcuffs were applied. I know of no instance in Midnapore when a prisoner so punished was ever the worse for it, and it has been seen in practice by official visitors, medical and other officers, without apparently exciting their commiseration or disapproval.

During the past seven or eight months, out of 4,000 warnings and punishments, as many as 734 prisoners were punished with back handcuffs. It will thus be seen that since I have been in charge of the Presidency Jail about 20 per cent. of offences have been treated with back handcuffs. I only know of one instance during that period of a prisoner having afterwards suffered in consequence, and having had to go to hospital. Notwithstanding that "Humanity" says it is a common thing to see them with bleeding and lacerated bodies wending their way to hospital daily for treatment."

Compare this result with that of "fetters" under which punishment many prisoners in all our jails are constantly getting abrasions which develop into nasty and dangerous sores. It was only on the 21st instant that a prisoner, No. 8312, Ram Sunker Chakravarti, was released with such sores on his legs that he was unable to walk into my office, and I had to go out into the passage between the gates in order to question him before release. He had been awarded "fetters" for two months on 3rd September last. His fetters were removed by my order on the 16th idem, owing to his having developed sores on his legs. Between the 3rd September and the 16th, he had once been punished with "five hours' back handcuffs" and twice pardoned for short work The handcuffs had not hurt him in the least, but the sores from 13 days' irons were terribly bad, and I was obliged to order the removal of irons and to send him to easy work in the press. On the 17th September he went to hospital and there remained until the day of his release, i.e. 21st November. His house being at Tipperah, he was placed in a gharry and made over to the Police. Another instance of the bad effect of fetters, similar to the above, is now in hospital. These, however, are unusual cases. I merely mention them to shew that "back handcuffs," as applied by me, are certainly less dangerous and objectionable than a punishment of "fetters" Rule 655 of the Jail Code distinctly says that back handcuffs may be used for very badly behaved and stubborn prisoners, and only for six hours at a time. It is evident therefore that the framers of the rule intended it to be a much more severe punishment than that of handcuffs placed on a prisoner with his hands in front of him which may be kept on for 12 hours. "Humanity" is therefore wrong, I submit, in his supposition that back handcuffs were not prescribed as a severe punishment. At all events, if the hands were not tied up in some way, nothing would be easier then for a prisoner so fastened to squat down and, by passing his legs through his arms, at once get his hands in front of him. My method of applying this punishment has, as before stated, been officially reported to the Inspector-General of Jails in my annual report for 1880, and as I have never been ordered to discontinue it, I have for the past four years considered that I have been acting within my powers in so administering it. Of course if you think the practice should be discontinued I have only to obey; but before deciding about it, I sincerely trust you will fully consider and examine the matter. It is by no means inhuman, or even painful, but it is irksome and so dreaded that by means of it I am able almost entirely to dispense with the lash. In fact, I would rather recommend the entire abolition of flogging than that this mode of punishment should be suppressed, and I would strongly recommend that the sanction of Government be obtained to its being made a clearly defined and recognized punishment.

The instance referred to in "Humanity's" letter of the poor fellow who was saved from a "watery grave" was enacted as follows:—The balta-walla, or waterman, who brought water into the refractory yard for the use of the prisoners undergoing back handcuffs on the day of the occurrence referred to carelessly left the door of the yard open, and the overseer in charge noticing that the balta-walla was about to put water into the wrong jumlah left his prisoners to go and shew the balta-walla where to put the water. While the overseer's attention was thus distracted a particularly contumacious prisoner, purely for the sake of creating a disturbance, rushed out of the yard and down the steps of an adjoining tank. If he intended to drown himself I can only say he was very tardy about it; for he had ample time to fling himself into the water before he was caught. When seized he was in the act of lying down close by the water, trying to drink. When brought up before me the next day he gave, as his reason for running to the tank, that he merely wanted to drink Thus does this simple episode assume the form of a veritable tragedy through the agency of "Humanity's" misleading assertions. "Humanity" next refers to the case of "a lad called Jordon, who had been subjected to this savage treatment." This is the first intimation I have had of the Deputy Commissioner having noticed Jordon, and the Visitors' Book records no note on the subject. This is therefore another rancorous falsehood which needs no further comment on my part.

I know of no "hale, hearty men who are treated in this truly fiendish manner" having been injured for life or even admitted to hospital. The only case of injury in any way of which I am cognizant being the one case already referred to by me.

I admit that I generally award the full authorized number of stripes, provided the offender is passed fit to bear them by the medical officer, when I order a prisoner to be flogged. We are instructed now to flog as seldom as possible, and if therefore a prisoner deserves in my opinion less than 30 stripes I usually prefer awarding him some other kind of punishment. I have flogged only 27 prisoners during the eight months I have had charge of this jail, and some of these have received less than 30 stripes.

I now come to the charge of murdering the prisoner who died on the 14th September last. On the 12th September an apparently robust, healthy prisoner was punished with "back handcuffs," not in the sun, but in the shade. He was untied at the usual hour and marched by paid warder Shevlin back to his work. The paid warder assured me that the prisoner complained of nothing at the time, and it is proved that he worked at wheat grinding for the remainder of that day. On the 13th September he went to hospital and on the 14th he died. At the Coroner's inquest reference was made by one of the jurors to the record of "back handcuff" on deceased's ticket, and the man's body was carefully inspected. Had any signs of violence been visible, I think it may fairly be assumed that strict enquiry would then have been made into the matter The medical officer attributed the death to "heat apoplexy," and in no way connected it with the punishment inflicted two days before. The jury returned a verdict of "death from heat apoplexy." Lastly, considering that the debtor Hawthorne (who undoubtedly is the author of Humanity's letter) was released on the 6th September, I am at a loss to know how he (or for the matter of that any other civil prisoner) could have seen "another native on the 14*th September* conveyed to the hospital," about whose fate he never ascertained.

I am unable to guess even to what case he may be alluding.

I think I have now answered all the allegations made by "Humanity" against me, and it only remains for me to add that I trust that a full and searching enquiry may be made regarding them.

TRUE copy of extract from a letter addressed by me to the Inspector-General of Jails.

29th November 1884.

W. àC. BEADON,
Superintendent, Presidency Jail.

The 29th November 1884.

Mr Beadon.—The back handcuffs are always applied in the presence of the paid European warder on duty at the time, and they are taken off in the presence of the same officer, who certifies to the fact in his book. The prisoners undergoing the punishment are always kept together in one place The handcuffs are always put on by one of two European warders (convicts)—Kelly and Watson. These two men were convicted under section 394, and each has six months' special remission for services in quelling an outbreak at Burma. The convicts are then left in the custody of a native convict overseer.

In and before September a prisoner named Sullivan was convict overseer, and he used to put on the handcuffs as well as supervise the prisoners while undergoing the punishment.

They would usually be kept on five hours. They would be put on about 9, when I go round. Water is provided for convicts undergoing this punishment. They would certainly have their early meal first. The punishment is always imposed for one day, and on the day of the orders. Never ordered one day for imposition the next. To the best of my belief Sullivan was a mild tempered man, in for theft. He was released in September. I cannot remember any instance in which a prisoner under backhandcuffs complained of punishment. The hands would be fastened up as high as they could go without great straining. The punishment is much disliked, and frequently awarded because so effective.

The last two days it has been discontinued. I was threatened with assault by a convict about five months ago. The plot was revealed to the Deputy Superintendent, and six of the 27 prisoners that have been flogged in my time were flogged on account of that. The cause of the discontent was that I kept the men more at work, so that I got 22 lakhs of impressions in place of 12 lakhs weekly. I would grade the most ordinary jail punishments as follows:—

Night handcuffs,
Seven days irons,
Ten days bar fetters,
Five hours back handcuffs,
One month's irons.
And the most severe—Stripes.

Penal diet is more usually imposed for being found with forbidden articles, as tobacco; but it is seldom imposed now. Forfeiture of marks is given to prisoners who are near their release, and feel the loss.

Dark cells, I consider, useless, and I rarely order them. Solitary confinement is good but I have no solitary cells.

Dr. Harris.—I remember the case of the man Rutton Das who died of heat apoplexy on the 14th September. He was admitted on the 13th suffering from high fever. His temperature was nearly 106°. His temperature rose to 107° in the mouth, and he had all the symptoms of heat apoplexy. He never opened his mouth in the hospital, and it is absolutely untrue that he pointed out the convict warder and affirmed that he had been maltreated while undergoing the punishment. At the post mortem I observed a few superficial marks on his wrists. None of his joints were swollen, there was no dislocation and no fracture.

I have seen back handcuffs on prisoners perhaps 20 times. Mr. Beadon introduced the punishment: Mr. Larymore did not employ it. I do not consider the punishment dangerous unless a man has some constitutional complaint, such as heart complaint; perhaps dangerous to one man in every 200 or 300. I think it would be advisable to have a prisoner medically certified fit before back handcuffs are imposed. Prisoners have to be certified fit before they can either be flogged or put on the treadmill. A flogging is I think a much severer strain on a man than back handcuffs. I do not see any reason for thinking that the back handcuffs had anything to do with the high temperature of Rutton Das the following day. I hardly know whether the punishment would be much more dangerous if those undergoing it are kept in the sun. It might be. I have never seen the men in the sun. I have never seen the men with their hands higher than their shoulderblades. When I have seen the men their hands have been raised with very little tension. The hands did not seem to me to have been pulled up so high as to inflict torture. What little I saw of Sullivan I thought he got on very well with prisoners.

Leg irons occasionally cause sores and ulcers by the men purposely taking off the leathers. I think that from a medical point of view I should perhaps prefer leg irons. I have only noticed two cases of injury from back handcuffs during the last eight months. One was a case of blister which caused a man to be in hospital for about a fortnight. The blister was on the hand caused by his rubbing his hand. In the other case, that of Sharafut, the right hand, forearm, and half the upper arm swelled, and the hand is still a little swollen He was discharged from hospital this morning. I very strongly suspect that he did something to bring it about. A piece of glass was found in the possession of Sharafut, and he admitted that he had been using it for cutting his hand. He also was caught making new sores and enlarging old ones with a thin piece of bamboo. This would cause irritation and would prevent the sores from healing. This man was two months in hospital I cannot say how many times I have seen injuries from irons.

Sharafut Ali—In for 7½ years. He describes that his hands were handcuffed behind his back, drawn up as far as his neck, and then tied up to a door so that he was standing on his toes.

(It was observed from the registers that back handcuffs were imposed on the 12th September, and he was admitted into hospital on the 16th September.)

He had twice before had back handcuffs, on which occasions he was not hung up, only made to walk up and down.

Dr. Harris—Asked that it might be noticed that the mortality in the jail since 1st January had been 25 among the native prisoners, and three Europeans. Of these, 15 out of the 28 had never been punished, and four had been punished with back handcuffs. One of these was Rutton Das and the other three died one of enteric fever one month and 23 days afterwards, one of measles two months afterwards, and one of a burn one month and 11 days afterwards.

The visitors have adjourned to the refractory ward where Sharafut pointed out how and where he had been tied up. Paid warders Shevelin and Johnson denied his statements both as regards the door to which he was tied being open and as regards the hand being dragged back, and pointed out that these statements were improbable. On returning to the office they proceeded to examine—

Bissu—Punished on the 26th instant with back handcuffs, who described the tension as very great, and the process as very painful. He had been punished six times since May last, and is described as a very impertinent man. He had no marks of abrasions or bruises.

Situl—Punished with back handcuffs on the 21st instant. shews his hands below his shoulderblades as the extent to which they were triced up. He has no marks. He says that while walking up and down they are punched and beaten.

Soobratee—Also punished on 21st says his hands were tied behind his back, like Bissu (who had been tied up before the visitors with his hands raised as high as they would go without any great tension), but his hands a little higher. He had no mark of any injury.

Khudu Miah—Also punished on 21st. No marks Says his hands were tied up much higher than Bissu's. Cannot get them up nearly as high as he says.

Laban Sheik—Punished on the 19th. No marks. Says his hands were tied as Bissu's were. No one beats him at the same time.

Hira Singh—Punished on the 20th. His hands were not tied so tight as Bissu's now are. No marks.

Abdool Khan—On the 18th. No marks. Also says his hands were looser than Bissu's.

Hurry Churn Surmakar—Punished on the 20th. No marks. His hands were tied as Bissu's—neither looser nor tighter.

Punchanund Nundy—Punished on the 19th. Had irons on, and his right foot much swollen from it. Has twice been back handcuffed: once tightly like Bissu; once loosely.

The 2nd December 1884.

Edwin M. Lewis.—I am Superintendent of the Printing Department in Bengal, including the Presidency Jail Press. I come to the jail sometimes daily; seldom less than twice a week. This has been since 1877. I generally come about 6 A.M. in the hot weather and 7 to 8 in the cold weather, and stay about 1½ hours. I also sometimes come in the afternoon. I am able to judge of the number of punishments from the number of men taken away, and also their effect. I have occasionally seen a man being whipped, but I have never seen a man being handcuffed or in handcuffs. The prisoners have often complained to me of punishments, but I never interfere further than to ask my assistant Abdul Guffur what it is about, and usually the convict seems in the wrong.

The only occasion in which I ever observed any effect of the back handcuffs was about four months ago, when some dozen prisoners complained to me that they could not work because they had been five hours under back handcuffs the previous day. I asked Abdul Guffur to enquire, and he said that the men had been 'suspended'—whatever that may mean. They had marks on the shoulders where the straps had chafed the skin on the shoulders. I sent them to hospital, but they were all sent back, and that same morning they were at work. Abdul Guffur is the Officiating Deputy Superintendent. One convict a short time ago made a similar complaint, but it is a matter in which I could not interfere, and I took no notice of it.

I have nothing more to add except to say that within the last six months the jail has been working better than I have ever previously known it. The punishments seem to me to be fewer, and the prisoners work more quietly and contentedly, and give more work and better work than before.

I sent the men to hospital because they refused to work on the ground of being incapacitated. It was a matter for the doctor to decide.

To Baboo Jodoolall Mullick.—By 'contentedly' I mean that the prisoners have seemed to work more willingly, and that fewer complaints have been made. I did not make any enquiry into how the prisoners were suspended.

To Mr. Beadon.—I do think that there has been a reduction in the number of assaults in the jail during the last few months, and the discipline has been better.

Moonshee Abdul Guffur.—I am Officiating Deputy Superintendent of the Presidency Jail. I have been employed in the jail about seven years and have been in the press department the whole time, and in the post of Deputy Superintendent for 20 months. I first heard of the use of the punishment of back handcuffs soon after Mr. Beadon came. I used to hear the punishments ordered on my report, and see the punishments on the ticket. After the punishment men as a rule come back to work, and work as usual. About two or three occasions the men have been sent to hospital the following morning because they complained of pain. I have never heard men crying out from pain when handcuffs are imposed. I could hardly do so inside the press yard. They have sometimes complained to me of inability to work, because the punishment was severe, but they were told to go to their work, and did it.

I remember the occasion referred to by Mr. Lewis. I enquired and told him the men had been 'back handcuffed' and complained that they were unable to work. I have on several occasions seen the men. If I used the word 'suspended' I certainly meant that his hands were suspended from the shoulder; not that the man was suspended or that his feet were off the ground.

To Baboo Jodoolall Mullick.—The place where the punishment is imposed is a great distance from my ward, but as Deputy Superintendent I sometimes go round and have seen the men undergoing punishment.

To Mr. Marsden.—I have never heard of a prisoner being tied up to a door with his feet off or nearly off the ground. About 800 of the prisoners would come under my special observation in the press work. I have, however, general authority all over the jail.

In the case of the 12 men there were some marks produced on the shoulder by the rope straps.

After back handcuffs were imposed the men would work slowly, though they would do their work. The next day they would also work somewhat slowly, though they would do their work. The third day I should say that the effect would have passed off. Some men would give full work: some would not. At the end of the week I would report again such as were markedly short, but not such as were a little short.

In similar cases, where Mr. Beadon imposes back handcuffs, Mr. Larymore would have given a week or a fortnight's leg irons, or sometimes would have tied up the convict's hands to a ring. Leg irons would not incapacitate a man from work at the time so much as back handcuffs, which is severer. I have no knowledge of any complaint among the prisoners that they are incapacitated from work by back handcuffs, and then again punished for the short work thereby caused.

To Mr. Beadon.—I think that back handcuffs are a very good form of punishment for the Presidency Jail, as some severity is necessary for such convicts as you have in the Presidency Jail.

To Baboo Jodoolall Mullick.—Some months ago there was a plot to murder Mr. Beadon and myself. I would not therefore infer that I am more unpopular with the convicts than formerly. I cannot say why such a plot was formed. My predecessor Mr. Ross was attacked in a similar manner and nearly killed.

To Mr. Beadon.—I consider that the punishment of back handcuffs has improved the discipline of the jail and increased the outturn of work.

William Ross.—My pucca appointment is Deputy Superintendent of the Jail. I am for the last 20 months officiating as Assistant Superintendent of Stationery, but I devote my mornings to the jail, supervising the printing. As regards back handcuffs, I have never seen men undergoing the punishment, but I have heard the men complain that their shoulders were sore: about three men have so complained to me. I never saw a case in which the shoulders had been lacerated or the skin abraided. I have not heard men screaming out from pain on account of back handcuffs.

All that I can say regarding the discipline of the jail is that I never saw it in so good a condition as at present. The assaults are much fewer, the work is done with less noise, and there is less short work. I could not, however, agree in saying that this is due to the severity of the punishment. I cannot say positively to what the improvement is due I only testify to its existence: besides it is better that one man should suffer than 200 or 300.

There is a scale of task-work sanctioned by Government, and that scale is still unchanged. Mr. Beadon has not changed it.

E. W. Bason.—I was released from a term of six months' rigorous imprisonment on Saturday last. The first occasion of my being brought up before the Superintendent was on the 2nd June—three days after I came in. The complaint against me was that I had left my place. I did so by the permission of the Jailor, which I did because a summons was brought to me in prison. The Jailor said when the Superintendent comes round you can speak to him. When I went up, however, to the Superintendent, Mr. Beadon, he said: Who told you to leave your place or work? I attempted to reply, but was stopped by two convict warders. The Jailor was present and said nothing. He ought to have said that I had his leave. Five minutes afterwards the two convict warders took me before the Superintendent. The Jailor did then admit that I had asked his permission. Nevertheless, it was written on my ticket—Leaving his place—first offence—warned. I also got the permission to write about a summons.

A week after, on 10th June, I was charged with leaving my place of work and gossiping with another prisoner. I was reported by the Press. I said I did not leave my place to gossip, but I went for materials. I was sentenced to one week's irons. I then said this is very hard, and it was changed to 14 days, and on my again speaking it was changed to one month's irons. (His ticket shewed 14 days changed into one month).

I do not wish to complain about the smoking in my cell; but on the second occasion, when I was given two days' penal diet, I was reported for not eating my food when I had eaten part. I could not eat all as it was not palatable, and I was then given 14 days' irons without being allowed to speak and explain matters.

Mr. Beadon.—You could have spoken on Sunday. Yes, but I should then have been afterwards punished ten times worse.

The charge of not laying out my kit was a malicious one, and not true.

As regards the charge of making a false charge against a prisoner warder—the name of the warder was Watson—a prisoner in for murder. The Jailor investigated it and considered it not established and refused to enter it in the ticket. Watson then himself preferred the charge to the Superintendent direct in the Jailor's presence. The Jailor remained silent, and Watson said this is the man who says that I took four annas from a mate. I never said anything of the kind, for as a fact I do not know that he did take four annas from a mate. I said to the Superintendent I beg you will hear me in this case, and if I am guilty inflict any punishment you think fit. Mr. Beadon said gag him; shut his mouth, and then sentenced me to two days' dark cells, and irons for the rest of my sentence. The irons was taken off on the 2nd November. No intermediate punishments were imposed.

As regards punishments I consider that dark cells is a worse punishment than leg irons; but bar fetters is worse.

As regards the imposition of back handcuffs I have never seen them imposed, but I have seen men with them on and with their hands raised as high as the back of their necks. After men have been taken away to have back handcuffs imposed, I have heard them screaming out, and can prove it also by two European convicts who also had handcuffs applied. After the death of Rutton Das the severity was relaxed. I myself have been grinding wheat up to 11 o'clock at night.

A boy named Wakefield and many others have been kept grinding wheat up to 3 A.M. and have then been made to get up at 5 or 5½.

In the case of a Manilla man who had back handcuffs on, he shouted out—for God's sake release me, or some such words. I could not hear what the words were, but I could hear his shouting in the press department, and he was in the refractory yard.

Beharee Sing—Was released on the 29th November, after a two years' imprisonment. Was sentenced three times to back handcuffs. His hands was pulled up to his neck. Huri Sadgope and Aftu Khan and a Brahmin, who has been removed to Hooghly, were injured, and Sobratee was injured and marked by back handcuffs. While he was undergoing the punishment he was beaten, thumped, and if he wanted to ease himself he was told to do it in his jungheas. Kelly and Watson behave very brutally.

Other prisoners have had to ease themselves in their drawers. A mehter, whose name I do not know, did so. Also Prolah Moonshi spat blood from the effects. I have no marks on my body now. Shews a scar on his head, which was made by Watson knocking his head against a wall.

Sarafut is the man whose hand was seriously injured, and we hear that his hand was amputated.

Peter Wakefield.—I live at No 11, Champatollah Lane, and was sentenced in August to nine months rigorous' imprisoment for theft.

I have been sentenced to back handcuffs twice; each time for short work. My hands were tied up. They were pulled up. Shews which. It was very painful. I could not grind wheat afterwards, and got another man to help me. When I first came in it took me 7, 8, or 9 o'clock to grind 15 seers. Afterwards I could finish by 5 o'clock. A man named Gregory also had back handcuffs on at the same time. We were not with the native prisoners. Many times we hear the native prisoners crying out when the back handcuffs were put on. Have heard no complaints for the last month. I am now working in the press.

The 9th December 1884.

Robert Rebeiro.—Was released on the 24th August from a sentence of one month's imprisonment for theft. I had been in jail once before for theft—five years before. Then also for one month. I was twice punished with back handcuffs—for short work each time. I had 15 seers of wheat to grind. I could not complete the quantity, though I was constantly kept working till 1, 2, and 3, and on a few occasions till 4 o'clock in the morning, beginning work at 6 o'clock. Several other convicts were also kept working late—all wheat grinders. The rule was to take the convict to his cell as he finished; but often Watson, the convict warder, would refuse to take us one by one, and would keep us till all or several had finished. Watson and Kelly were not the day warders—Ewing was. He is a convict mate. Sometimes we used to sleep in the cell. I always slept in the cell because I never finished my work. Those days I was sometimes taken to my cell about 1 or 2 if the sailors had finished work: sometimes kept up to 4 o'clock and slept in ward.

I never for a single day could grind my 15 seers. Besides the two back handcuffs, I had irons put on—bar fetters, front handcuffs at night, and in fact was punished about every second day. Fifteen seers was required from me the very day after my admission.

On my previous admission I was also given 15 seers. I was brought up for short work, and I said that I could not do it, and the task was reduced to eight seers I could do that. I was then 17, and I am now 22. Mr. Larymore reduced my task to eight of his own authority.

On the first occasion that I had back handcuffs my hands were wrenched up as high as they could go. Watson also threw water on the rope to make it contract and punched me on the chest.

The second time Watson again put them on. He again threw water in the second time, and also struck me with a stick on the head and back. My left wrist was injured by the operation, and is so still. [Shews it. Admits to Mr. Larymore that five years before he complained of this wrist being weak].

[The register shews 110lb. on admission and 110 on release.] When I came in I weighed 109, and when I left I weighed 101. I saw the scales. I did not weigh 110lb. on discharge. Bepin weighed me. I do not know what he is, except that he gives out clothes. He made the entry in the register. I did not complain to the Superintendent, because no one was allowed to speak to him. Watson and Kelly would not allow us to speak. They would make us suffer for it if we did.

J. T. Francis—Was released on the 4th December after a four months' term for theft. Last year I was also in for a month for theft. I was twice punished with back handcuffs for short work. I was wheat grinding. The hands were tied up as high as they could be, the warder wrenching my hands up with my head between his knees. Thus tied, we were made to walk up and down for five hours, and Watson would push up the elbow, which made it hurt much more. He also put water on the rope to tighten it. He did this in my case. Two or three times I was kept to work till 4 A.M. The rule was to be released at 5 P.M.—supper time; but those who had not finished were taken back and kept to work till 7, 9, 11, and even 4 o'clock, till they had finished. After I got used to the work I managed my 15 seers. I came in in August, and in September I was able to give my full work.

To Baboo J. L. Mullick.—I went to hospital, because I got fever. Never complained of ill-treatment to the Superintendent or any one. It was better not. In the tobacco case I was not to blame, but I was punished by the Superintendent and made to hold my tongue. Watson never struck me: he used to strike the natives. The ropes left marks on my shoulders which went away two or three days after.

Edmond Williams—Was released on the 4th December after a term of four months. Came in and went out the same day with Francis, but not the same case. I was never punished with back handcuffs. I was put in the press: not to wheat grinding. I was never punished at all. I never misbehaved myself. As far as I can judge a prisoner who behaved himself would not be punished. Never saw any prisoner punished who behaved well. I have seen men with back handcuffs, and their hands up to their neck. I have heard the groanings of the prisoners, both native and European, while walking about. When in hospital I have seen them walking about and heard their groans. That was the first time I was in hospital, in August. They were walking up and down and groaning from pain. I think they were all natives.

To Baboo J. L. Mullick.—It was about 1 o'clock in the day.

[Williams then took the visitors and pointed the place from which he had seen and heard the prisoners suffering from back handcuffs. The visitors waited while he went into the yard and ground, to shew that it was possible to hear at that distance. They could hear.]

A. D. Larrymore.—I was here for about two years. I do not resort to back handcuffs. They looked bad as a matter of sentiment. I preferred other forms of punishment. They could not be carried out without extraneous assistance and the means required to be used were of a nature to give them an unpleasant appearance likely to lead to the impression that the man was in pain whether he was or not. Had I applied them I would have applied straps. Without these natives are so lithe that they would have no difficulty in pulling their feet through their hands. I usually administer bar fetters for short work by obstinate offenders. Sometimes bar fetters are given till a man consents to work, not exceeding 10 days. Bar fetters are more likely to chafe a prisoner than the straps, but being better defined in the Code, and less susceptible of misconstruction, I prefer bar fetters.

There is no difficulty in any man giving 15 seers of wheat, if he is an habitual, or after a few days if he is a new man. It would depend on the warder whether it would be safe to leave convicts under back handcuffs in charge of a convict warder. I know both Watson and Kelly. They came here from Hazaribagh. Kelly was at the Andamans and was sent away because he used to get access to liquor. I think they are both like other convict warders: they want watching.

When I was here one prisoner once spat in my face. Since Mr. Beadon has come here there has been no necessity to send any incorrigibles to Alipore. He has been able to manage them himself. Refractory prisoners are sent down to the Presidency and Alipore, because they can be more effectually controlled. I was not in fear of an outbreak when I left the Presidency.

I have been in charge of four other jails—central jails—and I look on the Presidency as more dangerous to manage than any other, because of the number of educated prisoners who can get up charges.

I have discontinued back handcuffs at Alipore, because I do not like the mode. More punishments have to be given proportionately at Alipore than here, because the tasks are more easily exacted in a rigorous and strict manner; but the prisoners are more easily managed. There are 50 solitary cells at Alipore, but not one here. I would wish to add that almost half the prisoners in this jail are habituals who are always more difficult to manage, and they often go out in far better condition than they come in.

Bussunt Lall—Has been transferred to this jail 20 or 24 days. A ten years' sentence, reduced to seven years. Has been convicted six times. Has twice had back handcuffs. Has a mark on the shoulder from the straps. Both the two European warders spat on his face. Has also had stripes—24. Thirty were ordered, and 24 inflicted.

The visitors then proceeded to examine the 53 men who had last had back handcuffs. Marks were found on the persons of five—

Bussunt Lall—On the shoulders.
Abdur Rahmun—Very slight on the shoulders.
Herallall Ooja—Scar on both wrists, and complains of pain on the shoulders.
Alim Oddeen—Slight excoriation in the wrist.
Sanjia Noshyan—Mark on wrist.

A convict named Sushee Bhushun Chuckerbutty said that after the death of Rutton Das the severity of the punishment was relaxed

Mr. Beadon—With reference to keeping convicts up to a late hour of the night wheat grinding, volunteered the following statement:—

The custom has been for the native convicts who grind wheat to sleep beside their work. They are all either short term prisoners, recent admissions, or prisoners undergoing wheat grinding as a punishment. They are all aware that they are liable to be brought up for punishment if they do not perform their allotted task, and as an act of grace at any time during the night they are allowed to get up and finish their task—this is the rule.

Now, as regards the Europeans, I have introduced a new practice. I found that there was an organised effort on their part to get the task reduced, and I ordered the experiment of allowing them to remain and finish work after hours if they like. It was not ordered that they should be kept at work against their will.

Statement put in by DR. MACKENZIE.*

* The paragraphs in the Statesman to which this statement refers are the following:—

"As we have resolved to try a fall with this system, we may as well say at once that the enquiry which the Lieutenant-Governor has instituted into the matter may be abandoned, if any implicated official is to have anything to do with it, or any of the gentlemen except one or two, who have been in charge of the Presidency Jail in the last ten or fifteen years. We all know, unhappily, how easily we become accustomed to the sight of human suffering, and insensible even to the agonies of our fellowmen. DR. Mackenzie is not worse, we dare say, than other men, and yet we are assured as a fact, that while in charge of the Presidency Jail, this gentleman had a famous picture photographed of a man at the triangles, with the blood streaming from him under the cruel punishment he was enduring, and that this picture, which was upon a large scale, and is well known in the jails of the Presidency, was inscribed below, "Dr. Mackenzie's new tanning process." The fact is so illustrative of our statement that men unhappily become quickly familiarized with cruelty, and demoralized by it, that we refuse to suppress it. Here is the broad fact, that while the Legislature believes that it has suppressed the practice of torture altogether, and our Judges show humane and utter repugnance to every semblance of approach to it, the mere officials in charge of our jails are permitted to employ torture to maintain what they call 'discipline' within their walls. We were greatly impressed nearly twenty years ago with the frank confession of an Indian Police officer, to ourselves in England, of the tortures to which he himself had been used to resort, with prisoners in India. And he was a humane man generally, and left India with the reputation of being the finest police officer in the country.

"Not many of our readers probably are aware that the assassination of the late Mr. Justice Norman is believed to have been directly connected with these jail tortures. An Afghan or Pathan prisoner in the Presidency Jail, who was there for some offence committed on the Punjab border, and which probably was no offence at all in the estimation of his clansmen, was put upon the treadmill for refusing what he regarded as the deep degradation of being forced to break stones. He went on the mill, and as all men do when first put thereon, failed to keep step properly, and fell off the mill, when he was savagely kicked by the warder. The man rose, and being a powerful fellow, struck the warder in the face with his fist, and broke his jaw. He was now tried in the High Court for this new offence, and sentenced by Mr. Justice Norman to seven years' penal servitude. The man could not speak English, but is said to have passionately implored the Judge to sentence him to death, assuring him that it was impossible for him to endure what he had seen other prisoners suffer in the jail—particularly instancing the floggings—without killing the man who attempted to subject him to such punishment. Whether he was understood or not, we cannot say, but he was sent back to the jail, and refusing absolutely to break stones, was repeatedly flogged, until he died in the hospital of the prison. It was this man's brother, it is affirmed, who arming himself with a knife, assassinated Mr. Justice Norman as he was ascending the steps of the Court. Every effort, we have been told, was made to keep the fact from the public knowledge, and successfully."

After what has appeared in the Statesman of the 30th November 1884, I think that it would be advisable for me to withdraw from the Committee of the Official Visitors which is making certain enquiries in the Presidency Jail, and of which you are President, as my presence may embarrass the other members. Before doing so, however, I beg to make the following statement regarding certain paragraphs of the editorial I have referred to above.

With regard to paragraph 1 of the article, I beg to state that many years ago a number of photographs were taken by a private friend for the Inspector-General of Jails in the Presidency Jail, showing the various forms of penal labour and some of the forms of punishment in force, and among these there was a picture done of a prisoner on the triangles about to be flogged; the man was an habitual and was to receive on that day stripes by order of the Magistrate in addition to a sentence of imprisonment; and as the Superintendent and medical officer of the jail it had to be carried out in my presence, and in my hands I hold the Magistrate's warrant ordering the flogging. The picture shews the jemadar in the act of lifting the cane, but the actual punishment had not been inflicted, and there was no blood flowing as stated by the editor in his inaccurate description of the picture.

Paragraph 3 of the article is composed of an amusing tissue of misstatements.

During the whole period that I was in charge of the Presidency Jail, from January 1871 to January 1877, there was not a single Afghan or Pathan prisoner in the jail for an offence committed on the Punjab border

There, no doubt, was an Afghan prisoner named Mudday Khan alias Zumun Shaha in the jail, who was sentenced by Mr. Justice Norman to three years' rigorous imprisonment on the 27th January 1870; but this sentence was on two charges of house-breaking and theft in Calcutta. In 1872 this prisoner committed an assault on an European jail warder. He was tried at the High Court and was sentenced by Mr. Justice Markby, on the 13th August 1872, that is very nearly a year after Mr. Justice Norman's assassination, to two years' additional rigorous imprisonment. He did not die in the jail, but was released on the 26th January 1875, and was made over to the police, by whom he was conveyed to the frontier

The Afghan Abdullah, who killed Mr. Justice Norman, committed the crime on the 20th September 1871. He was sentenced to death by Mr. Justice Paul on the 28th September 1871, and was executed on the 4th November 1871.

CALCUTTA,
The 9th December 1884.

S. COULL MACKENZIE, M.D.

To Committee.—I do not think it possible that the Afghan referred to could have been other than Mudday Khan He is the only Afghan prisoner who ever struck a warder in my time. Indeed, so far as I can recollect, the only prisoner who struck a warder under any similar circumstances. It was at the treadmill that the assault was committed. It was with a hammer that the blow was struck, and it cut the warder's head. The Afghan said that the warder had struck him. I flogged him for that offence.

[Mr. Lambert—from his own knowledge, as having been present at the trial, said that the Afghan stated in court that he had been flogged for the offence, and it was not English law to punish a man twice for the same offence.]

Dr Mackenzie.—It was by order of Government that he was sent up for trial, because Government considered the punishment inadequate.

I saw back handcuffs on when visiting the jail on November the 5th. I used to order that punishment very occasionally, when I was Superintendent. The hands were tied up by straps passing over the shoulders; but not raised high. High enough to prevent the convict slipping his feet through them.

No upward tension was applied. The dislike of the convicts to the punishment was I think due mainly to their being unable to sleep as they could do when in front handcuffs. I did not on the 5th November observe that the handcuffs were applied any differently from what they were in my time. The hands did not appear to be tied up any higher than they were in my time But the convicts were marching up and down in the corridor. They used to be locked up, not marched up and down, when I was Superintendent.

To Baboo Jodoolall Mullick.—It is from my recollection and from going over the records that I am sure that there is no other Afghan prisoner who could be referred to except Mudday Khan.

Examination of the convict A. JORDON, aged 24, taken by Mr. Lambert and Syed Ameer Hossein when visiting the jail officially on the preceding day.

I have been in jail since last eight months. My time will be up in three weeks. I was sentenced for theft. I have been doing "fattoo" (miscellaneous light) work. Besides that I have been doing printing work. I did wheat grinding for six months. I used to grind five seers a day. During the last eight months I have been punished three or four times. I was back handcuffed once or twice. The last time I was handcuffed is about four months ago. It was for not working. Sometimes I did not work: I was playing about. The sailorman put on the handcuffs. I was handcuffed for five hours. I did my work after the handcuffs were taken off. I have been twice in the hospital. The last time I have been in the hospital is about three months ago. I was laid up for three weeks. I was suffering from fever. (His ticket shews that he was in hospital from the 5th to the 7th April with contusion, and again on the 29th April with diarrhœa, and was discharged on the 1st May.) A sailorman struck me four weeks before I came to jail. I have been to jail three times. I have not written any petition to the Lieutenant-Governor. I have never petitioned to the Lieutenant-Governor. I am well now. I can use my both hands. (He takes off his clothes; no marks whatever except a small blue stain on his left wrist of very longstanding.) When the back handcuffs were put on they were fastened up to a string. It hurt me a good deal. The hurt remained about four hours after the handcuffs were taken off. I am all right now. I am in good health.

SYED AMEER HOSSEIN.

8th December 1884.

Thursday, 11th December 1884, 4-15 P.M.

I HAVE this day personally examined prisoner No. 6696, by name A. Jordon. I hereby certify that he has no bruises on his body, nor are there any marks of old injuries on his person. He has no dislocation of any of his joints, nor are any of his ribs broken.

The prisoner abovenamed appears to me to be in good health.

R. C. SANDERS, M.D., F.R.C.S.,
Surgeon-Major.

PRESIDENCY JAIL.

The 22nd December 1884.

Mr. John Wilkerson.—I am Jailor at the Presidency Jail; was so appointed on 18th January 1879. I have been in the Jail Department 9 years and 8 months.

Regarding the late working hours, I wish to explain that early in August it was brought to my notice that the European prisoners had combined not to do full task, in hopes of getting the task lightened. The task was 15 seers wheat-grinding all round. All alike had this task, but new-comers had a few days' grace allowed them. From new-comers we should take 10 seers for four or six days. All short-term prisoners who are passed by the doctor do wheat-grinding. Short-term means not exceeding three or four months. The combination to do short work was reported by me to the Superintendent. At my suggestion the Superintendent ordered that the men should be kept at work till they did finish their full task. At the time I mentioned to the Superintendent that in Mr. Larymore's time under convict warder Kelly all prisoners completed their full task within hours. Working hours are from 6 A.M. to 4 P.M. with an interval of one hour 11 A.M. to noon.

The prisoners who did not complete their task in time would remain in the corridor, which is the usual place of work. If they finished work or refused to go on, they were sent to their cells. Mucan on one occasion was sent to his cell, because he asked to go. On one occasion, the 1st August, they were kept till 3 o'clock, but ever afterwards the order was to take them to their cells at 12 o'clock. The men who had not finished their work were kept in the corridor as a matter of course, but if any man declared that he would not finish but preferred to go his cell, he was sent there. The alternative was being reported for short work. The fact of their not being reported the following day would show that they had finished or very nearly finished their work. After the 19th August the men were never kept up after 10 o'clock; from the 9th to the 19th they were kept up till a maximum of 12 o'clock. The effect of the order was that eventually all the Europeans, except Bason and Scott, had been subdued, and gave their full tasks.

On reference to the register it appeared that full work was virtually given by all the prisoners at wheat-grinding, after the 18th, including Bason and Scott; while during the 7th August to 10th September only 3 were punished, each with two days' penal diet.

To Baboo Jodoo Nath Mullick.—I did not make the suggestion in writing. I had never before seen such an amount of short work.

To Chairman.—I often see back handcuffs being put on. I never heard of any water being thrown on the rope to contract it till I read it yesterday. It could of course be done without my knowing it if the prisoners did not complain. I think there would always be shade in the refractory cells at midday of July or August. The order was if ever it rained that they were moved into the verandahs or into the corridors; while walking up and down they would be under the charge of a European convict overseer. It may be said that till the latter part of September the men were marched up and down in the refractory yard, and after that in the corridors. As regards easing themselves no order was passed, so that the convict overseer would exercise his own discretion in the matter. I never heard of prisoners easing themselves in their drawers. Cannot say whether anything would be done to let a prisoner make water. I have never heard the prisoners groaning in the refractory yard, though I have looked in upon them, it may be four or five times. On one or two occasions they have done so latterly when I have visited them in the corridors. I have often seen the handcuffs while being applied. Occasionally the men have groaned, intending thereby to make me understand that their hands were being painfully drawn up. I believe it was all pretence, because the men who complained were habituals and schemers. As applied I believe it to be not painful—very irksome. I never saw great force being used. When I came round mostly some backhandcuffs would be on, others would be in the course of being put on, and I should wait to see it finished. When they were being applied the usual method was for the warder to stand in front, make the convict bend his head and, from over his shoulders, fasten up his hands (attitude shewn).

To Mr. Westmacott.—I have never seen the hands drawn up so as to rest on the nape of the neck, or so that the convict could reach the crown of his head with the tips of his fingers. I have seen the handcuffs applied wholly or partly almost daily. I do not know that the straps have ever been changed after they had been put on (shews about how high the hands usually are—just below the shoulder blade). Have never seen the hands on the shoulder blade The prisoners have their first meal at 6 o'clock. The handcuffs have never been put on before the men have had their first meal. They were put on about 9 o'clock. I have never heard of the cat being used in the jail. It is always the rattan used on the buttocks, and never over 30 stripes. At Hazaribagh also I have never seen the cat used.

To Mr. Gupta.—I have never seen back handcuffs applied in this way in any other jail.

To Mr. Westmacott.—I have never heard of any complaint of convict warders Sullivan, Kelly or Watson striking the prisoners while undergoing back handcuffs, and never had any reason to suspect that they did so.

To Mr. Larymore.—When wearing gunny-clothing prisoners would complain just as when having handcuffs put on. It was not the putting on of them which was painful.

To Chairman.—Back handcuffs were usually imposed for persistent short work and not for refusing to work. The men would not therefore be released for consenting to work. I remember one or two instances where the Superintendent being present released men because they promised to do better at the time when the handcuffs were being put on. After they were once applied, I cannot call to mind a single instance in which a prisoner was released before his time was up. The prisoner who was found trying to drink from a tank was not Jordan; it was a native whose name I forget. He had been taken back to the yard when I arrived I did not save him.

Dr. Mackenzie.—I see in yesterday's Statesman it is stated that the man photographed was an Afghan. This is not true; it was an old Calcutta habitual well known to the police.

Daniel Shevelin.—I am a paid warder. I have had charge of the refractory yard in my time. I was on duty when Sharafat was tied to the door of the cell. The door was locked. He was fastened to it by a gumcha over his chest. Not tied up by the hands with his toes touching the ground as he said. As a rule when in charge I should go round about once an hour. I remember Rutton Das. I released him from back handcuffs. He did not complain but eat his food well. He had been in the refractory yard. If I remember right, the prisoners were taken from the refractory yard into the penal yard, and walked up and down in the verandah to avoid the sun and rain. This would probably be done some time in September. I have myself walked them into the penal yard. I got permission to do it if necessary both from Mr. Beadon and the jailor. It was decidedly before Rutton Das's death that this was done. Rutton Das was not taken to the penal yard. It must have been a cloudy day. It is probably correct to say that as the refractory yard was found unsuitable, I obtained permission to bring them into the penal yard, and then soon afterwards it was thought better to move them into the corridors, where they would be in shelter all day long. It is a habit of all the habituals to pretend to be suffering more than they are, and these men when undergoing back handcuffs would often groan when I came round The convict overseer is not allowed to have a stick; neither are the convict warders, nor the paid warders.

I have been in the Jail Department 1 year 10 months. I was 24 years 7 months in the army. I earned a pension which I am now in receipt of.

I was once charged to Dr. Harris for striking a prisoner but it was false. I was a sergeant for 19 years. My pay is Rs. 90 and my pension 2*s.* ½*d.* a day. I get free quarters, and my pay rises to Rs. 120.

I have always been present when back handcuffs were put on when it was my turn for duty (explains the method of putting on). The hands were tied up just below the shoulder-blades. Have never seen the hands on the nape of the neck or so that the fingers could touch the crown of the head. I have never heard of water being thrown on the straps. On one or two occasions, when the men were going to faint, I have known of water being thrown on their faces to revive them. That was only pretence to the best of my belief. The water was thrown on the man to test the validity of his pretence. Can never recollect a man's hands being released to let him urinate Never remember being asked to release Would have released his hands if asked.

Dr. Harris.—Rutton Das was not suffering from any inflammation of the shoulder joints I am quite certain of that. The cause of death was clearly marked. This is the only case of heat-apoplexy I have seen in the jail in 2½ years. I have seen similar cases of heat-apoplexy outside the jail In 1874 one such death is reported as having occurred in the jail. It is a most common occurrence for prisoners to injure themselves in order to get into or remain in hospital. I have known of procuring and even swallowing sulphate of copper in order to avoid work. They get it from the press. I have known prisoners eat other poisonous food so as to aggravate dysentry. I remember a prisoner who put lime into his eye, which eventually led to total blindness.

2nd January 1885.

Ishwar Chandra Mozumdar.—I was Sub-Deputy Magistrate and Sub-Deputy Collector at Dinagepore, and was convicted on 30th January 1882 for extortion, section 384. I was transferred from Dinagepore on 4th May 1882. My term is 4 years reduced from 12 years by the Sessions On the 14th February 1883 I was transferred to Buxar and returned to the jail on the 11th February 1884. (Ticket shows 8th February.)

As regards the entry 2nd April 1884, whenever a convict goes to stool during the night, he is required the following morning to take the gumlah to the hospital for examination. I refused and therefore was punished with heavy irons for one month.

Mr. Beadon says this is the rule.

With regards to the entry of 5th May, I was unable to give full task at press work as required after three months instead of six months, the usual period.

On the 14th May I received 30 stripes for 5lbs short work at wheat-grinding; being at the time in bar-fetters. I was never able to give full work at wheat grinding.

On the 20th August I was sentenced to five hours' back-handcuffs for stealing tape from the Press. Another prisoner gave the tape to me. I wanted them to tie up my janghias. We are not allowed tape for the purpose. Jullodhur mate reported me to Moonshee Abdul Gutfoor, Deputy Superintendent, who reported me to Mr. Beadon who has all prisoners taken up to him for punishment at No. 1 yard. The Superintendent questioned me himself. I admitted that I knew it was stolen. I knew that it was a punishable matter. The order was passed about 9 A.M. The prisoners sentenced were eight in all We were all taken to the refractory yard, four half castes and four natives. Mr. Johnson, paid warder, took my head between his knees, I sitting down at the time, and Watson, convict warder, drew up my hands. He employed more force than I could describe, so that I could not bear it. I cried out. One man was a strong man from the North Western Provinces, who had 12 times had back-handcuffs. He did not cry. His name is Sheo Churn. He however tried to commit suicide one night. The other two natives cried out, and I think the same force was used to them as to me Somewhat less force was used to the Eurasians. We were made to walk up and down the whole time for five hours, from 9 to 2. We were not allowed to sit down. We were in the sun. After 12, we went on the western side, where there was a little shade. There was shade for our lower limbs when we began walking, but not for our heads. Sullivan, convict overseer, was present during the whole time we were walking up and down. (The handcuffs are put on in presence of the visitors in the manner explained. Kelly, who put them on, says that they are put on standing, not sitting, so far as he has ever seen). The usual hour for breakfast is 11 o'clock, and on that day I did not get it till 2 o'clock. When released that day, I could not eat. Watson released me in the refractory yard. I was taken to the work-shed and given my meal, which I could not take, and then taken to the working-shed by Watson. I could not raise my arms for about two weeks. I was taken the next day to Dr. Harris, who sent me back, saying that it was an order of the Superintendent that men were not to stay in hospital for back-handcuffs. While I had the handcuffs on I was pushed down by Sullivan—I by mistake said Kelly yesterday to Mr. Lambert. Kelly picked me up. (Shews the bruises on his wrists). It was about 9½. Kelly was standing by while my handcuffs were put on, and he remained present the whole time while my handcuffs were put on The next evening when the faltoo took me to hospital, Dr. Harris put oil on my elbows and sent me back. None of these warders, paid or convict, had sticks No one struck me with a stick. I went to hospital three times for these abrasions on my elbows

Mr. Beadon —There is a rule to this effect, as a precaution no strings are allowed; men tie their janghiahs in a knot.

I have never been asked for money while in the jail by any warder, convict-warder, convict-overseer, or any one. My brother came to see me twice. The jailor himself stands by while an interview is allowed.

I did not tell Dr. Harris how the injury to my elbows was caused. I have never seen convict-warders or overseers carrying sticks except Hussainee, who had a piece of stick to strike prisoners with. After I was flogged I went to hospital, but was sent back to work; but the next day I was detained in hospital and kept for four days.

I consider back-handcuffs severer than flogging. I would rather have 100 stripes than back-handcuffs. I did not take any objection to being flogged for short-work. I was afraid to do so.

Sheo Churn.—I tried to commit suicide in June because I got distressing news of my family and had a long term, and was tired of jail life. I had back-handcuffs 3 or 4 times as a punishment, and have twice had stripes. Stripes are worse than back-handcuffs. The latter are not very severe On release from them I could work at once. Handcuffs were applied standing, not sitting. I saw Ishwar Ghose's (i.e., Mojumdar) handcuffs put on. He was standing, not sitting. I did not hear him cry or complain.

Dr Harris.—I have no recollection of Ishwar Chunder Mojumdar coming to hospital. The marks could have been caused by falling on the ground. It is not true that I ever received an order not to admit prisoners to hospital after back-handcuffs, or had I done so, that I should obey it.

Peter Austin.—Ten years for cheating. I was sentenced to dark-cells for 48 hours for refusing to work as a faltoo; and as I came out I got a little cross and spoke angrily and impatiently to the Superintendent, saying that I was punished unjustly, and he sentenced me to 24 hours more. I had been out 2 or 3 hours. I did not find dark-cells very trying. I was an apothecary. I went to sleep in the cell. I was well at the time. I am now 47. I have two years more to run.

Mr. Beadon.—I do not recollect ordering two men to be flogged for breaking a stone in the press; but it is possible, and a legitimate punishment if a bad case. They break the stones in order to burn them and get lime.

William Johnson.—I am a paid warder. I have assisted at putting on back-handcuffs. Never in my experience have they been put on a convict while sitting. I have never taken a man's head between my knees. I remember putting on handcuffs to Ishwar Chunder Mojumdar; he was standing, not sitting. He did not complain at all. Convict Overseer Sullivan was present. No one else. Kelly was not present, nor was he on duty that day.

Ishwar Chunder Mojumdar.—[Recalled, told by Mr. Westmacott he will be transferred to-day to Alipore. Orders made out in his presence, and asked if he has any more to say. Asks that Mr. Beadon, who is present, may withdraw. Mr. Beadon had withdrawn during his previous statement, and did so again].

I have seen the Superintendent strike men with a stick. He struck Sheo Churn. He struck very hard with a thick stick. He took the stick in both hands. I have seen this about 10 or 12 times. The day I was flogged as I was going away, he was going to strike me because I delayed to go to my work. I said, if you strike a man like me, I will have you put in jail. He then desisted. I heard that Rutton Das died from the effects of a blow by Mr. Beadon. I did not see it.

Further Statement put in by Mr. Beadon.

In continuation of my explanation of the 9th December regarding the convicts being sometimes at work until a late hour, I would now beg to place before the Committee a copy of extracts taken from the Jailor's daily report book from the 7th August last until the 10th September, both days inclusive, from which it will be seen that some Europeans on one occasion, viz., 8th August, were working at 3 A.M., but that it was at once ordered that even if work was not completed by midnight, they must never again be allowed to remain up after that hour. Very shortly after that date I passed verbal orders that they must leave off work at 10 P.M. at latest, and on the 11th September I stopped the practice of allowing Europeans to remain working after hours, as I found it caused much inconvenience and trouble to the prison officers.

I desire further, if permission be granted me, to draw attention to the fact that of the nine prisoners examined before the Committee on the 1st day of their enquiry, all, except Sarafat Ally, were pronounced by Dr. Mackenzie to be absolutely markless and free from any sort of injury. Sarafat's statement to the effect that he was suspended so that he was standing on his toes is false. He had, I am told, been throwing himself on the ground and had butted his head into Sullivan's face, and in order to keep him from doing this he was made to stand in the verandah with his back to a door of a cell, and a gumcha was tied loosely, but securely, across his chest, and fastened to the bars of the door in such a way that he could not run away, nor could he throw himself on the ground. He did not go to hospital until a few days after the punishment was inflicted, and it is therefore only presumable that the handcuffs might have injured him. Dr. Harris says that he admitted cutting his hand with glass, and he was, I may remark, on another occasion found aggravating the sore with a piece of bamboo in order no doubt to make it worse, and so prolong his stay in hospital. The paid warders of the jail will testify to the falsity of Sarafat's statement.

Prisoner Bissoo was tied up by convict warder Watson in the presence of the Committee, in which position he remained during the examination of the other eight prisoners. He was in my opinion tied about as tightly as I intend shall be the case when I award the punishment of back handcuffs. Of these nine men only Seetul Shaik said he had been beaten; Sobrati complained that his hands had been fastened up a little higher than Bissoo's were; and Kodan Meer said his were fastened much higher, though it was evident that to fasten them as he explained would of necessity have broken or dislocated his arms. The others had no complaints, some on the contrary admitting they were tied even looser than was Bissoo.

None of the officers of the Press Department appear to have thought the prisoners had grounds for complaint, neither have they ever heard the cries of the supposed victims nor witnessed them suffering, either under or after the punishment. The Deputy Superintendent, Moonshi Abdul Guffoor, has often seen the punishment inflicted. His duties take him to all parts of the jail, and it is therefore the more extraordinary that he should never have heard or seen anything amiss had such in reality been the case. There is a misprint in Mr Ross's statement, for that officer tells me that when examined by the Committee he said "I have not heard men screaming out from pain on account of back handcuffs." The printed copy says "I have heard," &c.; the word not has been omitted

On the 2nd day the released prisoner Bason stated that he had seen men with handcuffs on as high as the back of their necks. This can be proved false, as in Sullivan's time these prisoners were punished in the refractory yard, where none can see them. Certainly Bason could not see from where he worked, which was either in the corridors or in the press, and after Sullivan's time they were placed in charge of a native convict overseer, who is now in jail and can testify to the contrary. It is inexplicable how Bason alone should have heard the "Manilla man" shouting from the refractory yard, though none of the prison officers nor the Press Department heard him. Bason goes on to say that Peter Wakefield was with others kept working till 3 A.M.; but it will be observed that Wakefield told the Committee that when he first came to jail it only took him till 7, 8 or 9 o'clock to finish grinding his 15 seers of wheat, and that after a time he could finish his task by 5 o'clock. Bason has been in jail three times in all as follows :—

Serial No.	Register No.	Crime.	Period of sentence.	Date of sentence	Date of release.	Sentencing Authority.
1	3810	Forgery, &c.	Rigorous imprisonment, 2 years.	27th Nov. 1877	26th Nov. 1879 ...	High Court, Calcutta.
2	6706	Assault	Rs. 25 fine or 14 days.	9th April 1884	22nd April 1884 ..	Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta.
3	6762	Enticing away a married woman with criminal intent.	Rigorous imprisonment, 6 months. .	30th May 1884	29th November 1884.	Ditto ditto.

With reference to the statement of the lately released prisoner Behary Singh, who was brought to the jail by Bason, I would point out that he mentions "Sobratee" as one of those injured and marked by back handcuffs. Sobratee happens, however, to have been examined before the Committee on the first day, and it is recorded that he is without mark or injury. Behary's other statements are undoubtedly equally false and malicious.

On the 9th December Bason again brought three released prisoners to the jail. Of these "Robert Robeiro" was first examined. It is to be regretted that Robeiro's labour ticket cannot anywhere be discovered. His statement that he was punished every second day can be proved false in reference to the punishment register for the month during which he was in jail. Besides, had he been so repeatedly up for punishment, I should certainly have noticed it, and should have resorted to some severer mode of punishment than back handcuffs.

The weights of prisoners on admission and release are taken in the presence of Babu Peary Lall Shome, the assistant jailor, and are recorded by him. He is prepared, if necessary, to swear that Robeiro weighed 110 lbs. both on admission and on release. Mr. Larymore detected him lying about his hand which was injured years before, and it may, I think, be concluded that his other complaints are equally groundless and false.

The next man examined was released prisoner Francis. The paid warders of the jail are able to prove the falsity of his statements both about the handcuffs having been tied up as high as they would go and about his head being put between the warder's knees while his hands were wrenched upwards; also about the water he says was thrown on his shoulders. And the extract herewith submitted taken from the Jailor's report book will testify to his never having been kept at work till 4 A.M.

With reference to the statement of Edward Williams that when in hospital he heard European and natives groaning while walking about in the refractory yard, I can only say I disbelieve it; but even it differs from Bason's account of yells and screams that he heard as far off as the other side of the jail.

It is worthy of note that the released prisoners Bason, Behary Sing, Robert Robeiro, and Francis are all old offenders, viz :—

(1) Bason, three times in jail (once two years for forgery).
(2) Behary Singh, three times.
(3) Robert Robeiro, twice.
(4) J. T. Francis, three times.

This will be seen on reference to the accompanying rolls :—

Basunt Lall has a mark on his shoulder from back handcuffs. I am told that this man when undergoing the punishment struggled much and flung himself about, but the overseer in charge of the gang at the time is, I believe, prepared to give evidence to the effec that neither of the two European warders spat in his face. His previous record is sufficient to show what reliance can be placed upon anything he says.

It is recorded that of the 53 men examined on the third day of the sitting only five men had any marks. I would beg to point out that of these five, if we except Basunt Lall, none of them had marks that could be observed without the very closest search; none made any complaints, and all appeared to be in remarkably good health.

Extracts from the Jailor's Daily Report Book.

It was only on the following occasion that Europeans have ever been, either before or since, kept at work after lock-up time.

W. áC. BEADON.

August 7th, 1884.—Seven out of 11 of the European prisoners employed at wheat-grinding had not completed their task at lock-up and were kept until they had finished.

August 8th, 1884.—Eight of the number of Europeans employed at wheat-grinding had not completed their task at lock-up, and were kept working, some I find till 3 o'clock this morning. I have given orders that if a man does not complete his task at 12 midnight, he is to be sent to his yard and reported for short work.

August 9th, 1884.—Eight Europeans were employed up to and from 8 o'clock till 12 midnight, as they had not completed their task at the evening lock-up

August 10th, 1884.—Eight Europeans not finished their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

August 13th, 1884 —Fourteen Europeans had not completed their task at wheat-grinding at lock-up, and were kept till midnight ; even then the majority of them were short

August 17th, 1884.—Fifteen Europeans had not completed their task at wheat-grinding at lock-up last evening, and were kept at work till 11-30 P.M.

August 19th, 1884.—No less than 15 Europeans had not completed their task of work at lock-up; three out of the number only had done by 9 P.M., the remainder were kept working till 10 o'clock.

August 20th, 1884.—Seventeen Europeans had not completed their full task of work at lock-up

August 21st, 1884 —Fifteen Europeans had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

August 22nd, 1884 —Fourteen Europeans had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up. Some of them were short when they left off, but as the wheat was damp and difficult to grind, I have not reported them.

August 23rd, 1884.—Ten Europeans had not finished their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

August 24th, 1884.—There were only 4 Europeans who had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up

August 26th 1884.—There were 11 Europeans who had not finished their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up, but the majority of them had finished their work at 9 P M.

August 27th, 1884.—There were 13 Europeans who had not finished their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

August 29th, 1884.—Eleven Europeans had not completed their task of work at wheat-grinding at lock-up last evening.

August 30th, 1884.—There were 13 Europeans who had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up last evening.

August 31st, 1884.—Twelve Europeans had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up, but the whole had finished at 10 o'clock.

September 5th, 1884.—Twelve Europeans had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up last evening.

September 6th, 1884.—There were 8 Europeans who had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

September 7th, 1884.—Six Europeans had not finished their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up time last evening.

September 9th, 1884 —All the European prisoners employed in wheat-grinding, except prisoner Bason, had completed their task at lock-up yesterday evening.

September 10th, 1884.—Only two European prisoners, Bason and Scott, had not completed their task of wheat-grinding at lock-up.

APPENDIX B.

Extract from Mr. Beadon's Annual Administration Report of the Midnapore Central Jail for the year 1880.

Paragraph 31.—"It is often difficult to decide upon the most applicable form of punishment for any of the above-mentioned offences, because the effect depends to a great extent upon individual circumstances. Corporal punishment being now only permissible for heinous offences, and abolished except as a very last resort for cases of idleness, it becomes difficult to devise means to induce many prisoners to perform full tasks. I have introduced a punishment here that seems to a great extent to meet the difficulty. Whenever a prisoner persistently refuses to work, or when he has been repeatedly brought up for short work, I place his hands behind his back and handcuff them together, making the palms meet; two pieces of jute rope are then attached to the wrist and drawn up over his shoulders and under his arm-pits, until the hands reach nearly to between the shoulder blades; the ropes are then securely tied and the culprit is turned loose, like a trussed hen, for one, two, or three hours as the case may be, or until he promises to go to work with a will. It is a certain means of bringing a refractory prisoner to terms, and is an excellent punishment for repeated short work, and might, I think, with benefit be introduced into all our jails. Care must be taken to pull the string only so tight as to cause no actual pain. the chief merit of the plan being that after a short time the position becomes so irksome to the offender, that he begs to be released, and it also makes him an object of ridicule to his comrades, which I find has with many men a deterrent influence."

I hereby certify that the above is a true copy of paragraph No. 31 of the Midnapur Central Jail Annual Administration Report for the year 1880.

Personal Asst. to Inspector-General of Jails.

APPENDIX H.

Fort William in Bengal to Wit.

The information of Witness taken and acknowledged on behalf of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, touching the death of Ruttun Dass, at the Presidency Jail in the Town of Calcutta, at Fort William in Bengal, on the 15th day of September in the year of our Lord Christ One thousand Eight hundred and Eighty-four and in the 49th year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen Defender of the Faith, and so forth, before me Gilbert S. Henderson, Esquire, Her Majesty's Coroner for the said Town. on an inquisition, then and there taken on view of the body of the said Ruttun Dass then and there lying dead, as follows to wit:—

George Francis Angelo Harris upon oath, saith—I am in medical charge of the Presidency Jail. I identified the body of Ruttun Dass to the Coroner and Jury. He was admitted into Jail on the 17th September 1883, in transfer from Churpan (sic).

His health on admission was good. He was admitted into hospital on the 13th instant suffering from high fever. I saw him in the evening at about ½ past 5 P.M His temperature was exceedingly high, nearly 107. He was unable to speak at all and could hardly swallow. He was barely conscious. The fever was reduced but he never recovered, and the next day the fever rose nearly as high again and he died last night at 5-10 P.M.

In my opinion he died from excessive high fever and from heat apoplexy.

I made a post mortem examination this morning. I found extreme congestion of the brain with congestion of the liver and basis of the lungs. The cause of death was due to exhaustion from extremely high temperature.

CALCUTTA POLICE OFFICE,

9th January 1885.

I APPEND to this note copy of a statement made to me on the 26th ultimo by the writer of the letter which appeared in the Statesman of the 20th November last signed "Humanity." I wrote to "Humanity" through the Editor of that paper on the 2nd December, inviting him to call upon me; and I also sent him a message through an acquaintance that I should be glad to see him; but I was given to understand that he was unwilling to come. Finally he called on me, but I am not at liberty to reveal his name.

The information contained in his statement has been communicated by me to the Official Visitors of the Jail. Whenever persons have been named, they have been sent for and examined, and the substance of the entire statement has been fully dealt with in the report drawn up by the Commission. No points have been lost sight of, which admitted of investigation.

J. LAMBERT,

Deputy Commissioner of Police.

Police Office, 26th December 1884.

STATEMENT MADE BY "HUMANITY."

I AM the writer of the letter which appeared in the Statesman of the 20th November last. I was employed all my term in the Press. I never saw men in back-handcuffs undergoing the punishment; but I often saw men who had just been released from the handcuffs. The Press men would be brought straight back to the Press to work, generally by a convict warder. Many of them were unable to work properly for some days after the punishment. They complained of great pain in their back, chest, and upper part of their bodies. I thought the punishment too severe, and I promised them to bring the matter forward when I got out. Just before my release they reminded me of my promise. That is why I wrote. I was able to describe the manner in which the handcuffs were applied, because one day some of the men shewed me. It was in the Press. They had no handcuffs, but they made up the appliances by bits of rope which were lying about. I have described the mode of applying the back-handcuffs just as the men described it to me. They shewed me how high their hands were drawn up.

I cannot say of my own knowledge that the men were marched up and down in the sun, but it was a well-known fact that they were kept in the sun. Every one talked of it.

By "first meal" I meant breakfast; this is served out about 11 A.M., so prisoners undergoing back-handcuffs would have to wait till 2 P.M or 3 P.M. They had the usual parched gram early in the morning. The convict warder to whom I referred is Watson. The prisoners who had been in back-handcuffs always complained of having been beaten and punched by him. Convict warder Sullivan was bad too, but he is released. Kelly's name was not much mentioned in connection with back-handcuffs. I have seen bruises and marks on the bodies of men who had been released from back-handcuffs. I remember the case of a Deputy Collector, a man from Mymensingh, I think: he was brought back by Watson bleeding at the elbow. He said Watson had hit him with a stick, and had kicked him. This prisoner is in the jail still. Many others complained of having been struck by Watson, Kelly, and Sullivan. Watson and Kelly often carried a stick, a stout walking-stick. I concluded they had permission to carry a stick for self-defence.

My information regarding the jailor's having been "aroused out of his slumbers by the cries of the prisoners" undergoing back-handcuffs was derived from hearsay talk among prisoners in the jail.

As regards a prisoner being rescued by the jailor from a watery grave, this too was told me by others,—a native prisoner ran out of the refractory yard with his back-handcuffs on, and was caught at the tank. I cannot say who knew the man's name.

My statement regarding the entry which I was told was made by the Deputy Commissioner (yourself) about the condition of lad Jordan was derived by hearsay from another prisoner, who told me Munshi Abdul Guffoor had seen your remarks in the visitors' register.

The name of the prisoner who died is Rutton Dass. The report that before dying he had made a statement emanated from the hospital; it was the common talk of the Jail that he had made such a statement. I did not know him personally, but everyone said he was a strong hale man before he underwent the punishment. This case was the talk of the Jail. The "other native" referred to by me was a pressman: he was punished with back-handcuffs just about the same time as Rutton Dass. He was disabled by the punishment when he was brought back to the Press. I saw him; he could not work. Munshi Abdul Guffoor thought he was scheming, but when the man's koortah was taken off, he saw marks, and sent the man to hospital. I don't remember seeing the man again. I was released four or five days afterwards. I should know the man again if I saw him.

By saying that it is "a common thing to see prisoners with bleeding and lacerated bodies going to hospital daily for treatment," I referred to men who had been flogged. Mr. Beadon always gives 30 stripes. Two pressmen were punished with 30 stripes each, because they accidentally broke a stone in the Press; one of them had to go about for days afterwards with his body bent. I saw these men.

I only remember witnessing personally two cases of ill-treatment while I was in Jail. One Sunday I saw paid warder Richards strike the lad Jordan with a stick on the face, because he saluted him with the wrong hand. Once the Superintendent struck a prisoner. I don't remember who it was. The Superintendent ordered back-handcuffs, and the man appealed; so he hit him with his stick.

The Superintendent will never listen to men who have any defence to make: once he increased a punishment of cells from 48 hours to 72 hours, simply because the man remonstrated. He was an old man, an apothecary, either Eurasian or English.

I was twice punished: once I had dark cells for 48 hours, for having my light burning after hours. I was allowed a lamp, and one night I fell asleep. Kelly reported me and told the Superintendent I must have been smoking. I denied it, but the Superintendent would not listen. It was while I was in these cells that I heard prisoners undergoing back-handcuffs screaming out.

My second offence was "insubordination to a convict warder." I had been allowed an interview with my wife. After such interviews prisoners are always examined by a warder. Kelly wanted to examine me in an indecent manner. I protested, and was sentenced to fourteen days' irons by the Superintendent on the Jailor's report.

Prisoners do not dare to complain to the visitors. Weston was punished for complaining; and so was Urilla. The visiting Justice who heard the complaint was a native Magistrate. It was about the food. Urilla got irons and was sent to wheat-grinding. Weston was sent off to another part of the jail; was also put to wheat-grinding.

All Mr. Beadon's punishments are very severe. Adam, a Eurasian, who was working at the Press near me, was punished with a month's irons for not saluting the Superintendent. The man explained at the time to Mr. Beadon that he was engaged at some work with the Press Superintendent, and so did not see him.

The paid warders are nobody in the Jail. They merely walk about. All the discipline is in the hands of the convict warders. They have far too much power. It is almost always on the complaint of convict warders that men are punished, and many complaints are made by them, so that they may extort money. I sent out two letters through a convict warder and he received on each occasion Rs. 10 from my friends. Rs. 5 was given for each letter to the bearer; the remaining ten I gave to the convict warders through another prisoner. After this no complaint was made against me.

J. LAMBERT,

Deputy Commissioner of Police.

No. 158P, dated Calcutta, the 17th January 1885.

From—J. WARE EDGAR, Esq., Offg. Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial, Political and Appointment Departments,

To—The Inspector-General of Jails.

I AM directed to forward, for any remarks you may wish to make upon it, the accompanying report of the result of the enquiry made by the official visitors of the Presidency Jail into certain allegations regarding the treatment of the prisoners in that jail, which were published in the Statesman of the 20th November last. The report also deals with the further allegations against the management of the Presidency Jail which subsequently appeared in that newspaper.

2. I am to say that in submitting your report you need not confine yourself to the subjects dealt with by the official visitors in connection with the Presidency Jail. The Lieutenant-Governor would be glad to receive any observations you may desire to make on the general question of jail discipline throughout the province.

3. A copy of the letter from this office to the Commissioner of Police, No. 1437P, dated the 24th November last, asking him to hold a meeting of the official visitors for the purpose of holding the enquiry, is also enclosed.

Dated Calcutta, the 29th January 1885.

From—E. V. Westmacott, Esq., c.s., Offg. Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal,
To—The Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Judicial, Political and Appointment Depts.

With reference to your No. 158P of 17th January 1885, in which you forward a copy of your No. 1437P of the 24th November 1884, directing the official visitors of the Presidency Jail to make inquiry, during my absence on tour, into certain allegations of the use of cruel punishment in the said jail contained in a letter addressed to the Statesman newspaper on the 20th November 1884, and in an article published by the said newspaper of the same date, and in which you also forward a copy of a report by the said official visitors, dated the 10th January 1885, of the result of their inquiry, for such remarks as I may wish to make, I have the honour to submit the following observations for the consideration of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

The letter referred to in the Statesman of the 20th November 1884, signed by "Humanity," drew attention to the manner in which the punishment of back-handcuffs, which is prescribed in the Jail Code, was applied in the Presidency Jail, and asserted that it amounted to "fiendish torture," and had in one instance caused death. On the 30th November the Statesman in another article spoke of the frequent publication in newspapers of the most harrowing and sickening details of tortures commonly practised in our jails, of a photograph taken by Dr. Mackenzie of a wretch fastened to the triangle and bleeding from the rods, and asserted that the murder of Mr. Norman, Judge of the High Court, was due to exasperation caused by the torture of the murderer's brother in the Presidency Jail. The Statesman quoting statements published in the Indian Daily News in 1877, as to fearful floggings with the cat, thirty to sixty in the Presidency Jail daily, declared that "we are assured" that these infamous brutalities or similar ones are practised still, and went on to demand that when death occurs in the jail hospital, the inquest shall be held by the Coroner and a jury, and not by the Jail Superintendent, by whom the Statesman asserts that inquests are now held. A few days later the same newspaper informed the public that an "old jail official" had mentioned having known two hundred lashes inflicted on a prisoner, and having seen a man so brutally flogged, that his bare shoulder-blade glittered in the sun. Later, again, the Statesman reproduced a remark from a native contemporary, unnamed, to the effect that there is a general belief among the people that prisoners are starved and flogged to death in the Presidency Jail, and announced that the Statesman had been forced to the conclusion that "the dreadful mortality in our prisons is the work of cold-blooded atrocities which can only be described correctly as murder." He further asserted that prisoners "have been killed by the double process of starvation and torture," and said that "we may be as sure as of our existence that the death-roll was furnished by the prisoners who were flogged, gagged, back-handcuffed, consigned to the cells, and starved." About this period a petition was forwarded to the Lieutenant-Governor asking for the examination of a youth named Jordan, said to have been incapacitated for life for any work by the severity with which he had been treated, and asserting that numbers had died under similar treatment. This petition was sent to the official visitors for inquiry. On the 21st December the official visitors having met several times the Statesman published an account of some of the evidence given before them by certain released convicts—Bason, Rebeiro, Francis, and Williams. The statements of these men that convicts in dark cells were not let out, as the rules require, for half an hour twice a day, that the Superintendent would not allow men to defend themselves, and had admitted it, that prisoners in August and September were commonly kept at work for 20 or 21 hours a day successively, and that Mr. Beadon when asked to produce the back-handcuffs said that they had all been destroyed, will be fully considered. The Statesman at the same time published a memorandum by one "E.O.," who states that he has known men's hip-joints injured for life by cross-bar leg irons and that prisoners are fed on salt dholl to provoke thirst and then locked up deprived of water. I do not observe other points requiring notice until the Statesman brings forward figures showing the mortality of 1879, and saying that the jail records should be examined to show how many of those who died had been tortured. The Statesman particularly asks for the prison history of Rutton Dass, who died in September last. On the 30th December the Statesman published another letter from "Humanity," and also made some remarks upon the boy Jordan, who had been one of the editor's visitors. On the 26th December a statement was made by "Humanity" to the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Mr. Lambert, under promise that his name should not be published.

On the 10th January the official visitors submitted their report upon the allegations into which they had to inquire and which refer to the Presidency Jail, but as the attack of the Statesman is not confined to the Presidency Jail, being also directed against the general management of prisons in Bengal, I think it necessary for me to examine also the allegations which have a wider application. I will first examine how far the allegations brought forward by the Statesman or others are true, or based on truth, and how far they are false or exaggerated, and mischievously calculated to mislead the general public as to the character of the management of jails, secondly I will consider whether in any points Mr. Beadon's conduct, as Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, requires correction and censure, and thirdly whether there is in the system of management of Bengal jails generally anything repulsive to humanity or calling for reform. Below I have as far as possible reduced to distinct charges the assertions made, and have, in parallel columns, noted the finding of the official visitors, or the opinion which I have formed, as to the truth or otherwise of those charges.

Charges.	Results of inquiry.
1. That Mr. Beadon on taking charge of the Presidency Jail adopted his own mode of applying back-handcuffs, and converted it into a punishment attended with absolute torture and cruelty.	1. The punishment of back-handcuffs is prescribed in the Jail Code, but without detailed instructions as to the manner of application. Mr. Larymore, who preceded Mr. Beadon as Superintendent of the Presidency Jail; did not use this punishment, because he found that without straps convicts could slip their bodies through their arms, and bring their hands in front, and he did not feel justified in using straps in the absence of any mention of them in the Code. He did not, however, think that back handcuffs could be used effectively without straps. Dr. Mackenzie, a previous Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, used back-handcuffs, and always used straps. The Code had not then been issued. Mr. Beadon had used the straps in the Midnapore Jail in 1880, and described their application minutely in his report on the administration of that jail. As his report was received by the Inspector-General of Jails without any comment on the point, he concluded that his action was unobjectionable. He distinctly says in that report that the string must not be pulled so tight as to cause actual pain, and I am satisfied that there was no intention of so straining the shoulders or arms as to amount to torture.

2. That by straps over the shoulders, the hands are drawn upwards until the palms rest on the nape of the neck, or till the victim is able to reach the crown of his head with the tips of his fingers, and again that back-handcuffs have been so applied as to wrench the victim's arms upwards and backwards over his head, that the sockets of his shoulder have been heard to crack, in the midst of his yells and groans.	2. Into this point the official visitors have inquired, but I do not find that they have declared definitely whether they think the allegation true or false; they report (paragraph 12) that they hesitate to say that it is proved that the punishment has been made into a torture, and they distinctly state their opinion (paragraph 8) that with most men it would be impossible to draw up the hands as described by "Humanity." I have questioned a number of witnesses besides those who appeared before the visitors. Some were jail officers, and some were convicts, several of whom had worn back-handcuffs, and I have made them show me the height at which the wrists were suspended. In no case have I seen the wrists higher than a point which brings the forearm into a horizontal position. I should say that the forefinger is never higher than the lower edge of the shoulder-blade. I feel no hesitation in saying that it is false that hands have ever been drawn up to the nape of the neck, or till the fingers reach the head. I agree with the official visitors in thinking that the punishment might easily be made very painful, and I would never sanction the use of straps without some contrivance whereby the maximum height to which the wrists could be drawn could be strictly limited. I receive with extreme caution the evidence of those convicts who came forward to give it, and place much more dependence on that of other convicts whom I have questioned casually in the jail. I see no reason to believe that the warders have ever inflicted torture by unduly shortening the straps, or that any pain has ever been caused by the act of drawing up the wrists, but I am of opinion that very painful cramps would after some time ensue from their maintenance in the same position.
3. That a rope attached to the centre of the manacles is fastened to his neck, throwing his whole frame into a crescentic form.	3. The official visitors (paragraph 8) report that with the exception of a rope round the neck (which is a mis-description) the description given in the letter of "Humanity" fairly corresponds with the admitted method of application, except as regards the all-important point of the degree of tension or force applied. I think it should further be noted, that to speak of the body being drawn into a crescentic form is more than an exaggeration. The wrists, as drawn up by the shoulder-straps are brought into the position in which a soldier's hands are placed preparatory to his being trained in the sword exercise, and the position opens the shoulders and throws out the chest. I do not think it would be possible to arch the body by drawing up the wrists with shoulder-straps, and such a mis-description is calculated to produce a false and mischievous impression.

4. That with body arched he is made to walk up and down in the burning sun for five or six hours.	4. The official visitors (paragraph 13) think that at one time the convicts wearing back-handcuffs must often have had to walk up and down in the sun. They think it impossible that there can always have been shade in the yard in which the punishment was inflicted. Upon this point I will not express a contrary opinion, though Mr. Beadon and the jail officials assure me that there always was shade in one part or other of the yard. I am, however, satisfied, and the official visitors do not express any opinion to the contrary, that there was no intention of making exposure to the sun part of the punishment, and that on the representation of warder Shevelin of the want of protection from sun and rain the convicts were moved into the penal yard, and eventually into the corridors. If the convicts were at one time exposed to the sun, they were moved as soon as the jail officials observed it. It is true that they were walked up and down.
5. That men are thrown in this condition (viz. with their arms wrenched upwards and backwards over their heads) into the cells for hours, to wake the whole prison with their cries.	5. This is absolutely false. The convicts were kept marching up and down.
6. That while undergoing this punishment the convict is not allowed to drink water.	6. The official visitors have found (paragraph 13) that although the convict overseer might at his discretion refuse water, water was provided, and it was intended that it should be given, and no complaint has been made to the visitors that water was not given. I have inquired very fully into this, and am satisfied that water was often given, and I have not been able to find an instance in which it was refused.
7. That he is not allowed to partake of his first meal till he has undergone his punishment.	7. This statement is false, as the official visitors have recorded (paragraph 13). The first meal is given at 6 A.M. and "Humanity" has admitted that he referred to the second meal, usually given at 11 o'clock. It is true that this meal is not given to convicts punished with back-handcuffs until 2 P.M.
8. That back-handcuffs are applied by a convict warder who	8. Upon this point I do not find that the official visitors have made any remark.

is undergoing transportation for ten years for manslaughter perpetrated under most cold-blooded circumstances, and again that the two warders are convicts who have had their tickets-of-leave cancelled for ruffianism, and who are in jail for murder.	There are in the jail three paid warders—Shevelin, Johnson, and Richards—all old soldiers of very good character, and one or other of these was always not only present but actually assisting when back-handcuffs were being put on or taken off. The former two were examined by the official visitors, and Richards has been examined at great length by me. With them were the convict warders Watson and Kelly, and at one time convict overseer Sullivan. Not one of these three convict officers is imprisoned for manslaughter. Kelly and Watson are sentenced under section 394 of the Indian Penal Code for committing robbery with hurt, and Sullivan was convicted of theft. In the first place it is untrue that the infliction of the punishment of back-handcuffs was entrusted to any of these convict officers, without the supervision of a paid warder, and in the second place they are none of them convicted of manslaughter, so that the attempt to show that the infliction of the punishment was left to the discretion of especially ruffianly men breaks down entirely.
9. That the said convict warders belabour and otherwise maltreat convicts while wearing back-handcuffs.	9. The official visitors have not recorded any finding on this point. Several convicts deposed before them to rough usage on the part of the convict warders, but I disbelieve them. One convict, Ishwar Chunder Mozumdar, appears to have had bleeding elbows after the punishment of back-handcuffs, and attributed it to being pushed down by Sullivan. Considering this man's demeanour while under examination, and his attitude towards the jail officials, as shown by his prison history, ever since he has been a convict, I should not be inclined to place any reliance on what he said, nor do the official visitors (paragraph 20) appear to regard him as more trustworthy than I do. I examined a number of persons as to the conduct of the convict warders, and am quite satisfied that they never used sticks. Although no prison officer, convict or free, is ever allowed to strike a convict, force must sometimes be used in the case of active resistance, and I think it possible that they may have pulled or pushed refractory convicts who refused to march in line, but find no reason to believe that they ever inflicted what could be called a blow. Convict Ishwar Chunder Mozumdar appears to have been very refractory, and I think he may have had a fall when struggling with the warders, which, with his hands tied up, might easily abrade his elbows.

10. That the Jailor has been roused out of his slumbers by the cries of convicts wearing back-handcuffs, and has gone to rescue them.	10. There appears to be no foundation for this statement.
11. That on one occasion the Jailor saved from drowning a convict who fell into a tank while wearing back-handcuffs.	11. The official visitors report (paragraph 29) that a convict went to the tank to drink, but did not fall into it, nor was he nearly drowned, nor did the Jailor arrive till after he was back again in the yard.
12. That the Deputy Commissioner in August noticed the fearfully bruised condition of a convict named Jordan who had worn back-handcuffs, and noted in the visitors' book that the punishment amounted to more than torture.	12. The official visitors (paragraph 30) report that Mr. Lambert, Deputy Commissioner of Police, did notice a small bruise on this boy, but made no entry in the visitors' book, as the convict himself attributed it to a fall. I may be mistaken, but I think when this convict was examined before me, Mr. Lambert, and Syad Ameer Hosen, on the 8th December, the blue stain of which note was then made was said to be the mark which Mr. Lambert had previously noticed.
13. That Jordan's arms were upraised behind his back, handcuffed, and maintained at the level of his neck with a stick thrust under his arms.	13. There is no foundation for this statement, and it is difficult to understand in what manner the readers are expected to believe that the stick was applied.
14. That this was done for a number of days in succession with enforced fasting and denial of water to drink.	14. The only occasions on which Jordan was punished with back-handcuffs were on the 11th August, 25th August, and 3rd September 1884. The only enforced fasting would be the postponement of his meal from eleven o'clock till two, and that he was denied water to drink is improbable. The boy was examined by two official visitors in my presence on the 8th December, and he made no complaint of the kind.
15. That this necessitated his admission into hospital in a broken and bleeding condition.	15. This convict was never in hospital after the 1st May 1884.
16. That he is incapacitated for life for any work with injured back and dislodged collar-bone.	16. He appeared before me and two official visitors on the 8th December, and before Dr. Sanders on the 11th December, and was found to be, as he admitted, perfectly uninjured. He entered the jail on the 29th March 1884 weighing 101lbs., and on the 7th December weighed 124lbs. A gain of 23lbs. in weight does not indicate any loss of health. The Statesman records that on Saturday (the 20th December) the boy Jordan was brought to the office by his father to show the condition of idiotcy and helplessness to which he had been reduced, and that the boy asserted that he had been thrown into a tank and kept there till he was half-drowned. This statement had not been made before, so far as I am aware, and appears to be absolutely false; but the boy, who though slow and stupid, is no idiot, evidently understood the kind of information he was expected to give, and was equal to the occasion. In order to judge whether his stupidity was due to the treatment he had received in jail, of which he has three times been an inmate, it would be necessary to ascertain his state of intelligence when first admitted, a point on which the Statesman is silent; but Mr. Larymore, who was Superintendent at the time, has stated that Jordan's father came to him, described his son as wanting both in intelligence and industry, and expressed a hope that he would be well whipped while in jail, as it might reform him and lead him to endeavour to earn an honest livelihood. I may draw attention to the fact that had the Statesman been actuated by a desire to lay true information before the public, he could hardly have failed, on seeing the boy's absolutely uninjured physical condition, to correct the misstatements which had appeared as to his having been permanently incapacitated for work by ill-treatment.

17. That numbers have died under similar treatment.	17. Mr. Beadon took charge of the Presidency Jail on the 19th March 1884 and first inflicted the punishment of back-handcuffs on the 31st May 1884. The statement annexed to the visitor's report (Appendix C) shows that there have only been 23 deaths since Mr. Beadon took charge. Of these twenty-three who died, 13 had never been punished, and only four had worn back-handcuffs. Of these four, one died of heat apoplexy, one of enteric fever one month and twenty-three days after wearing back-handcuffs, one, a cook, of a burn, or rather a scald, from a boiler being upset over him, one month and eleven days after it, and one of measles two months after it. I shall speak of the case of heat apoplexy, which may possibly have some connection with the punishment of back-handcuffs, presently, but that numbers have died under such treatment as that under which Jordan is said to have suffered, is clearly false. It is false that Jordan was injured as is alleged, and false that any convicts have died from wearing back-handcuffs, except possibly one who died of heat apoplexy, which may have been caused by exposure to the sun while wearing back-handcuffs.

18. That on the 12th September a robust native who wore back-handcuffs was tortured and belaboured to such an extent that he died; that he suffered the greatest pangs, pointed out a convict warder, and said that the latter had maltreated him while undergoing the punishment "which was the result of his suffering."	18. This must refer to the case of Rutton Das, the convict who died of heat apoplexy as above mentioned. The official visitors reporting (paragraph 17) on this case, think that he had probably been exposed to the sun, and that no other cause is forthcoming to explain why he should have had heat apoplexy. In the end of paragraph 23 the official visitors say, that unless this case is an exception, no death can be in the remotest degree connected with back-handcuffs.
19. That the death of Rutton Das was the result of inflammation of both shoulder-joints attended with high fever, and that Dr. Harris' post mortem examination was defective, not noticing the state of the shoulders.	19. Dr. Harris informed the visitors that he did observe the joints, that there was no swelling, no dislocation, and no fracture; that Rutton Das did not open his mouth in hospital, or point out a convict warder, or affirm that he had been maltreated. I do not see the slightest grounds for suspecting that Rutton Das died from any cause but heat apoplexy. I fear that this may possibly have been caused by exposure to the sun while wearing back-handcuffs, but when I find this the only case of death out of 750 cases in which back-handcuffs were worn, I cannot consider it a result which could reasonably have been anticipated, and as soon as the attention of the jail officials was drawn to the exposure to the sun the place of punishment was at once changed to one where there was sufficient shelter.
20. That when a prisoner dies in the jail, the Superintendent of the Jail, generally a medical officer, holds the inquest, and that the verdict is one that suppresses everything that is vital in the case.	20. The Superintendent of the Presidency Jail is not a medical officer, and has nothing to do with inquests. The inquest on the body of Rutton Das was held by the Coroner of Calcutta with a jury, as inquest invariably is when a death occurs in the Presidency Jail. The official visitors have annexed to their report a copy of the proceedings recorded by the Coroner in this case.
21. That another native was admitted to hospital at the same time all but dead from the same cause, and it was rumoured that he had succumbed.	21. The official visitors (paragraphs 15, 16) consider that this must refer to one Sharafat who was punished with back-handcuffs on the 12th September, the date of the punishment of Rutton Das and admitted to hospital on the 16th September, two days after the death of Rutton Das. He was not all but dead, nor has he succumbed, but his arm was swollen and it was found necessary to puncture it. He aggravated the sore in hospital with pieces of glass and bamboo, and this, I am informed by Dr. Harris, is a common practice of convicts desirous of prolonging their stay in hospital.

22. That water was thrown on the straps worn with back-handcuffs to tighten them.	22. There appears to be no foundation for this statement.
23. That Mr. Beadon, when asked to produce the back-handcuffs for inspection, told the official visitors that they had all been destroyed.	23. The official visitors (paragraph 41) report that there is absolutely no foundation for this assertion, as the handcuffs had been produced and applied in their presence.
24. That strong men who have worn back-handcuffs almost always have to be admitted into hospital, and are sometimes disabled for life.	24. The official visitors (paragraph 15) examined the last 53 men who had worn back-handcuffs and found no marks on 48 of them. The other five showed slight bruises on the shoulders where the straps had passed, or slight abrasions on the wrists. There is no evidence of any injury being caused by back-handcuffs beyond the swollen arm of Sharafat, possibly the death from heat apoplexy of Rutton Das, and possibly some injury to the wrist of a convict named Rebeiro, who having been released appeared before the visitors to give his testimony. He endeavoured to make them believe that the weakness of his wrist, which he showed, was caused by back-handcuffs, but Mr. Larymore, in whose custody he had been when convicted once before, made him admit that his tasks had been reduced on account of the weakness of this wrist five years before. It does not therefore appear what injury was caused to it by the back-handcuffs. It is true that the shoulders remain stiff for one or two days after wearing back-handcuffs, but as to any permanent injury caused by them, nothing has come to light. I have pushed my inquiries on this point much further than the official visitors did.
25. That Mr. Beadon, up to September last, never administered less than the maximum number of stripes, no matter how trivial the offence.	25. The official visitors (paragraph 32) report that Mr. Beadon admits that he usually imposes the maximum number of stripes because he inflicts that punishment rarely and only in bad cases. As stripes had only been inflicted 27 times between the date of Mr. Beadon's taking charge in March, and the 18th November, it is scarcely probable that they were ever inflicted in trivial cases, nor does the Punishment Register show any reason for supposing that they were. Rule 640 of the Jail Code requires all official visitors to examine the Punishment Register and bring to the notice of the Inspector-General of Jails every instance in which it appears that whipping has been unnecessarily used as a punishment, and therefore, if Mr. Beadon had been whipping prisoners unnecessarily, it would undoubtedly have been brought to my notice by the visitors ; they have apparently seen no occasion for doing so. It is not the fact that Mr. Beadon never inflicted less than thirty stripes, as I find entries in the Punishment Register of a less number being given.

26. That it is a common sight to see native prisoners "with bleed- "ing and lacerated bodies wending "their way to the hospital daily for "treatment."	26. The official visitors (paragraph 31) report that they disbelieve this statement. "Humanity" has explained that he referred to prisoners who had been flogged. As only twenty-seven floggings were inflicted in eight months, or less than four on an average each month, the spectacle of a flogged convict wending his way to hospital can scarcely have been a daily one, even if every one went to hospital after a flogging, which is very far from being usual. I find that only seven out of the twenty-seven flogged were admitted to hospital in consequence, and I have rarely seen convicts under treatment in any jail hospital in consequence of being flogged. I have already spoken of the proneness of convicts to aggravate slight sores by artificial irritation, in order to prevent their healing, and to prolong their stay in hospital.
27. That many men in the Presidency Jail have been murdered in the last twelve years by the repeated floggings to which they were subjected until their bodies were a mass of gangrene. That floggings were repeated before the wounds caused by previous lashing were healed. That the number of corporal punishments in the Presidency Jail were in 1877 from 30 to 60 daily. That these "infamous brutalities, or similar" ones, are practised still. That prisoners are starved and flogged to death in the Presidency Jail, and that this alone increases the death-rate of the jail population. That death has been at the rate of one man in every four or five every year.	27. The official visitors (paragraph 40) report that the substratum of truth which underlies one of the most sensational of the paragraphs from which these charges are extracted is that in 1879, when floggings and penal diet were very frequently imposed the mortality did rise to an extent which makes it maintainable that there was some connection between the two. They have, however, omitted to notice the general reduction of the diet of prisoners in that year, or the fact that it was in 1880 found necessary to increase it. Of this I shall speak presently. Appendix C shows that out of 29 prisoners who died in 1884, 16 had never been punished at all. Not one of them had been flogged. The death-rate in the Presidency Jail, so far from being one in four or five convicts every year, or from 20 to 25 per cent., is shown in Appendix D to have risen to 5·12 per cent. in the year 1879, but in no other year from 1874 inclusive to have been above 3·15, which was the rate in 1880. As to gangrene produced by flogging, and flogging on unhealed sores, I do not believe a word. Medical officers always examine a convict, and certify to his being physically fit to undergo the punishment before he is flogged, and are far too careful to allow any one to be flogged on unhealed sores.

28. That Dr. Mackenzie, when Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, had a picture photographed of a man at the triangle with the blood streaming from him under the punishment he was enduring. That Dr. Mackenzie admitted that an Afghan prisoner had been photographed at the triangle.	28. The official visitors have reported upon this (paragraph 33) that the convict was not an Afghan, but a well known Calcutta thief, that the flogging had not commenced when the photograph was taken, and was not ordered by a jail official, but by the sentence of a judicial court. The photograph was one of several taken in answer to enquiries that were being made as to the mode of inflicting various punishments.
29. That an Afghan or Pathan prisoner sentenced for something committed on the Punjab frontier, probably no offence in the estimation of his clansmen, was put on the tread-mill for refusing to break stones, fell off, and was kicked by the warder, whom he struck in the face with his fist, breaking his jaw.	29. The official visitors have (in paragraph 34) reported on this case that a certain Afghan was sentenced to three years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Norman on the 27th January 1870. That Mr. Norman was murdered 20th September 1871. That the convict was put on the treadmill, and assaulted a warder in 1872. That he struck a warder, not with his fist on the jaw, but with a hammer on the head.
That the late Mr. Justice Norman sentenced him to seven years' penal servitude for this offence.	That for this he was sentenced, not by Mr. Norman, who was dead, but by Mr. Markby; not to seven years' imprisonment, but to two. Of this there is no evidence.
That he begged to be sentenced to death rather than imprisonment, saying that he could not endure such flogging as he had witnessed without trying to kill his punisher.
That he was repeatedly flogged for refusal to break stones, and died in the hospital of the jail.	That he was flogged for refusing to break stone there is no evidence. He did not die in the jail, but was released and conveyed to the frontier on the 28th January 1875.
That it was this man's brother who assassinated Mr. Norman.	Of this there is no evidence, but the man's second conviction occurred after Mr. Norman's death.
30. That flogging is inflicted by a lash laid on at intervals of one minute to prolong the torture.	30. The lash is never used. Flogging is inflicted by a cane on the buttocks, and nothing has been heard of intervals of one minute. See official visitors' report (paragraph 37).
31. That the tail ends of the cats have been fitted with contrivances to cut and tear the flesh from the body.	31. No cat is known to have been ever used in a Bengal jail.
32. That two hundred lashes have been inflicted on a prisoner.	32. No lashes have ever been inflicted. Flogging is always administered with a cane on the breech, and the greatest number of stripes ever given is thirty.

Charges.	Results of inquiry.
33. That a man has been seen so brutally flogged that every atom of flesh had been torn from his back, until the bare shoulder-blade glittered in the sun.	33. It has been already stated that no such flogging as could render such an exhibition possible is ever inflicted in a Bengal jail. The allegation is absolutely false.
34. That three or four years ago the jail officials reduced the dietary, and that the result was that prisoners died like so many flies in the wards.	34. The allusion is doubtless to the events of 1879 of which I shall speak presently. As already stated, the death-rate in that year in the Presidency Jail did not exceed 5·12 per cent.
35. That a certain person has seen a hundred men at a time crowded round the hospital for treatment.	35. Appendix G shows the daily average number of prisoners in hospital in the Presidency Jail in 1882, 1883, and 1884 never to have exceeded 90·03, to which figure it rose in January 1884, when 152 cases of chicken-pox were admitted. The total number of cases admitted in that month was 299 or an average of less than ten every day. In February 1882 it was 258, but in no other month for three years have more than 200 cases been admitted. It is false that a hundred men are ever crowded round the hospital for treatment.
36. That the dreadful mortality in our prisons "is the work of "cold-blooded atrocities that can "only be described as murder." That prisoners have not died, but have been killed by the double process of starvation and torture. That the death-roll of prisoners is furnished by those who were flogged, gagged, back-handcuffed, consigned to the cells, and starved.	36. These allegations go beyond the Presidency Jail, and attack all the jails of the province. Since taking charge of the department in March last I have visited and carefully inspected 37 out of the 45 jails of Bengal, and unhesitatingly pronounce these charges to be false. I was absent from India during the whole of 1879, and have no personal knowledge of what then occurred, but I assert most positively that of late years the health of prisoners has been made the primary object in jail management, and that considerations of discipline have been made to give way to it. To answer such vague and wide charges categorically, by tracing the prison history of every convict who has died, would take more time than such calumnies appear to me to merit, but I feel very confident that the result of any examination of the prison records would triumphantly refute all charges of barbarity brought against prison management. The figures produced for the Presidency Jail, showing how many of the convicts who died in 1884 had never been punished, are a very fair sample of what the registers of other jails would show, and I feel sure that most of our deaths have occurred among convicts who not only have never been punished, but who have been admitted into jail in such a sickly state that no proper tasks could ever be exacted from them. I have carefully read through the prison history of 27 out of the 29 prisoners who died in 1884, the tickets of the other two, who were never punished, being lost. Except Rutton Dass, whose case I shall discuss presently, not one had been treated with any severity, and many of them had been under medical treatment and on light labour or none for the whole or the greater part of their residence in jail.

37. That convicts are imprisoned in total darkness for days together, with nothing but the prison floor to lie upon, and without a blanket even in the coldest weather.	37. Confinement in dark cells (Rule 676A, added to Jail Code by Government order of May 1884) shall never exceed 72 hours. Twice a day the convict is let out for half an hour. Bedding is not allowed during the day, but is put into the cell after the convict's evening meal. Convicts in cells are allowed their ordinary clothing, which includes a blanket coat. Convict Bason says he was not let out of his cell for half an hour twice a day. I cannot positively assert that this is false, for it is always possible that a rule may be broken, but there is no evidence to support the convict's statement, nor did he make any complaint to the Superintendent or to any official visitor.
38. That the food is so vile that prisoners cannot swallow it.	38. Upon this point the official visitors have not reported. I think Baboo Jodoo Lal Mullick is the only visitor who has ever suggested improvement in the food. I have more than once seen the food myself, and consider it good and wholesome. If it were so bad as is alleged, I have no doubt the official visitors would have heard of it. According to Rule 902 the Superintendent and Medical Officer are required to examine the cooked food at least once a week. Rule 907 requires the Superintendent to inquire into all complaints respecting food. Rule 61 requires the official visitors to see that all rules and orders are adhered to, and the visitors, I know, frequently inspect the food. Copies of all visitors' remarks are sent to me, and I do not think it possible that vile and uneatable food could be served out in any jail, even if the Superintendent neglected his duty, without my hearing of it, and I hope I need hardly say that I should not receive such information without paying due attention to it.
39. That penal diet consists of flour made into a paste, which is uneatable.	39. Penal diet is by Rule 650 laid down as consisting of one pound of flour of wheat or rice, according to the nationality of the convict, daily, boiled as a porridge and seasoned with salt. It is not intended to be nice, but cannot be called uneatable.

40. That convicts on penal diet are made to do full tasks.	40. Rule 649 prohibits the exaction of penal labour from convicts on penal diet, but under medical sanction lighter forms of labour are allowed. The usual labour, which is by no means hard, in the Presidency Jail, is on the printing press. There is no evidence or reason to suppose that the rule forbidding penal labour on penal diet has ever been broken.
41. That no prisoner is ever allowed to defend himself before Mr. Beadon. That Mr. Beadon admitted this. That convict Bason was punished for speaking to the Superintendent. That if a prisoner ever went up to speak to Mr. Beadon he would order him to be gagged and confined in the dark cell for two days.	41. The official visitors have reported (paragraph 43) that Mr. Beadon appeared to have been less ready to allow prisoners to speak in their own defence than the interests of justice necessitated, and it is proved that convict Weston was punished with a month's irons for making a complaint to a visitor which the visitor himself considered groundless. I consider that Mr. Beadon has been to blame in the matter of not listening patiently to convicts, but that the official visitors make a mistake in thinking that he does not allow them to defend themselves when charged before him with offences. Into this I have inquired very carefully, and I think that Mr. Beadon has done his duty in listening to the defence of convicts charged with offences, but not in listening to complaints which prisoners may wish to make of their own motion, except on the Sunday parade, and he has broken a rule in holding the Sunday parade only once a fortnight instead of once a week. Under Rules 91 and 541 the Superintendent is directed to hold a muster of prisoners every Sunday or at other convenient time in the week, hear their complaints, and take such action on them as may be necessary. Mr. Beadon appears to have held this muster only once a fortnight, but when he did hold it, he appears to have heard complaints patiently. Rule 281 requires all officers to listen patiently to prisoners' complaints and grievances. Rule 540 requires the Superintendent to visit all the prisoners once a day, and give them the opportunity of making representations or complaints, but no prisoner is allowed to leave his work or his line for the purpose. When Mr. Beadon first came to the jail, I understand that he found considerable laxity as to the rule that prisoners should not leave their places, and on one occasion an official visitor was fairly mobbed by them. This might be attended with very great danger, and has in some jails facilitated attacks on jail officers and visitors, which would have been impossible if the rule had been strictly enforced. Mr. Beadon very rightly insisted on strict adherence to the rule, but I have reason to fear that strictness was by the over-zeal of subordinates carried too far, and that prisoners were not allowed to complain without previously obtaining the permission of the overseer or warder in immediate charge of them. Such a restriction is obviously open to the gravest irregularities, as the convict officers would naturally put obstacles in the way of any complaints respecting their own treatment of the prisoners. This I have pointed out to Mr. Beadon, and I have lost no time in directing that prisoners shall be allowed to make any complaint they like, so long as they do not leave their places, and that extreme caution shall be exercised in punishing them for making false complaints. I consider it most essential that prisoners shall be allowed to represent their real or fancied grievances to the Superintendent or to visitors without being prevented by any of the subordinate officers, convict or free.

42. That prisoners are worked till 3 or 4 in the morning and turned out again at 5, and that a man finishing his task at 9 or 10 was not allowed to go and sleep till his comrades had finished.	42. The official visitors (paragraph 35) have inquired fully into this. There was at one time a combination among the convicts to endeavour by persistent short-work to get the tasks reduced, and Mr. Beadon, in order to avoid if possible the necessity for punishment, allowed them to work after hours. On one day and one only—this went on till three in the morning, the convicts resolute not to perform full tasks. After that one day they were not kept up after midnight, and after a few days extra work was stopped at 10 P.M. The whole period during which work was thus carried on after hours was only from 7th August to 10th September, by which time the convicts gave in and completed full tasks. I should not have sanctioned this working in extra hours if it had been reported to me. It is not left for the Superintendent of a Jail to decide what is a reasonable task, but the Jail Code prescribes what task shall be enforced in every kind of labour, and this is never exceeded, and in many jails has been reduced. At Gya, for instance, the stone is so hard that convicts are only expected to break four cubic feet instead of ten as laid down in Rule 583, while in several jails, no convict works more than half the day at the oil mill, spending the other half on lighter labour. It is also considered by the Medical Officers, especially where there is any loss of weight, whether any individual convict should be excused part of the full task, and I think there is ample safeguard against the danger of overtasking the convicts or any one convict. This being the case, if any convicts wilfully neglect to perform their allotted tasks, I would, after reasonable warning, punish until they find the work more tolerable than the punishment.

Having thus discussed, in parallel columns, the several charges brought by the Statesman or its correspondents, and the petition relative to the boy Jordan, I will make some comment on other points which have been brought forward in evidence or otherwise during the inquiry.

Ishwar Chunder Mozumdar states that Dr. Harris informed him that the Superintendent had ordered that men were not to stay in hospital for back handcuffs. This Dr. Harris absolutely denies, and I am satisfied of its falsehood. This man, Mozumdar, also speaks of Mr. Beadon striking prisoners with a thick stick held in both hands. Had he spoken of a blow struck with a stick held in one hand, there might be some possibility of its truth, but this use of a two-handed bludgeon is evidently false. I may here observe that the official visitors have made a singular mistake with reference to this convict, Mozumdar, in stating (paragraph 26) that at Buxar he did pretty well, but began to misconduct himself when he reached the Presidency Jail. A reference to his ticket, of which the official visitors append a copy, corrects this impression. He was sent from the Presidency Jail to Buxar on the 16th February 1883 to act as a convict writer, which implies considerable relaxation in the severity of his punishment, but by the 1st July I find him degraded to mason's work, and on the 25th August he was sentenced to penal labour in cells for a month. On the 1st January 1884 he was again sentenced to penal labour for a month, on 27th January one month's irons, 30th January penal diet in cells, and on 27th February 1884 he was retransferred to the Presidency Jail. So far from doing pretty well, as the visitors think, at Buxar, the labour ticket shows that Mr. Donaldson found him a very troublesome convict, and this is confirmed by letters from Mr. Donaldson and his Jailor, a high caste Brahmin. Mr. Donaldson says that Iswar Chunder Mozumdar was perhaps one of the most troublesome men he ever had to deal with, and the Jailor's opinion of him is equally unfavourable.

Statements have been made as to warders striking convicts with sticks. I have satisfied myself that no warder, convict or free, ever carries a stick, or even the baton authorised for paid warders, inside the jail, and these statements being evidently false, I do not believe that the warders ever struck or maltreated them at all.

The Statesman's correspondent 'Humanity' told Mr. Lambert that two pressmen were punished with 30 stripes each for accidentally breaking a stone in the press. I have inquired into this and gone through the Punishment Register, and find that nothing of the kind ever occurred. On the 15th July I find that a convict received 24 stripes for breaking a stone, it being his thirty-third offence. The stones in question are valuable, and are used for grinding and spreading the printing ink, and I find that it is common for convicts to break them either for sheer mischief, or to burn the pieces in the engine-room to get lime.

I examined convict D'Urilla as to 'Humanity's' statement that he (D'Urilla) had been punished for complaining, and he told me that such a thing never happened, and that he was never prevented from making complaints.

'Humanity' says he saw warder Richards strike the boy Jordan with a stick. I cannot find that Richards or any other warder ever carried a stick in the jail.

He also says he saw the Superintendent strike a prisoner, but he forgets who it was. I do not believe it.

He says that an old man, an apothecary, had his punishment increased from 48 hours' cells to 72, because he remonstrated. This man's name is Austin. He appeared before the visitors, in my presence, and answered all questions put to him in a very frank manner, which satisfied me of his truth. He admitted that what 'Humanity' calls remonstrating consisted in his losing his temper and being extremely impertinent to the Superintendent, and that he fully deserved the additional 24 hours in cells

It is alleged by the Statesman that details of tortures inflicted in jails have been frequently published in newspapers, but unless these publications are produced, I do not think it possible to make any reply.

Of statements of prisoners being gagged and being fed on thirst-provoking food and kept without water, it is needless, in the absence of all evidence, to say anything, but I have some observation to make upon the fact, noted by the visitors and also observed by myself, in more than one jail, that sores on the legs are sometimes produced by fetters. One especially bad case has been mentioned. Gaiters or guards of leather or some other material are sometimes used, and where the use of fetters on the march is required by the police, Rule 755 provides that leathern gaiters shall always be used. I think it would be advisable to make the use of gaiters of some kind compulsory in every case in which fetters are worn. Fetters are always removed as soon as a sore is observed, but the sore sometimes heals with great difficulty, especially when the convict's blood in rendered unhealthy by his physical condition, as is the case with the fever-stricken population of such districts as Dinagepore or Julpigoree. Convicts are also frequently observed to remove their gaiters in order to provoke sores, so as to obtain the removal of their fetters and their admission to hospital, and also to aggravate and irritate slight sores so as to prevent their healing. I think the punishment of back hand-cuffs with straps far less likely to produce injury than fetters.

I will here give the prison history of the convict Rutton Dass. He was convicted at Chumparun on the 29th June 1883, and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for two years and a half. His height was 5′ 7″, his health good, and his weight 1 maund 22 seers, or say, 127lbs. He was employed first on string making and then on the oil-mill, and his appeal having been dismissed, he was received in the Presidency Jail on the 17th September 1883. His health was good, and his weight 132lbs. He was put on press work as a compositor in the Ooriya language. On the 15th October he was warned for the offence of being noisy in the ward at night. On the 1st January 1884 he had an interview with a friend. On the 3rd January he was reported for making no effort to learn the work given to him, but was only told to try once more. On the 6th February he was warned for doing short work, otherwise he generally earned full marks, and his weight fluctuated between 127lbs and 135lbs. On the 1st June 1884 he was allowed to write to his brother On the 3rd July he received a letter, and was allowed to write one. On the 29th July he was appointed a night watchman. On the 8th September he was removed from this office, and punished with three months' fetters for leaving his work and gossiping with a prisoner, and on the 9th September was taken from press work and sent to wheat-grinding. On the 12th September he was reported for cheating at work, and on the same date was punished with five hours' back handcuffs. On the 14th September he was admitted to hospital suffering from heat-apoplexy, and died the same evening. His weight, when last ascertained on the 31st August, was 129lbs. The convict was fed throughout the period of his imprisonment on the scale of diet prescribed for labouring convicts in the Jail Code, and his weight every fortnight shows that he had good health. His ticket shows him to have been a well-conducted prisoner up to the date of the 8th September, so far as the jail officials knew it, and his punishments therefore appear severe, but it must be considered that in the Presidency Jail the jail officers know nothing of a convict's work unless the press officers report him, and they do not report him so long as he is amenable to warnings, or until actual punishment appears to be required. In another jail there would probably be entry after entry of short-work and warnings, or light punishments, gradually increasing, but in the Presidency nothing is recorded on the ticket of work in the press, and the first entry is made when he is handed over to the jail officials as a man whom it is requisite to punish. It must therefore be considered that the warning, or mild punishment, which would be appropriate when a convict is first reported for misconduct by the Jailor to the Superintendent, would be out of place when a convict has exhausted the patience of the Press officials, and is at last sent up for punishment.

I must now make some remark upon the management of Bengal Jails in 1879. The mortality in that year was very severe. The death-rate, which in 1877 had been 4·88, rose in 1878 to 6·91, and in 1879 to 9·48 per hundred. The number of prisoners who gained weight in jail in 1879 was only 14,623, while 19,229 lost; in 1878, 17,565 had gained and only 17,210 lost. The number of convicts admitted into hospital in 1878 was 23,545; in 1879 it was 28,974. The daily average number of sick was 750 in 1878, 903 in 1879, or 4·43 per cent. in the former and 5·31 in the latter year. The explanation of this will be found in paragraphs 102 to 107 of Dr. Lethbridge's report on the administration of jails for 1879. A conference of prison officers was held under orders of the Government of India in 1877, Dr. Lethbridge not being of the number, and in consequence of their recommendations, prison diet was reduced early in 1879, although opinions appear to have been on record that the former scale was insufficient. Dr. Lethbridge was not long in forming an opinion that the food given to prisoners in 1879 was insufficient, and that to this a very serious increase of sickness and mortality was due. Sir Ashley Eden, in his Resolution on Dr. Lethbridge's report, expressed his conviction that the chief cause of the increased sickness was the adoption of the diet scale proposed by the Prison Conference, and recommended by the Government of India. As soon as its defects were brought to notice, a change was made, and early in 1880 a special Committee, consisting of the Surgeon-General, the Sanitary Commissioner, and the Inspector-General of Jails, being directed to inquire into the matter, reported the diet scale to be decidedly insufficient, and recommended certain additions to it. These additions, inclusive of an extra meal given in the early morning, further appear to have been made by Dr. Lethbridge as soon as he saw the necessity for them, and without waiting for the Committee's report. The immediate improvement in health was most marked, as noted by Dr Lethbridge in paragraph 111 of his report for 1880, and is illustrated by the following figures.

Ever since the early part of 1880, when the disastrous effects of the reduced dietary were observed, every effort has been made to keep prisoners in health, the test of fortnightly weighment being, as a general rule, carefully applied, and prisoners losing weight being specially observed by the medical officers. The tickets which I have recently examined of convicts who died in the Presidency Jail in 1884, exemplify the extreme care with which the health of prisoners is watched, and I find entry after entry of special or extra diet allowed, while I have observed that in other jails the same care is taken.

In 1879, not only was the general scale of diet insufficient, but reduction of diet was frequently ordered as a punishment, and the great mortality of that year may in part be ascribed to this. The number of floggings inflicted was, moreover, very great, as Dr. Lethbridge observes, with grave disapproval, in paragraph 39 of his report for 1879. The increase in the number of punishments was due to systematic efforts throughout the province to exact regular tasks from convicts, and to subject them to some kind of discipline, and the majority of Superintendents appear to have had very little idea of managing convicts, or controlling the refractory, except by whipping Sir Ashley Eden, in his Resolution on Dr. Lethbridge's report, expresses his objection to rash and indiscriminate flogging, and the infliction of a few light stripes for a petty offence, while he considers that there is probably no form of punishment available which has so powerful an effect upon prisoners as flogging, if it is severely inflicted, and only on rare occasions, and for offences about which there is no doubt. The Government of India has also more than once expressed its preference for rare, exemplary, and severe punishments, rather than numerous ones of a mild nature. By the month of June 1880, the Superintendents of Jails had received very stringent orders on the subject of more sparing use of the punishment of flogging, and the annexed table shows that whatever mistakes may have been made in 1879 in reducing diet as a punishment and in frequent flogging have since been corrected. The number of cases in which diet was reduced have fallen from 13,645 in 1879 to 4,712 in 1883, and the number of foggings from 8,324 in 1879 to 349 in 1883. I regret that I have not yet collected the figures for 1884, but I know that great caution has been exercised in the infliction of both these forms of punishment. I submit that to quote the figures of 1879 as illustrating the management of jails at the present time is grossly misleading.

I consider that Mr. Beadon has been wrong in applying back hand-cuffs with shoulder straps without the sanction of the Jail Code. The official visitors report that they cannot accept the necessity for shoulder straps, firstly, because they think the number of prisoners who could pass their bodies through their arms must be very small, secondly, because the convicts wearing back hand-cuffs are kept under the eye of a prison officer, and, thirdly, because it would have been sufficient to fasten the hand-cuffs to a belt round the waist. I am unable to agree with the visitors as to the first objection. The hand-cuffs used allow the wrists to be separated for three or four inches, and almost any native could pass his body through them. The second objection has some force, but it is not necessary that an officer should always be present, and I should certainly prefer fastening the handcuffs in such a way that they could not possibly be brought in front. A belt round the waist is no more mentioned in the Code than shoulder straps, and I think the sanction of superior authority would be required to its use. I shall probably recommend Government to allow straps over the shoulders, but combining them with a collar at the back of the neck, and attaching buckles to them at such a length as to render it impossible to raise the wrists beyond a certain point. Perhaps some form of waistcoat will best secure the object in view. I consider Mr. Beadon's method, which leaves it in the power of a warder to wrench the wrists upwards to a painful extent, decidedly objectionable, though I do not believe that the power has actually been abused, and am quite satisfied that Mr. Beadon had no intention that the wrists should be raised so high as to be painful. Having reported to the Inspector-General in his Midnapore report for 1880 his method of applying back hand-cuffs, having received no comment upon it, and seeing no mention of it in the Jail Code issued in 1882, Mr. Beadon may well have believed that his practice was considered by the Inspector-General to be unobjectionable. I consider that he ought not to have introduced it without special sanction, and that in doing so he exceeded his powers which the Code is intended to limit.

I have already stated my opinion that Mr. Beadon has not been sufficiently ready to listen to the complaints of prisoners, though I do not believe that he neglected the duty of hearing what prisoners had to say in their defence when accused before him of any fault. He has also been wrong in holding Sunday parades once a fortnight instead of once a week. As regards severity of punishment of which Mr. Beadon has been accused, I cannot find any ground for blame. As the official visitors (paragraph 45) admit, the Presidency Jail is a particularly difficult one to manage. It contains inmates taken from the criminal classes of the large city of Calcutta, European, Eurasian, and native, and also educated convicts from every part of the province. Many of the convicts are practised in every trick by which they can evade the discipline of a jail, or set at naught the vigilance of the officials, while others, of whom Ishwar Chunder Mozumdar may be taken as a type, are skilled in every form of subterfuge, and resolute not to obey authority if they can possibly defy it. When Mr. Beadon took charge of the jail, discipline was very lax. The ordinary punishments were confinement to cells, or the imposition of fetters, and it was a common thing for a number of convicts already wearing fetters, to refuse to work, not caring for confinement in the open cells which are all that this jail contains. Every now and then a batch of incorrigibly bad characters were transferred for treatment to Alipore, where there are good cells. Mr. Beadon very naturally objected to send away convicts who defied him, preferring to subdue them himself, and as corporal punishment is only allowed in extreme cases, he tried his Midnapore experiment of back hand-cuffs, and with them succeeded in attaining the object he had in view. In eight months he used this punishment 750 times, with the result that other forms of punishment fell from 5,290 in the corresponding period of 1882 and 4,535 in 1883 to 2,730 in 1884. No convicts were sent to Alipore; and press officers, who are not subordinate to Mr. Beadon, unite with jail officers in unanimous testimony to the great improvement in discipline. Mr. Beadon has succeeded in managing the jail, without sending any refractory convicts to Alipore, with considerable reduction in the number of punishments, and without any increase in the number of deaths, or in the number of sick admitted into hospital.

I am decidedly in favour of allowing the use of back hand-cuffs with shoulder straps, if a satisfactory pattern of the latter can be devised. The official visitors consider (paragraph 25) that it may well be that it is better that a certain percentage of convicts should seem to triumph, and spend a large portion of their confinement in separate cells, or undergoing other mild punishments than that the jail officers should be in a position to conquer the most obstinate, by being armed with powers which are greater than can be safely intrusted to any one who is placed in charge of persons so helpless as are convicts in jail. I consider that life in jail should involve such an amount of irksome and distasteful restraint as is a fitting punishment for crime, that food, if wholesome and sufficient, need not be selected to tickle a dainty palate, and that tasks should be as hard as a convict can perform without injury to his health. Punishment should be reserved for the wilfully idle and refractory, but for them it should be so severe as to induce them to do their work and submit to discipline. When a convict has been seriously warned that punishment will ensue if his resistance to authority is continued, he should be punished with one of the milder forms of punishment. I object to infliction of severe punishment until it has been found that milder punishment has failed to subdue, but in cases of obstinate resistance to authority, I would give more and more severe punishment every time the convict is brought up, until it becomes necessary to inflict a flogging. No punishment, such as reduction of diet, flogging, or anything which can possibly affect the health, is inflicted without medical sanction, and this restriction might well be extended to the punishment of back hand-cuffs. It is the duty of official visitors to visit the jail frequently, and inquire into the infliction of punishment, and I think these are sufficient safeguards against any abuse of power, and I cannot agree with the three visitors who would like to deprive the Superintendent of the power of flogging. In graduating punishments, much must be left to an officer's discretion. Confinement in dark cells, for instance, is a severe punishment to an intellectual European, whereas an ignorant native, when shut up in a cell, goes peacefully to sleep and enjoys the respite from labour. When Mr. Beadon took charge of the Presidency Jail, he found that many of the convicts were in an insubordinate state and not amenable to the milder forms of punishment, and he tried the severe punishment of back hand-cuffs with shoulder straps with which he succeeded in managing them without recourse to flogging. His fault consisted in modifying the punishment without proper sanction. At one time convicts were allowed to work after hours to complete their tasks, rather than be punished next day. This I could not approve, but it was only once that they worked after midnight, and only for a few days after ten o'clock in the evening. I do not believe that Mr. Beadon has punished convicts hastily or without due inquiry; and the figures published by the official visitors showing the number of deaths and the number of admissions to hospital prove that he has succeeded in enforcing discipline without causing any physical injury to prisoners.

With reference to the attacks made on the general character of jail management in Bengal, I may say that it is for persons who bring charges to give details of time and place which can be proved or disproved. Unfortunately it has not been the custom invariably when convicts die or are released to preserve the tickets on which their prison history is recorded, but I believe enough would be forthcoming if required to establish my assertion that the majority of those who have died have been in such a state of health that they could neither be tasked nor punished. In some jails convicts are admitted in such a wretched state of health that the regulations as to labour cannot be enforced, and when the convicts wilfully refuse to perform even the light tasks assigned to them, it is found impossible, on medical grounds, to punish them. In the 37 jails and 20 subsidiary jails which I have visited, I do not remember ever finding it necessary to relax the discipline, while in many cases I have had occasion to observe that it was by no means so strict as I consider it ought to be. I think it would be impossible for the medical officers who are Superintendents of jails to be more considerate for the health of their prisoners than they are, and I find that the management of non-medical Superintendents is closely watched and checked by the medical officers It would be impossible with my limited office establishment to record the prison history of every convict who dies, and I cannot feel that there is any reason for suspecting that there is any undue severity requiring watchfulness. If, however, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that there is any general belief among the public, which it is necessary to dispel, that convicts are treated with such severity as to shorten their lives, I would suggest that the Magistrate of the district should hold an inquest in the case of every death, examining especially the convict's labour ticket and hospital ticket, and reporting the result to me, especially bringing to notice cases in which punishments have been inflicted on convicts losing weight, or in which severe punishment has been inflicted shortly before the admission of the convict into hospital. I cannot say that I think any such safeguard is required, as there is not a single jail in which I feel the slightest doubt as to the humanity and caution of the Superintendent or medical officer.

I agree with the official visitors (paragraph 46) in thinking it desirable that the Superintendent should reside at the Presidency Jail, but there are no quarters provided for him. Mr. Beadon now lives' within ten minutes walk of the Jail.

No. 945, dated Calcutta, the 31st January 1885.

From—The Offg. Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Political Department.

IN continuation of this office letter No. 881, dated 29th instant, I have the honour to forward herewith copies of papers noted on the margin, which furnish further details regarding the punishments inflicted on Ram Sunker Chuckerbutty, and other information regarding the administration of the Presidency Jail.

From Superintendent, Presidency Jail, No. 134, dated 30th January 1885.
Note by Dr. Harris, dated 29th January 1885.

No. 134, dated Calcutta, the 30th January 1885.

From—The Superintendent of the Presidency Jail, Calcutta,
To—The Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal.

WITH reference to your memorandum dated the 28th instant, in which you ask me to furnish you with further details regarding the punishments and sores of Ram Sunker Chuckerbutty, and other information as to the Medical Officer's visits, transfers of prisoners, and accommodation of officers, I have the honour to say that—

(1) Prisoners awarded the punishment of fetters are always supplied either with leather gaiters or soft jute to protect the skin, the ankle joints thereby being hidden from view. Until it became extremely aggravated, or until the limb in consequence began to swell, it is improbable that an ordinary abrasion caused by leg-irons would attract my attention, unless the sufferer himself complained about it. Prisoners are frequently in the habit of purposely creating sores, in order that they may be pardoned irons, and perhaps too admitted to hospital. Swollen legs "and terribly bad sores," such as were those of Ram Sunkur Chuckerbutty, can be manufactured, I may confidently affirm, within a couple of days, or even within 24 hours, by the application, either of sulphate of copper or of lime (both of which ingredients are easily procurable in this Jail), and by increasing at the same time the tightness of the leather. On reference to Ram Sunker's ticket, I observe that he was brought before me on the 3rd September (Wednesday) and awarded "two months' iron," which, through some oversight, were apparently not put on until the 5th idem (Friday). On the 6th September (Saturday) he was again brought before me for "short work" and punished with "five hours' back handcuffs." The next entry on his ticket is dated the 13th September (Saturday), when he was "warned" by the Jailor for having "12lbs. short work" and when his task was reduced. Upon that occasion he was not brought before me. On the 16th September (Tuesday) he was brought before me again for "short work," and it was then that I cancelled the case recorded, and sent him back to press work, with orders that his irons should immediately be removed. On the following day (the 17th), he was admitted to hospital for "ulcer," and there he remained until released. It will thus be seen that, except at the Sunday parade, either of the 7th September or of the 14th September, it is unlikely that I had any opportunity of observing his legs between the 6th and the 16th, and though it is true that the Jailor must have interviewed the prisoner on the 13th September, it is unlikely that he would notice his legs unless special reference to them had been made by Ram Sunker, or unless they had already swollen up to an abnormal size. I have confidence enough in Mr. Wilkerson to be quite satisfied that had his attention been drawn to any suffering that the prisoner might have been undergoing, he would at once have either acted himself or brought the matter to my notice. It is not only possible, but it is most probable, that the man disliked the hard work at wheat grinding, and so, between the 13th and 16th, purposely created and aggravated the sores. The medical officer, unless the prisoner went to hospital, which was not the case, would be no more likely than was I to detect his sores.

(2) Doctor Harris, to the best of my belief, visits the jail every Sunday.

(3) The accompanying statement will shew that out of 59 prisoners transferred from the Presidency Jail from the date of taking charge, only one man was sent to Bankoora on account of his being a leper; none were transferred on account of bad health.

(4) I am informed by Mr. Wilkerson that when Dr. Mackenzie occupied the quarters over the main gate, now used by the Jailor and two of the European warders with their families, the printing industry had not been introduced. On the removal of the Press to the Presidency from the Alipore Jail, it was deemed desirable that the Deputy Superintendent should be found quarters on the premises, and that officer was therefore accommodated in the quarters that till then had been occupied by the Jailor, while the latter was given Dr. Mackenzie's rooms over the main gate. Great difficulty had always been experienced in procuring good men to serve as European warders who would afterwards remain with us, owing to our not being able to offer them good house accommodation. It was to enable Mr. Wilkerson, and two other married men, to live over the gate that Dr. Nicholson, the then Superintendent, removed to the medical officers' quarters near the General Hospital, and had the quarters over the gate partitioned off for three families.

A third European warder and his family live in a building near the main gate used in old days by the Superintendent of the Guard. A fourth lives in a place formerly partitioned off and occupied by the whole of the European warder staff, the partition screens having been removed; and the Reserve Head Warder, Mr. Littlemore, lives in the quarters that used to be occupied by the Inspector of the Calcutta Police Guard, prior to the introduction of the warder system.

I may mention that the Jailor's present quarters are neither suitable nor healthy. He is so situated that he cannot look inside the jail, and he should, I think, be allowed to occupy the whole building.

Estimates were, I believe, submitted in 1879 for quarters for all the European warders to be built over the native barracks in front of the jail, but owing to the Afghan War having broken out, the money could not be spared at the time, and the scheme fell through.

Unless Government is prepared to build suitable quarters for all these warders, and to sanction house allowance for the Deputy Superintendent, I see no way of accommodating the Superintendent of the Jail with quarters in the premises short of building him a new house.

SINCE drafting the above, I have received the accompanying "note" by Dr. Harris, describing his method of carrying out the instructions laid down in Jail Code Rule 99, which I forward in original for your information.

PRESIDENCY JAIL,
The 29th January 1885

W. aC. BEADON,
Superintendent.

NOTE.

As ordered in Rule 99J.C., I do my best to examine all the prisoners in the jail in the week, either going round the files on Sunday, or else walk through the work sheds on a week day after my visit to the hospital. As between the fetters and the skin a leather strap or stocking in interposed, I cannot see any ulcer or swelling on the ankles caused by the fetters unless the prisoner specially draws my attention to the condition of his feet, and if I find the feet swollen or ulcerated, I invariably order the fetters to be removed. I should say that scarcely a day passes without my ordering leg-irons to be removed from the bodies of 3 or 4 prisoners in the jail for reasons above stated.

A "skilful" prisoner with assistance can "produce" a swelled and even ulcerated leg, in the former case from 36 to 48 hours and in the latter 48 to 72 hours. Any irritating substance, such as lime, sajimatti, &c., will inflame a simple excoriation. Swelling and chafing of the ankle and foot and even of the leg can be very readily produced by removal of the prescribed leather stockings and skilfully applied ligatures above the irons.

As long as irons are used, I must say I cannot see how one can prevent the development of ulcers or swellings of the legs, either naturally, from their continual weight and pressure when the men walk about, causing chafing and swelling, which may or may not go on to ulceration, or artificially as I have above indicated.

During 1884 only one leper was transferred to the Bankoora Jail from the Presidency. This was done at the special request of the Superintendent Dr. Peck (as he was specially investigating the subject of leprosy), and sanctioned by the Inspector-General of Jails. Since I have been in medical charge of the Presidency Jail, I have only known of three transfers to other jails for the reason of bad health, and these three were specially sanctioned by the Inspector-General of Jails.

At my general inspection, my attention is specially drawn to the following points, and I think they are the most important:—

1. General physique.
2. Marked loss of weight or gain of weight.
3. Anæmia and malarious cachexia.
4. Scorbutics.
5. Special complaints made about change of work or diet, ulcers caused by fetters, &c.

Orissa Divn. 38	Cuttack,	Feb.	6	'85	Nil	Weather—warm and cloudy at times. Reaping of sarad completed. Dalua is progressing well. Rubbee crops are being stored. Price of common rice ranges from 18 to 22 seers per rupee in the town and 25 to 30 seers in the interior. Number of cases of cholera reported are more than usual so early in the year; otherwise public health good.
	Jajpore			...	0·40
39	Pooree,	,,	5	,,	1·69	Weather—seasonable, latterly cloudy. There was a heavy shower of rain on Monday afternoon which has much facilitated the ploughing of lands for ensuing sarad crops; threshing of sarad or late paddy continues. Dalua paddy is coming on well. Common rice is selling on an average at 23 seers 10 chittacks per rupee in the Sudder station, and 23 seers 3 chittacks in the Khorda subdivision. Cases of cholera are reported from several parts of the district.
	Khoorda				0·45
40	Balasore	,,	6	,,	0·20	Weather—cloudy with prospects of rain. There has been more or less rain in almost every part of the district on the 1st instant. Threshing of paddy continues. Rubbee crops are being gathered, sugarcane is being pressed. With the exception of a few cases of fever in the north, public health generally good.
CHOTA NAGPORE.
	South-West Frontier Agency.
41	Hazaribagh,	Feb.	6	'85	Nil	Weather—cold and seasonable. Prospects of standing cold-weather crops good. Lancing of poppy is in progress. Prices stationary. Small-pox still reported, general health otherwise good.
42	Lohardugga,	,,	7	,,	0·15	Weather—rather warm. Prospects of rubbee crops excellent, except in Barwai. Prices steady. Cattle-disease reported from Balumath. A few cases of small-pox are reported from Palamow; otherwise public health excellent.
43	Singbhoom,	,,	6	,,	Nil	Weather—cold during the early part of the week; warm on the last two days. Standing crops are doing well. General health good. Cattle-disease reported from several parts of the district.
44	Manbhoom,	,,	7	,,	0·21	Weather—unusually hot for the time of year. Prospects of cold-weather crops fair except in Purulia and Raghunathpore thanas. Scarcity of food-grains reported from Bogra pergunnah. Rice is selling at 19 seers per rupee in the Purulia market. Public health good.

METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL SUMMARY OF THE PROVINCE OF BENGAL FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY 1885.

The normal meteorology of Bengal in January is very similar in all its more important features to that of the two previous cold weather months, the characters of which have been described in the reports for those months. Usually temperatures are low with considerable difference between the day and night temperatures, and in certain cases January is the coldest month of the year. Pressure is also high, though it begins to fall towards the end of the month. Cool light northerly winds, with almost cloudless skies, also usually prevail quite to the end of the month, though the character of the wind directions begins to change at the close of the month or the commencement of February. This change is due to the rapidly increasing elevation of the sun, which, heating the land surface more rapidly than the sea, causes differences of temperature between the land and sea, which are followed by the setting in of southerly winds. The dry northerly winds are thus replaced gradually along the sea-coast by southerly moist winds, though these are at first confined within narrow limits, and it is not until these conditions have been some time in existence that the southerly current acquires any considerable strength. Directly, however, the southerly winds begin to set in, the character of the weather is liable to change, for by the interaction of the two opposing wind currents, an ascensional motion is produced, which results in the formation of cloud, and which is frequently attended by the precipitation of rain.

The normal meteorological conditions for January are thus liable to be disturbed by the action just described, and in addition atmospheric disturbances of a second kind sometimes occur in this month as in the two previous months. These are due to the occurrence of areas of depression, accompanied by overcast skies and rain, which commence usually in the Punjab, and travel southwards or south-eastwards into the North-West Provinces, Behar, and sometimes extend even into Lower Bengal. These disturbances give rise to southerly winds in Bengal, and to damp cloudy weather generally with increased temperature and frequently accompanied by rain, and thus completely reverse the normal meteorological conditions for the month.

The average rainfall of the month, it will be seen, must be small. The heaviest amounts usually occur in North Behar, but even here the average for the whole division only equals 0·55 inch, East Bengal follows next with an average of 0·51 inch, South-West Bengal, South-Behar and Chutia Nagpur receive amounts varying between four and five-tenths of an inch, while Orissa and North Bengal only receive an average of between three and four-tenths of an inch of rain during January.

The chief features of the meteorology of January 1885 were—

1. Excessive pressure in all districts, particularly in Behar and East Bengal.
2. Increased temperature in Orissa, South-West Bengal and Chutia Nagpur; and slightly decreased temperature in Behar and East Bengal.
3. A decided tendency for southerly winds to set in earlier than usual.
4. A deficient rainfall in Orissa, South-West and East Bengal and in Chutia Nagpur.

Pressure—Over the whole Province has been 0·055″ in excess; but the extreme variations were from an excess of 0·07″ at Patna, Durbhunga, Dacca, and Chittagong to an excess of 0·04″ at False Point and Calcutta. Pressure has been above the normal for the greater part of the month, but during the second week the excess was very small, and in South-West Bengal during this period a deficient pressure was registered.

At the commencement of the month temperature was below the normal in almost all districts; it, however, increased very rapidly during the second week, and from that period it has been in almost all cases in excess of the normal. A feature in both the excess and deficient temperatures for the month has been that the variations from the normal have been greater in the night than in the day temperatures.

The other two features in which variations have occurred are dependent upon the two above-mentioned causes of disturbance, and of them the second has been the cause of the principal variations of the meteorological conditions during January.

There have been several disturbances of the second class which have formed over Northern India during January, but only two of them have been of sufficient intensity and area to affect the weather in Bengal. The first of these depressions occurred from the 7th to the 9th of January, and it brought light rain to some of the stations in Behar. The conditions in Bengal continued, however, slightly disturbed, and a few local showers fell on the 13th and 14th, and were followed by a series of dust-storms on the 16th, which gave rain to almost the whole of South Behar and to a few stations in South-West Bengal, particularly in the Moorshedabad district. With the exception of a few local storms, no general rain again fell until the 28th and 29th of the month, when North and South Behar and part of North Bengal were influenced by another large depression which had formed in the Punjab and North-West Provinces, and light to moderate rain again was received over the whole of North and South Behar and over the greater part of North Bengal. A noticeable feature in the meteorology of the last week in the month was that the wind directions at the southern stations in Bengal became decidedly more southerly in character, and this would show that the north-east monsoon was steadily weakening in force, and that the period of oscillation or of interaction of the opposing winds, noticed under the normal features of the month, had commenced this year rather earlier than is usual.

The rainfall for the month has thus been rather limited in area and also in amount. North and South Behar and North Bengal have received nearly the normal amounts of rain, though in each case they are slightly in defect. Chutia Nagpur has received only about one-half the normal quantity, but South-West Bengal, Orissa, and East Bengal have not received more than about one-tenth of the amount which usually falls in these divisions in January.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven Meteorological Divisions of the Province for the month of January 1885 :—

CALCUTTA, the 9th February 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 6TH OF FEBRUARY 1885.

THE meteorology of the past week has been rather more important than that of several previous weeks, for light to moderate rain has occurred in all those districts in the Province which previously had received little or no rainfall during the north-east monsoon. The whole of the Province, except the Chutia Nagpur Division, has now received almost the average amount of rainfall since the commencement of the year, while in some divisions the amounts received are considerably above the normal. In the Chutia Nagpur district, however, the amount received is up to the present time scarcely half the usual quantity.

In the report for the previous week, it was stated that one of the most noticeable features in its meteorology had been that the wind directions at the southern stations in Bengal had become decidedly more southerly in character. These south winds were particularly noticeable in Orissa and South-West Bengal, and they of course carried up much moisture into Bengal. Northerly winds were, however, still blowing in the interior of the Province, and the interaction of the two opposing wind currents gave rise apparently to ascensional motion, and this was followed by an increase in the amount of cloud, and was also accompanied by a falling barometer, which continued up to the 2nd. These disturbed conditions produced fairly general rain in the southern and western districts of South-West Bengal, and in many of the districts of East Bengal on the 1st, and on the 2nd the area of rainfall extended, and light rain was general in Orissa, in East Bengal, and in South-West Bengal, except in the Burdwan, Bankoora, Beerbhoom, Nuddea, and Moorshedabad districts. On the 3rd and 4th instant the weather in Bengal cleared up, and practically no rain fell; but during this period a very rapid decrease of pressure occurred over the Punjab and North-West Provinces, and a large depression was there formed, which was followed by moderate rain over those districts. This large disturbance was accompanied by several smaller centres of disturbance, and these drifting southwards, the weather in Bengal was much affected by them. Strong southerly winds set in over the whole Province, being part of a general cyclonic circulation, and very many local storms occurred, while general and in some cases heavy rain fell on the 5th and 6th. This rain extended over the whole of South-West Bengal and as far as some stations in South Behar, Chutia Nagpur, and North Bengal, on both days, while on the 6th rain became general over the whole of East Bengal. On the latter day, however, the depression filled up, and with the exception of a slight disturbance, which still existed in Central Bengal, the weather conditions were becoming more settled.

Pressure—During the previous week had been in all parts of the Province above the average, but this was succeeded by a fall which lasted generally during the first three days of the present week. A slight increase took place during the following two days, but this was succeeded by a very rapid fall at the West Bengal and Orissa stations, where in some instances on the 5th the decrease amounted to considerably more than a tenth of an inch; on the following day also pressure decreased at many stations, and thus the mean pressure for the week was below the normal in Orissa, South-West Bengal and Chutia Nagpur, while it has been only slightly in excess in East Bengal and Behar. The extreme variations are a defect of 0·024″ at Calcutta and an excess pressure of 0·038″ at Durbhunga.

The changes of temperature during the week have been very rapid; it commenced by being on the average rather above normal temperature, and for the first three days the changes were small and oscillating; on the 3rd, however, temperature fell very rapidly, the difference in mean temperature between the 2nd and 3rd being at Dacca no less than 8·1°, while the average decrease at some of the Southern Bengal stations was between 6° and 7°. This was followed by a very rapid rise on the following two days, and again on the 6th the mean temperature rose another 4° to 5°. With the exception of Orissa and North Behar, the mean temperatures for the week have been slightly below the normal in all districts, but it is noticeable that while the night temperatures have been above the normal, the day temperatures were considerably below it. This is shewn clearly by the following table, where the normal and actual mean maximum and minimum temperatures at eight selected stations are given:—

NAMES OF STATIONS.	MAXIMUM DAY TEMPERATURE.			MINIMUM NIGHT TEMPERATURE.
	Normal average for week.	Actual average for week.	Difference	Normal average for week.	Actual average for week.	Difference

Hazaribagh	74·5	73·7	—0·8	52·0	52·4	+0·4

As before noticed, the rainfall for the past week has been decidedly important. With the exception of Behar and Chutia Nagpur, the rainfall in all meteorological divisions has been in excess. In South-West Bengal the mean fall has been three times as great as the normal. In East Bengal and Orissa the average rainfall has been five and one and a half times respectively greater than the normal fall. In North Bengal, however, it has been slightly in excess only; on the other hand South Behar has received only half the normal fall, and Chutia Nagpur about one quarter, while in North Behar rainfall has been practically absent.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 6th February 1885:—

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of past years (at the Park-street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 2·5 lower; and finally, the thermometer, which has furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during the last 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 18h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

MEMORANDA.

FROM the annexed table, exhibiting the mortuary statistics of the districts in Bengal for the month of December 1884, the following results have been gathered :—

1. That 145,089 persons died among a population of 66,163,884, representing an annual death-rate of 26·28 per 1,000, against 27·48 per 1,000 in the preceding month, and 26·52 per 1,000 in the corresponding month of the past year, showing, as compared with the results of the preceding month, a large decrease in the registration of the events.

2. That the highest casualty-rates were reported to have occurred in the under-mentioned districts :—

Districts.	Ratio per mille.	Districts.	Ratio per mille.	Districts.	Ratio per mille.
Nuddea	48·24	Dacca	34·80	Maldah	29·28
Jessore	47·04	Faridpore	34·08	Burdwan	28·92
Pubna	46·08	Serampore ...	32·28	Murshedabad ...	28·56

3. That the total mortality distributed under the following specific heads of disease stands as follows :—

	Ratio per mille during—
	December 1884.	December 1883.
Cholera	2·76	1·44
Small-pox	·09	·08
Fever	18·96	20·52
Bowel-complaints	·96	·96
Injury	·12	·12
Other causes	3·12	3·24

The above figures denote that, as contrasted with the results of the corresponding month of the preceding year, there occurred a considerable increase of mortality from cholera with a sensible decrease in that from fever, the other diseases exhibiting only fractional variations, bowel-complaints and injury excepted, the death-rates from which remained stationary.

4. That cholera, fever, and the diseases classed under the head of "Other causes" were notably fatal in the following districts, the other maladies exhibiting no local exacerbations :—

Cholera.	Ratio per mille.	Fever.	Ratio per mille.	Other Causes.	Ratio per mille.

Office of Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal,
The 9th February 1885.

R. LIDDERDALE, M.D., Deputy Surgeon-General,
Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal.

MEMORANDA.

THE table appended to this memoranda exhibits the vital statistics of the first class Municipalities in Bengal for the week ending 24th January 1885. The figures submitted in this table indicate—

1. That the birth and death-rates amounted, respectively, to 24·7 and 30·9 per 1,000 of population, as opposed to 22·7 and 29·7 per 1,000, respectively, in the preceding week ending 17th January, showing that both the birth and death-rates were higher during the week under review.

2. That the undermentioned Municipalities returned the highest proportions of births and deaths :—

Births.	Ratio per mille.	Deaths.	Ratio per mille.

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken as the census of this section of the community taken in February 1881 was not reliable, owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans above alluded to cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been recorded under the authorised form of age classification.

IRRIGATION.

The 17th February 1885.

No. 58.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections XI and XII of Act V (B.C.) of 1864 (The Canals' Act), the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is pleased to pass the following rules in regard to the Eastern Canal route and the Outer Boat routes, as defined in this Department notification No. 301 of the 12th August 1884. A draft of these rules as proposed was published in this Department's notification No. 336 of the 9th September 1884, for a period of six weeks in the Calcutta Gazette of the dates noted in the margin.

10th, 17th and 24th September and 1st, 8th and 15th October 1884.

1. Wherever mooring posts may have been put up by the Supervisor, vessels are to be made fast by the bow and stern along the banks to such posts, or in such other manner as the Supervisor may direct.

2. As the water falls, the bow and stern ropes are to be slackened, and boats gradually pushed towards the centre of the canal: when the flood comes in, these two ropes are to be gradually hauled in, and the boat kept as close to the bank as possible.

3. In portions of the canals where only one towing-path exists, vessels are to be moored on the off side, and the towing-path side is always to be kept clear.

4. Only one boat is allowed to make fast, along and in line with the canal banks, and no boat is to be made fast or be placed outside of boats so secured without the special permission of the Supervisor. No boat or raft is to be placed in such a position as to endanger the safety of other boats, or obstruct the passage of other boats; but all boats are to be placed in such places and in such a manner as the Supervisor or Inspector at any time may direct.

5. The Supervisor may by notification prohibit the dropping of anchors or the putting up of bamboos or luggies in any part of the canals or banks, and in such parts no anchors are to be dropped or luggies put up under a penalty of Rs. 50, and of a fine not exceeding Rs. 4 a day for continued disobedience of an order for removal issued by the Supervisor.

6. Boats whilst loading or unloading in the canals are allowed to use ladders, but the ladders are to be gradually taken in as the water rises.

7. In order to avoid collision and confusion, boats waiting for a favourable tide at the junction of two or more rivers are to be moored at a distance of not less than 1,000 feet from the point of junction.

8. No person is allowed to place any obstruction on the canal banks, roads, drains or bridges (when such are on canal land) so as to impede a free passage along them, or cause injury to them, or to commit a nuisance, or deposit filth of any sort on the banks, bridges or roads or in the canals.

9. Any person who wilfully or negligently allows a vessel to sink in the canals shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50.

10. In every case of wreck caused by negligence or otherwise, the Supervisor and his subordinates are to give all possible assistance in removing the same.

11. A notice is to be affixed on a wreck when recovered, calling on those concerned to pay to the Supervisor all tolls which may be due, or any fine which may have been adjudged, as well as the expenses incurred in the recovery or removal of the wreck; and intimating that if the sum be not paid within fifteen days of the date of notice, the boat and its furniture, or so much of it as may be necessary for the recovery of the dues, will be sold, the proceeds of the sale being dealt with as directed in section IX of the Act.

12. Every Canal Officer is authorized to remove any vessel, anchor, pole, or other thing which he may find in a position which is in contravention of these rules, and to deal with it in such a manner as may be necessary to give effect to the rules.

13. Whenever any laden vessel is seized by a Canal Officer, it is the duty of the Supervisor to give immediate notice of the same to the owner, or his agent requiring the removal of the cargo without delay, and informing him that he will be required to pay all expenses necessary for the proper custody and storage of the same.

14. If the Supervisor be unable to ascertain the name and place of business or of abode of the owner of the cargo of any vessel or boat seized under the Canals' Act, he is to notify the seizure by advertisement in his office and in one or more of the public newspapers. Such notice shall require the owner to cause the immediate removal of the cargo, and to pay any necessary expenses incurred in providing for its proper custody and storage.

15. The Supervisor may incur whatever expense he may think necessary for the proper custody and storage of the cargo of any vessel seized under the Canals' Act, and if the cargo be not removed within ten days from the date of seizure, he may sell the same at public auction to the highest bidder, after giving ten days' notice of the same by advertisement in his office and in one or more of the public newspapers.

16. The money realized at such a sale is to be applied in the first instance to defray any expenditure that may have been incurred by the Supervisor on account of the cargo sold, and the balance, if any, is to be held in deposit to be paid to the owner of the said cargo on his applying for the same.

17. At the instance of the Supervisor, any Magistrate who imposes a fine under section XI or XVI of the Act may award any portion of such fine to the informer.

18. No officer employed on the canal of any description or rank shall, either directly or indirectly, bid for or purchase any article sold under these rules or under the provisions of Act V (B.C.) of 1864.

19. Any person (other than the Supervisor or his subordinates) either personally, or by his servant, infringing any of these rules, is liable under section XI of the Canals' Act to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 for any one infringement, or to a fine not exceeding five rupees a day for any continued infringement.

The rules now passed will supersede the rules now in force for the Navigable Channels from Kanteetollah to Khoolna, passed by Notification No. 281, dated the 15th August 1865, and published at page 1349 of the Calcutta Gazette dated 16th August 1865.

No. 59.—Notification.—It is hereby notified for general information that the Lieutenant-Governor, in exercise of the powers vested in him by section 13 of the Canals' Act V (B.C.) of 1864, is pleased to appoint the toll-collectors of the Nuddea Rivers for the time being to be Joint-Supervisors within the limits of their respective jurisdiction as specified below :—

HIGH COURT NOTICES.

HIGH COURT—Original Side.

NOTIFICATION.

The 12th February 1885.

THE Honourable the Chief Justice has granted A. B. Miller, Esq., Official Assignee of the Court for the relief of Insolvent Debtors at Calcutta, leave of absence for two years, under section 134 of the Civil Leave Code, from such date as he may avail himself of it.

By order,
R. BELCHAMBERS, Registrar.

Circular Orders issued by authority of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

CIVIL.

Rule No. 1, dated the 15*th January* 1885.

(c) [C. O. No. 19 of 28*th April* 1880.]—By Resolution (Financial) No. 1763, dated 24th July 1873, the Government of India directed that the record-keeper of every court should, when a case was decided and the record made over to his custody, punch a second hole in each court-fee label distinct from the first, and note his doing so at the same time. Owing to the insufficiency of the establishment attached to the record-rooms in some districts for the work thus imposed upon it, strict effect has not been given to this order. The Government having, however, now sanctioned a sufficient staff of officers for employment in all district record-rooms, District Judges must require this order to be strictly carried out in future. Attention is called to the circular order of the Board of Revenue quoted below, and to the necessity for seeing that all stamps are punched and registered before they are received or acted upon. As petitions have to be taken in open court, some person should be in attendance there to punch and register the stamps in presence of the Judge immediately before the petitions are handed to him.

In Clause (c) of Rule 12, Chapter IV, Civil Rules and Orders, on page 238, cancel the words "By Resolution (Financial) _____" down to "_____employment in all district record-rooms," and substitute the following :—

"The record-keeper of every court shall, when a case is decided and the record made over to his custody, punch a second hole in each court-fee label, distinct from the first; and shall, at the same time, note upon the fly-leaf* the date on which the stamps on documents contained in such record have been so punched by him."

* Vide Clause (7A), page 307.

CIVIL.

No. 28, dated the 17*th November* 1881.

Revised clause (3), Rule 52, Chapter V, pages 314-315, General Rules and Circular Orders (Civil).

(3) [C. O. No. 28 of 17*th November* 1881.]—The records shall be forwarded under the charge of one or more of the salaried peons attached to the court, and the cost of carriage shall be met by payment from the District Judge's contingent allowance. The means of carriage shall vary according to the necessities of the district and to the number of records under despatch; coolies, boats, or bullock-carts being used as may be deemed advisable.

No. 2, dated the 16*th January* 1885.

For revised clause (3), Rule 52, Chapter V, pages 314 and 315, Civil Rules and Orders (C. O. No. 28 of 17th November 1881), substitute the following:—

(3) [C. O. No. 2 of 16*th January* 1885.]—(a) When the head-quarters station and the subordinate court are upon, or within easy reach of, a line of railway, the records shall be forwarded by goods-train (freight payable on delivery) in a securely-locked chest, of which the District Judge will have a duplicate key. This chest will be returned, freight repaid, as an "empty" as soon as possible after its receipt by the District Judge. The "railway receipt" for the chest should in every case be forwarded by post to the consignee by the despatching office.

(b) If the railway cannot be used, the records shall be forwarded under the charge of one or more of the salaried peons attached to the court. The means of carriage shall vary according to the necessities of the district and to the number of records under despatch; coolies, boats, or bullock-carts being used, as may be deemed advisable.

(c) In all cases, the cost of carriage shall be met by payment from the District Judge's contingent allowance.

2. Circular order No. 28 of 17th November 1881 is cancelled.

No. 3, dated the 23*rd January* 1885.

After clause (c) of Rule 6A, and before Rule 6B, Chapter V, page 253, Civil Rules and Orders, insert the following:—

(d) [C. O. No. 3 of 23*rd January* 1885.]—Money orders or postal notes for the payment of witnesses' expenses, or of any other of the peremptory items falling under clause (g), Rule 5 of the Account Rules, shall be made payable to the Cashier of the Court to which the money is remitted. The Cashier will receive the money as provided in Rule 26, and will deal with it as directed in Rule 32 of the Account Rules.

In the case of money orders, the number of the suit and other necessary particulars shall be entered in the coupon which is now attached to all money orders.

General letter No. 1, dated Calcutta, the 26th January 1885.

From—C. A. WILKINS, Esq., Officiating Registrar of the High Court,
To—All Civil Judicial Officers in Bengal.

I AM directed to invite your attention to the correspondence which is reproduced below, and to request that you will in future act in conformity with the suggestion contained in paragraph 3 of the letter of the Government of India, No. 49—1812-20, dated the 31st October 1884.

From A. MACKENZIE, Esq., C.S., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,
No. 49—1812-20, dated Simla, the 31*st October* 1884.

FROM the replies received to Home Department Circular No. 45—1512-1520, dated the 15th October 1883, it appears that considerable diversity exists in the practice as to the registration of certificates of the sale of standing trees granted by Civil Courts under section 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Government of India considers it very desirable that uniformity should, if possible, be maintained in the registration offices in all provinces in this regard, and I am accordingly to communicate the following instructions and observations.

2. It would seem to be difficult to frame a definition of "moveable" and "immoveable" property suitable for practical use on a mere consideration of the physical nature of the property. It would appear to be necessary to take into account also the way in which the property is regarded and dealt with at the time of the transaction, and this is apparently what the framers of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, meant to do by using the words "standing timber" in contradistinctio n to "trees." Certain trees, being almost invariably used as timber, are commonly spoken of as "timber trees." But probably most trees would admit of being used both as timber and for other purposes. Thus, properly speaking, almost every tree being potentially timber and no tree actually timber, the question whether a tree is for the purposes of any transaction to be deemed to be "timber" must depend upon the way it is regarded and treated in that transaction. If, for example, trees are sold with a view to their being cut down and removed, the sale is one of "standing timber" within the meaning of the Registration Act. If, on the other hand, trees are sold, as it is understood they are in the class of cases referred to by the Government of Madras* with a view to the purchaser keeping them permanently standing and enjoying them by taking their fruit or otherwise, the sale would not, it is believed, on any construc- of the Act, be regarded as one of "standing timber," but would be a sale of immoveable property. For these reasons the difference between the definitions of "immoveable" property for the purposes of the Registration Act and the Code of Civil Procedure would probably be found to be smaller than has by some authorities been supposed; but the possibility of removing any difficulty thence arising and assimilating the definitions by an amendment of the law will be considered.

* Letter No. 798 of 19th March 1883, forwarded with Home Department Circular dated 15th October 1883.

3. Meantime it seems clear that, if the certificates in question, when forwarded by the Civil Courts, are to be registered at all, they must be registered in Book No I (see Act XII of 1879). Thy only question is whether, where the registering officer is of opinion that the property concerned is not "immoveable" within the meaning of the Registration Act, he should treat the certificate as sent by mistake and abstain from registering it. The Government of India is of opinion that the proper course is to leave it to the Civil Courts to determine in what cases certificates should be sent for registration, and that Registrars should, without attempting to consider and decide the point themselves, register every certificate forwarded in Book No. I in accordance with the provisions of section 89 of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, as amended by Act XII of 1879.

4. If this suggestion be adopted and instructions issued to the Registration Department accordingly, the should be so informed, leaving it to the to consider whether they will draw the attention of subordinate Courts to the point.

5. A copy of this letter has been forwarded to the High Court at Calcutta for information.

From J. WARE EDGAR, ESQ., C.S.I., Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial, Political and Appointment Departments, to the Registrar of the High Court,— No. 1522*P*, dated Calcutta, the 8*th December* 1884.

WITH reference to Home Department letter No. 49-1813, dated the 31st October 1884, regarding the registration of certificates of sales of standing trees granted by Civil Courts, I am directed to state, for the information of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court, that the suggestion contained in paragraph 3 thereof has been adopted by this Government. The Inspector-General of Registration has accordingly been requested to instruct all registering officers to register every such certificate forwarded to them by Civil Courts in Book I, in accordance with the provisions of Section 89 of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, as amended by Act XII of 1879.

CRIMINAL.

Rule No. 1, dated the 15*th January* 1885.

(c) By Resolution (Financial) No. 1763, dated 24th July 1873, the Government of India directed that the record-keeper of every court should, when a case was decided and the record made over to his custody, punch a second hole in each court-fee label, distinct from the first, and note his doing so at the same time. District and Subdivisional Magistrates must require this order to be strictly carried out in future. Attention is called to the circular order of the Board of Revenue quoted below, and to the necessity for seeing that all stamps are punched and registered before they are received or acted on. As petitions have to be taken in open court, some person should be in attendance there to punch and register the stamps in presence of each Magistrate, immediately before the petitions are handed to him.

In clause (c) of rule 5, chapter V, Criminal Rules and Orders (1883), on page 97, cancel the words "by Resolution (Financial)——" down to the words "——and note his doing so at the same time," and substitute the following:—

"The record-keeper of every Court shall, when a case is decided and the record made over to his custody, punch a second hole in each court-fee label, distinct from the first, and shall at the same time note upon the Fly-leaf* the date on which the stamps on documents contained in such record have been so punched by him."

* Vide Rule 50, chapter VI, pages 144 and 145.

General letter No. 1, dated Calcutta, the 24th January 1885.

From—C. A. WILKINS, Esq., Officiating Registrar of the High Court,
To—All Sessions Judges and District Magistrates.

IN continuation of General letter No. 1 of the 28th January 1884, and with a view further to expedite the submission of the annual criminal returns, the High Court are pleased to direct that the annual statements and tables which relate to the Court of Session shall be filled up by the Sessions Judge, as far as they can be, with such information and figures as are obtainable from the registers and records of his office, and be transmitted to the District Magistrate as soon as possible after the year closes, without waiting for any particulars procurable only from the Magistrate's office. On receipt of the returns in question, the District Magistrate shall incorporate them in his statements and tables, supply such figures or information as may not have been furnished by the Sessions Judge, and submit without delay a complete set of the returns to the High Court.

2. With a view to complete the records in the Sessions Judge's office, the District Magistrate shall, after despatching the returns required by the High Court, send the Sessions Judge a copy of such figures and information as he has entered in the Sessions Judge's returns. In other words, he will continue to supply the Sessions Court with the information heretofore supplied, but will do so after he has despatched the statements and tables required by the High Court.

Members:

The Secretary to Government, Punjab.
D. C. J. Ibbetson, Esq., C.S., B.A., Director of Public Instruction, Punjab.
E. W. Parker, Esq., District Judge, Lahore.
S. Wheeler, Esq., F.R.G.S., Editor, Civil and Military Gazette.
Pandit Rám Naráin, Pleader, Chief Court, Punjab.
J. Lockwood Kipling, Esq., Principal of the School of Art.
C. B. Brind, Esq., C.S., Assistant Commissioner, Lahore, Secretary.

THE LIBRARY.

This institution has been established, at the desire and with the assistance of the Punjab Government, in order to provide a Public Library for the use of all classes in the province.

Admission to the Reading-Room is free; and books will be lent out subject to rules and subscriptions, which can be ascertained on application to the Librarian.

A large contribution of books and pecuniary support have been promised by Government; but the Committee earnestly appeal to the public for further contributions of books, both European and Oriental.

Privileges will be given to donors of twenty volumes and upwards.

Assistance is especially desired towards securing a complete collection of books relating to India and the East.

Societies, Institutions, and Departments of Government are invited to contribute.

Donors of books may make it a condition of the donation that any of the books they give shall not be lent out, except to the Donor.

Communications should be addressed to——The Secretary, Punjab Public Library, Lahore.

THE READING-ROOM.

The Reading-Room is open to the public free of charge.

Books may not be removed from the shelves by any one except the Librarian.

Catalogues and application forms are on the table. The Librarian will get any book for which a form is handed to him; and books must be returned to him before leaving.

The Committee will exclude from the building persons who disregard any rules or damage the property of the Library.

CLOSED DAYS.—Queen's birthday; also from 1st to 7th October and from 1st to 7th April.

DAILY HOURS.—In the winter 8 A.M. to noon and 3 to 10 P.M., and in the hot weather 6 to 10 A.M. and 4 to 10 P.M.

RULES FOR LENDING OUT BOOKS.

Books will be issued on the following conditions:—

1. An applicant must deposit Rs. 10 with the Secretary. The deposit will be liable to forfeit for injury or loss of a book, or for breach of any of the rules.

2. An annual subscription of Rs. 5 must be paid in advance, which may be compounded for by a donation of Rs. 25.

3. Not more than six volumes may be kept out on one subscription.

4. Residents at Lahore or Meean Meer shall return, within 20 days, every book so taken out. To residents at other places ten days longer will be allowed. But all books lent out must be returned by the 30th September and 31s March each year.

5. The cost of forwarding books will be recovered by sending them by value payable post. Any charges due under Rules 1 and 2 may be added.

6. Books may not be transferred from one person to another.

7. The Committee will reserve from issue, under these rules, new or valuable books, at their discretion.

8. Forms of application for books can be supplied, and their use is requested, but is not obligatory.

Deposits under rule 1 (if free of claims) will be returned on request to persons who have no books of the Library in their possession.

E. W. PARKER, Secretary,
Punjab Public Library Committee.

PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 14th February 1885, and was referred to a Select Committee with instructions to report thereon :—

A Bill to amend and Consolidate the Law relating to Canoongoes and Patwaris.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend and consolidate the law relating to canoongoes and patwaris: It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called "The Canoongoes and Patwaris' Act, 1885."

Extent.

It shall come into force only in districts or parts of districts to which the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time extend it by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette;

Commencement.

and thereupon this Act shall commence and take effect in the districts or parts of districts named in such order, on the day which shall be in such order provided for the commencement thereof.

Enactments repealed.

2. On the commencement of this Act in any district or part of a district, the enactments specified in Schedule A shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof.

Power to form and alter patwari circles.

3. The Collector of the district, with the sanction of the Local Government, shall fix the number of patwaris' circles in his district and the respective limits of such circles, and may, with the like sanction, from time to time alter the number and limits so fixed.

But no such arrangement or alteration shall be final unless and until it has been sanctioned by such Board.

Appointment of patwari to each circle.

4. For each such circle the Collector shall appoint a patwari:

Provided always that the Collector in selecting any person for such appointment shall have regard, as far as may be possible, to local custom.

Levy of a cess for payment of Patwaris' salaries and charges incurred for efficient maintenance of records.

5. From and after the commencement of this Act all immoveable property situated within the districts or parts of districts in which this Act may from time to time be in force shall be liable to the payment of a cess (hereinafter called the "patwari cess") to be applied for the purpose of defraying the salaries of the patwaris appointed in such district, and any charges incurred on account of the correct and efficient maintenance of their records. And it shall not be lawful, save under the provisions of this Act, to levy, or continue to levy, within such districts, or parts of such districts, any cess, whether credited separately in the zemindars' accounts or consolidated with the rent, for the said purposes or for any similar purpose.

Valuations under the Cess Act, 1880, to be deemed to be valuations under this Act.

6. All valuations of immoveable property which have been, or may from time to time be, determined under the Bengal Cess Act, 1880, shall be deemed to be valuations of immoveable property for the purposes of this Act:

Provided that in local areas in which a record of rents or a settlement of rents has been made under Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the aggregate amount of such rents may, in the discretion of the Collector, be deemed to be the valuation of immoveable property for the purposes of this Act.

Rate of patwari cess to be levied.

7. The Local Government shall, by an order published in the Calcutta Gazette, determine the rate at which the patwari cess shall be leviable in each district or part of a district, and the date from which it shall take effect; such rate shall not exceed three pice in the rupee of the annual value of the lands in such district or part of a district.

Proportion of patwari cess to be paid by holders of estates.

8. Every holder of an estate shall yearly pay to the Collector the entire amount of the patwari cess calculated on the annual value of the lands comprised in such estate at the rate which may be determined for such cess as in this Act provided.

Proportion of patwari cess to be paid by tenure-holders.

9. Every holder of a tenure shall yearly pay to the holder of an estate or tenure within which the land held by him is included, the entire amount of the patwari cess calculated on the annual value of the land comprised in his tenure at the rate which may have been determined for such cess as in this Act provided.

Proportion of patwari cess to be paid by cultivating ryots.

10. Every ryot shall pay to the person to whom his rent is payable his proportionate amount of the patwari cess calculated at a rate not exceeding half an anna in the rupee upon the rent payable by him, or upon the annual value ascertained under the provisions of the Bengal Cess Act, 1880, of the land held by him.

Provisions of sections 42-49 of Cess Act to apply to the patwari cess.

11. The provisions of sections forty-two to forty-nine (both inclusive) of the Bengal Cess Act, 1880, shall apply as far as practicable to the patwari cess.

Salaries of patwaris.

12. The salaries of the patwaris shall from time to time be fixed by the Board of Revenue, under the orders of the Local Government.

Holders of estates and tenures and cultivating ryots to file accounts.

13. Every holder of an estate or tenure, and every ryot shall, within such time and in such manner as the Collector shall in a notice to that effect prescribe, file in the office of the patwari such statements and accounts as the Local Government shall from time to time by rule direct.

Patwari to grant a receipt for accounts filed.

14. Whenever the holder of an estate or tenure, or whenever any ryot, shall file in the office of the patwari the statements and accounts mentioned in the last foregoing section, the patwari in whose office such statements and accounts are filed shall forthwith grant a receipt for the same, which shall bear the signature of such patwari.

Penalty for omitting to furnish accounts.

15. All holders of estates or tenures, and all ryots, who shall without sufficient cause being shown to the satisfaction of the Collector, refuse or omit to furnish the statements and accounts required under section thirteen, shall be severally liable to such fine as the Collector may think fit to impose, not exceeding fifty rupees, for such omission, and the Collector may impose such further daily fine as he may think proper, not exceeding ten rupees for each day, during which such holder or ryot shall omit to furnish the statements and accounts required after a date to be fixed by the Collector in a notice warning the holder or ryot that such daily fine will be imposed.

Such notice shall be served by tendering to the person to whom it may be directed a copy thereof attested by the Collector, or by delivering such copy at the usual place of abode of such person, or to some adult male member of his family; or in case it cannot be so served, by posting such copy upon such conspicuous part of the usual or last known place of abode of such person; and in case such notice cannot be served in any of the ways hereinbefore mentioned, it shall be served in such way as the Collector issuing the notice may direct, and the date fixed by such notice shall not be less than fifteen days after service thereof.

The Collector may proceed from time to time to levy any amount which has become due in respect of any fine imposed under this section, notwithstanding that an appeal against the order imposing such fine may be pending:

Provided that whenever the amount levied under such order shall have exceeded one hundred rupees, the Collector shall report the case specially to the Commissioner of the Division, and no further levy in respect of such fine shall be made otherwise than by the authority of such Commissioner.

Disability to sue for rent, unless accounts filed.

16. From and after the expiry of the time allowed by the notice issued by the Collector under section thirteen, no holder of an estate or tenure, and no ryot, shall be entitled to sue for or recover rent for any land or tenure situated in the district, or part of a district in which this Act is in force, unless at the time of instituting such suit or proceeding such holder or ryot shall file in the court in which such suit or proceeding is instituted the patwari receipt obtained by such holder or ryot under section fourteen of this Act, or afford such other proof as shall satisfy the Court that such holder or ryot has filed in the office of the patwari the statements and accounts mentioned in section thirteen of this Act.

Appointment of canoongoes.

17. One or more canoongoes may be appointed in each district for the proper supervision and control of the patwaris in the discharge of their functions under this Act.

Amount of canoongoes' salaries.

18. The salaries of the canoongoes shall from time to time be fixed by the Local Government.

Power to enter upon land for purpose of obtaining authorized information.

19. It shall be lawful for a canoongoe within the limits of his district or part of a district, and for a patwari within the limits of his circle, to enter upon any lands situated within such limits respectively, and to make such enquiries and investigations as may be necessary for the purpose of obtaining information which such canoongoe or patwari may be authorized to obtain under rules in that behalf made by the Local Government.

All persons shall, as far as may be, supply such information and facilitate such enquiries and investigations.

Canoongoes and patwaris to be public servants, and their records public records.

20. Every patwari, and every person appointed temporarily to discharge the duties of any such office, shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and all official records and papers kept by any such officer shall be held to be public records and the property of Government.

Appeal from certain orders of Collector.

21. Every order passed by the Collector under section fifteen shall be appealable to the Commissioner within one month of the date of such order, and the decision of the Commissioner shall be final.

Power to make rules for selection, &c., of canoongoes and patwaris.

22. The Board of Revenue, subject to the sanction of the Local Government, may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act—

(a)—Regulating the selection, appointment, suspension, dismissal, duties, and supervision of patwaris and canoongoes.

(b)—Prescribing the fines which may be imposed on canoongoes and patwaris and on persons appointed temporarily to perform their duties for neglect of their duty, and may from time to time, with the like sanction, repeal or alter any such rules.

Interpretation clause.

23. In this Act the words and expressions "annual value of land," "district," "estate," "holder of an estate or tenure," and "the Collector of the district" shall have the meanings attributed to them, respectively, in the Bengal Cess Act, 1880.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Government of Bengal has been satisfied by the representations of private persons, public associations, and district officers that the existing law relating to putwaries stands in need of amendment. The necessity for amendment has been accentuated by the probability of the early enactment of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, an important portion of which provides for a cadastral survey, record of rights, or settlement of rents, on the application of landlords or tenants, or, for stated reasons, at the motion of the Government. It is obvious that wherever such a survey, record of rights, or settlement of rents is taken in hand, there it will be desirable that the Government should have the power of establishing an independent agency to maintain the record up to date. The framework of such an agency exists in Behar in the putwari system; but before that system can be made to answer the objects in view, it must be re-organized. The principles on which this re-organization should, in the opinion of the Government of Bengal, proceed are that the putwaris should be declared Government servants, free from control on the part of the zemindar; that they should be relieved of the business of collecting rents if they now perform that business; and restricted to the duty of verifying and recording the village accounts, and registering other agricultural facts.

It is proposed that the cost of the re-organized village establishments shall be defrayed by the levy of a cess on immoveable property in the manner prescribed by the Road and Public Works Cess Acts. Zemindars are bound to maintain putwaris in every village of their estates; but in most parts of, if not everywhere in, Behar ryots now pay for the maintenance of village putwaris. If the sums so paid according to custom can be controlled, a considerable portion, if not all the requisite funds will be provided for the maintenance of village accountants.

It is proposed to impose on zemindars the duty of filing periodically with the Government putwari, copies of all village accounts which the Local Government may by rule prescribe, and power will be given also by rule to the putwari to verify these accounts by local enquiry and investigation, and in other ways to secure the full accuracy of the register which he may be ordered to keep. Compliance on the part of zemindars and others interested in the land with the orders o the Government on this behalf is enjoined.

Power is taken in the Bill to enable the Board of Revenue, with the approval of the Local Government, to make rules for carrying the objects of the Act into effect.

[Third Publication.]

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd January, 1885 :—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report.

From Officiating Registrar, High Court, Calcutta, No. 2596, dated 15th September, 1884 [Paper No. 1].
From Secretary to Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 813—114, dated 13th September, 1884 [Paper No. 2].

From Officiating Secretary to Government, Panjáb, No. 987, dated 14th November, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No 9].
From Officiating Assistant Secretary to Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 5321—245, dated 14th November, 1884, and enclosure [Paper No. 10].
From Secretary to Government, North Western Provinces and Oudh, No 1147—VII-279-19, dated 5th November, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No 11].
From Bábú Charu Chandra Mookerjee, dated 2nd November, 1884 [Paper No. 12].
Extract, paragraph III, from Proceedings of the Meerut Association, No. 13, dated 16th November, 1884 [Paper No. 13]
From Under-Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No 1326—VII-277-23, dated 13th December, 1884, and enclosure [Papers No. 14].
From Officiating Secretary to Government, Bengal, No. 3001 J., dated 19th December, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 15].
From Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 1375—VII-277-26, dated 23rd December, 1884, and enclosures [Papers No. 16].
Memorandum by Bábú Gridhar Dás, Honorary Magistrate, and Vice-Chairman, Municipal Fund, and Member of the District Board, Zila Etawah, No. 1, dated 20th December, 1884 [Paper No. 17].
From the Hon'ble Mr. Justice S. Mahmúd, Allahabad, dated 13th January, 1885 [Paper No. 18].

2. It is generally admitted that the provisions of section 1 (a) of the Bill will amend the Act satisfactorily, but there are differences of opinion as to clause (b) of that section. The Government of Bombay, Mr. Justice West and others are strongly in favour of making the exemption from the provisions of section 41 of the Act local and not personal. It has also been urged, especially by Mr. Justice Mahmúd, that power should not be given to exempt from the provisions of section 41. Mr. Mahmúd says, "As I understand the law, the provisions of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act are nothing more or less than the repetition of the rule of natural equity which belongs to almost every department of law connected with the dealings of one human being with another. The rule of equitable estoppel is so important that, irrespective of section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, I, speaking for my own part, would, regardless of the nationality of parties, apply it to all transactions which came before me and which furnished circumstances for its application."

3. After considering the matter we are of opinion that, if section 41 of the Act contains, as we believe it does, a rule of equity which our Courts should follow, the section should be in force wherever the Act is in force. If that section were excluded from the Act, the Courts would probably, on general principles of equity, follow the rule which it contains. We think, therefore, that it is unnecessary to give any power to exempt from the provisions of section 41, and have struck out clause (b), section 1 of the Bill.

4. With regard to some questions raised as to the effect of section 3 of the Bill, we may mention that the Transfer of Property Act in requiring that certain transfers shall be made by a registered instrument does not conflict with the Indian Registration Act. That Act requires that certain documents shall be registered in order to render them capable of affecting certain property and admissible in evidence of any transaction affecting such property. The Transfer of Property Act, on the other hand, provides that certain transfers can only be effected by a registered instrument.

5. With reference to section 4 of the Bill, it has been suggested that section 60 of the Act should be restored to the form proposed by the Indian Law Commission. The question whether a power of sale should be valid in all cases where the property secured by the mortgage was of a certain value was fully discussed at the time the Act was passed. It was then decided that the valuation test should not be adopted, and we consider that it is inexpedient to re-open the question now.

6. Objections have been raised relating to the chapter on leases of immoveable property. These are sufficiently met by section 117 of the Act, which exempts leases for agricultural purposes from the provisions of the chapter.

7. We have taken the opportunity of adding to section 6 of the Act a clause (i) containing a proviso like that of sub-section (j), section 108. If the chapter on leases does not apply to leases for agricultural purposes, then the proviso to sub-section (j) will not be in force. It might therefore happen that an untransferable right of occupancy, the farm of an estate in respect of which default had been made in paying revenue or the lease of an estate under the Court of Wards might be held to be transferable by virtue of the general power of transfer conferred by section 6.

Endorsement by Officiating Under-Secretary to Government, Bengal, No. 111, dated 14th January, 1885, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].

2. At the suggestion of the Government of Madras we have inserted in the Bill a section (1) amending section 42 of the Act. That section directs that the orders of a Local Government made in pursuance of the Act shall be, in addition to other modes of publication, fixed up in the custom-house, if any, of every port subject to this Act. A difficulty is experienced in carrying out this direction, and we consider that it will be sufficient to provide that the order shall be fixed up in some conspicuous place in the office of the Conservator, and at the custom-house, if any, of every port to which the order relates.

3. We have amended section 1 of the Bill (now section 2) so as to provide for cases where the service of a person entitled to pension has been partly at the port and partly elsewhere.

4. At the request of the Bombay Government we have provided in section 3 of the Bill that money may be spent from the Port Fund Account for the support of hospitals for seamen or for providing sanitary superintendence and medical aid for the shipping and seamen belonging to ships in ports.

5. We have altered the rate of port-dues prescribed in the first schedule of the Act for the Cuttack ports, as the Government of Bengal finds that the present rate does not yield an income sufficient to meet the necessary expenses of the ports.

2. With regard to lost bills it has been pointed out that the Act provides no machinery whereby the owner of a lost bill or note can get a duplicate from the drawer or maker. We think that this omission should be supplied, and have accordingly inserted in the Bill a section (2) taken from section 69 of the English Statute. Actions on lost bills are sufficiently provided for by section 61 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

3. With reference to the remarks forwarded by the Government of Madras, we think that clause (c), section 101 of the Act, does seem to imply that to render a protest valid the demand must be made by the notary public in person. If the law be so understood, it will cause inconvenience, and to remove all doubts we consider that the section should be amended so that it may be clear that a demand may be made by a notary public's clerk in person. The Act might also, we think, be still further amended so as to afford greater facilities for presenting bills and demanding acceptance or payment. The English Act [section 41 (1) (c) and section 45 (8)] provides that a bill is duly presented for acceptance or payment when presented through the post office in cases where such presentment is authorised by agreement or usage. We think that it is desirable to extend to this country similar facilities for presenting bills, but we consider that when presentment through the post office is allowed it should be made by means of a registered letter. We have accordingly, in section 3 of the Bill, made additions to the Act which will validate a presentment through the post office by means of a registered letter when such a presentment is authorised by agreement or usage. We have also, in section 4 of the Bill, added to section 101 a clause to the effect that the demand mentioned in clause (c) may be made by the notary public in person or by his clerk in person or, where authorised by agreement or usage, by a registered letter.

4. It has been pointed out that while section 108 implies that acceptance for honour may take place when a bill has been noted or protested, the definition of "acceptor for honour" (section 7) shows that an acceptance for honour is made after a bill is protested. It might be held therefore that there could be no acceptance for honour until a bill had been protested as well as noted. To meet this difficulty we have inserted in the Bill a section (6) taken from section 93 of the English Statute, and have slightly amended the definition in section 7 of the Act so as to make it agree with section 108.

5. The Chambers of Commerce of Bombay and Rangoon have suggested an amendment of section 113 of the Act which would have the effect of rendering a declaration before a notary public unnecessary in the case of a payment for honour. We have considered this suggestion and we think that some formality is desirable. We are of opinion that it would not be safe to relax these formalities regarding payments for honour further than they are relaxed by English law.

6. It has also been suggested that power should be taken to make rules for the control of those notaries public who have not been appointed under the Act. We think that it is not desirable to make rules for the control of notaries not appointed by the Government of India.

7. We have been asked to make a provision for cases in which the services of a notary public are not available, by adopting section 94 of the English Act which provides that in such cases a protest may be made by means of a certificate signed by a householder or substantial resident. Having regard to the power given to Government of appointing notaries public, the number of appointments that have been made and the possible abuses that might arise if a householder or substantial resident were substituted for a notary, we think that it would be unwise to adopt this provision of the Statute.

8. It is said that the proposed amendment of section 113 will raise doubts whether the words "acceptor," "acceptor for honour," "payee" and "drawee" are intended to include an agent of an acceptor, payee or drawee. We think that section 27 of the Act, which provides that a person may bind himself by a duly authorized agent, will answer all questions of this nature that may arise.

9. The Chief Commissioner, British Burma, suggests that the Local Government should be authorized to appoint notaries public. This question has already been considered, and we would not re-open it.

10. With regard to the question whether section 45 of the Contract Act unduly limits the negotiation of bills, we are not disposed to think that it does. We are not aware that that section has given rise to any difficulties in this respect, and the saving in the Contract Act of all usages or customs of trade will probably meet such difficulties if they do arise. If any amendment in this respect is necessary, it should take the form of an amendment of section 45 in the Contract Act, as such an amendment would perhaps be required for other cases besides those under the Negotiable Instruments Act.

No. 7, dated Calcutta, the 23rd January 1885.

From—A. RITZ, Esq., Acting Consul for Austria and Hungary,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India.

IN accordance with official intimation received by last mail from the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs at Vienna, it is intended to institute a General National Exhibition,— to be held at Budapest; to be opened on 1st of May; and to be closed on 15th of October; and I have received copies of—the Invitation;

Special Programme and General Regulations; and forms of application; for judicious distribution here; in consequence of which I deem it expedient to forward herewith to your hands—

20 Special Programmes;
20 Invitations;

100 Copies in all;

feeling convinced that by doing so, I shall best consult the interests at stake in regard to this National Exhibition.

THE BUDAPEST GENERAL NATIONAL EXHIBITION, 1885.—I. GROUP.

Special Programme and General Regulations of the International Section—Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manuring Substances.

I.—Object and Direction of the Exhibition.

Simultaneously with and within the limits of the Budapest General National Exhibition, 1885, there will be held an International Exhibition of Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manuring Substances.

The immediate management of this International Exhibition has been intrusted to the General Committee of the General National Exhibition, 1885, residing in Budapest (No. 6, Ferencz József-ter).

II.—Place and Duration of the Exhibition.

The General National Exhibition and simultaneously with and within the limits of the same, the International Exhibition of Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manuring Substances will be held in the Town-Park of Budapest, on the territory designated for this purpose by the Capital.

The Exhibition will be opened on the 1st of May 1885 and closed on the 15th of October 1885.

III.—Object of the International Exhibition.

The object of the International Exhibition of Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manuring Substances is to acquaint the Hungarian agriculturists with foreign produces and, in the interest of the interchange of seeds, also with the foreign places of import, besides to furnish detailed particulars of the foreign agricultural situations, rendering it possible at the same time to foreigners to procure themselves a favourable market for their produces in Hungary.

IV.—Grouping of Objects.

The International Exhibition comprises the following classes:

(A) Seeds of Bread-Corns.

Comprising: summer and winter wheat, spelt (German wheat), and the like; summer and winter rye; spring and winter barley, distichons, square and hexastich; white and black oats; Indian-corn (maize). Buck-wheats, millet, beans, peas, lentils, and rice may likewise be exhibited in this class. From all the above kinds of corn there may also be exhibited the respective varieties.

(B) Seeds of Medicinal Herbs.

Comprising: Seeds of Medicinal Herbs; the herbs themselves as well in raw state as in their different states prepared for the trade.

(C) Seeds of Textile-Plants.

Comprising: hemp and flax, ramie (China-grass), nettle-plants, and seeds of other textile-plants. It will be advisable to exhibit also whole plants.

The drawings of machineries and implements for the culture of hemp and flax, models of raiting-pools and of buildings may also be exhibited in this class.

(D) Seeds of commercial-plants and of agricultural industry-plants.

Comprising: rape, turnip, gold of pleasure, beetroot (sweet turnip), and hops; models or drawings of tools, implements, machineries, and buildings required for the cultivation and conservation of hops, potato, chicory; kinds of sorghum, woad, madder, mallow (Althea rosea), Sapponaria (soap-root). The plants may be exhibited in raw condition or as products of first manufacture.

(E) Seeds of Forage-Plants.

All kinds of clover, lucernes, red clover, and esparset; autumn and spring vetches, beans, horse-beans; all kinds of peas, lupines, swedes, mangel-wurzel, turnips, and cattle-carrots, &c.; topinambur, mohar, panicum, and other kinds of millet; all sorts of herbs and other forages or their respective seeds. Plants of the above seeds may likewise be exhibited in dry and rooted samples.

(F) Other kinds of Cattle-Food.

Refuse of factories, germs of malt, ground-malt, remains of beetroots (sweet turnip); all sorts of oil-cake, bran, and artificially composed cattle-food.

(G) Manures.

All kinds of mineral-manures, as plaster, lime (calx), marl, kali-salt, and the manures made of kali-salts; phosphate and phosphates made of.

Of animal manures there may be exhibited: All kinds of guano, manure of bones, depressed and diffused bone-dust, horn-shavings, and the like.

Of composed manures: poudrette, and all kinds of compost, &c.

All the objects of this class shall be provided with labels containing the following particulars:

(a) Are the exhibited seeds produced by the exhibitor or did he buy them?

(b) Denomination of the exhibited kind of seed and other nearer particulars.

(c) The place and, as far as possible, also the soil upon which the seed has grown.

(d) The quantity of hectoliters grown in the year 1884 on one hectare of the exhibited seed, if it has been produced by the exhibitor himself, or if he is able to furnish such particulars.

(e) Whether the exhibitor generally sells the exhibited seeds for cultural or for technical purposes? If yes, how much a year and at what prices?

All the seeds are to be exhibited in proper glass vessels provided either with lids or with stoppers, or a sum of 2fls. =4/. shall be sent as the price for every such vessel.

Of every kind of seed at least 3 liters shall be sent.

In order to complete the exhibition of seeds, it is very desirable that the ripe exemplaries of plants should be exhibited with their roots, spikes, cods, and spadixes.

It is further desirable to get proper particulars respecting the ingredients of the soil, the chemical analysis of the seeds, or other qualities being of importance for the valuation of the seed. All the necessary notes shall be represented either in form of tables, graphic drawings, or in any other way.

In class (A) (Seeds of [cereals] Bread-Corns) the weight of a hectoliter shall be especially noted.

In class (B) (Seeds of Medical Herbs) there is especially to be remarked:—

(a) the scientific Latin name of the seed respectively of the plant, together with the usual local denomination;

(b) whether the exhibited seed of the medical herb has grown wild or been especially cultivated?

(c) where, in which community, on what soil, eventually on what places of a special culture (forest, meadow, &c.,) in which situation (mountain, river, bank, &c.,) the exhibited object has been produced or gathered? Is it regularly gathered? Which are the therapeutic elements of the plant?

Respecting the way of exhibition of the objects of this class it is desirable that the medical-plants should be exhibited in whole, rooted, and perfectly-developed samples, fastened upon a pasteboard or upon other small boards.

The ingredients of plants and the seeds employed for therapeutic purposes shall be exhibited also in their different degrees of preparation likewise in glass vessels or cylinders. Besides, there are to be exhibited the different ways of packing, as well as the ingredients of plants classed according to their different commercial qualities.

In class (C) (Seeds of Textile-Plants) there shall be likewise sent perfect plants with roots and fastened upon small boards provided with a long-measure.

In Class (D) (Seeds of Commercial-Plants and of Agricultural Industry-Plants) the following particulars should especially be given :—

(a) which method of culture is employed by the grower ?

(b) what ways are employed for the conservation, preparation for the market, and for the packing of the produce ?

Here too, as far as possible, there are to be sent perfectly developed plants as well as their produces in their different states of preparation as well as in the shape of ready commercial articles.

With the potatoes there is especially to be remarked : The designation of the species ; whether they are grown as table-potatoes or as cattle-food ; whether the latter are used for the manufacture of alcohol or of starch ?

Of hops there are to be sent at least 500 grams in glasses, besides at least 5 klgr. in sacs, for the sake of comparison. The method of drying and of the conservation of hops is likewise to be shown.

Of beetroots and of potatoes there is to be sent a quantity of at least 5 klgr. and exhibited upon glass or wooden plates.

Of beetroots in dry condition 2 klgr. will be sufficient.

Models and drawings of machinery and tools for the conservation of beetroots and hops, as well as the buildings for the drying of hops, may be exhibited in this class in models or in drawings.

The different methods of packing are to be shown respecting the hops as well as the dyeing plants. With the dyeing plants there shall be exhibited, besides the seeds, also such parts of plant which are used for the extraction of colour, as they are generally classified in commerce.

In class (E) (Seeds of Forage-Plants) the drawings and models of the implements or buildings destined for the preparation or conservation should also be exhibited. Besides, it will be advisable to give information respecting the method of cultivation employed by the exhibitor ; how often he mows, in which way he proceeds with the conservation and preparation of cattle-food, as well as the proportion observed in the mixing of the several kinds of forages.

Together with the exhibition of the forage-plants, there shall also be submitted the report of a Control-Station of Seeds, and remarked whether the seeds themselves are likewise used for cattle-food ?

Besides, it will be required that the forage-plants should be exhibited in their different states of development and from the different seasons, in perfectly rooted exemplaries as well in their state ripe for mowing as entirely developed with perfectly ripeseeds.

Also here there may be used white paste-boards, containing a long-measurement as well as the principal particulars respecting the nature of the soil, quantity of production in green and dried state, and the chemical analysis, &c.

Of swedes and of topinambur there shall be sent 5 klgr. of each with special designation of the species, likewise to be exhibited on glass or wooden plates.

In class (F) (Other kinds of cattle-food, as oil-cakes, &c.,) there shall be sent likewise 5 klgr. Oil-cakes shall be exhibited as whole cakes as well as ground. The bruised (crushed) forages as well as those exhibited in small pieces shall be put in glass vessels with lids.

The exhibiting factories and merchants are requested to communicate, besides the price of the object, also the freight up to the principal European railway, or steamboat-stations.

In class (D) (Manures) 5 klgr. of each sort are to be sent in glass vessels, as hermetically closed as possible. Here too the freight up to the principal European stations should be remarked besides the price of the objects.

V.—Prizes.

The most eminent objects exhibited will be distinguished in the sense of the Jury-Regulations.

The prizes are the following:

1. Great Diploma of Honour.
2. Bronze-medal.

The one side of the Medal contains the chief merits of the exhibitor in terms as:

For excellent produces, for excellent manure, &c.

Besides the Medals there will be distributed special Diplomas containing detailed designation of the merits.

The General Committee will take care of the interests of foreign exhibitors by admitting into the Jury a corresponding number of foreign members.

VI.—Reduction of Freight.

The General Committee has taken the necessary steps in order to procure the greatest possible reduction of freights, on all lines (railway and steamer) of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, for the objects of exhibition, as well on the entry as on the eventual return-journey of such objects.

VII.—Exemption from Duty.

The duty-free importation of the objects of exhibition has been granted by Art. 10 of the XVI Law of 1882.

The Royal Hungarian Ministry of Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce will claim the assistance of the Imperial and Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs, to obtain, whenever it shall be necessary, the duty-free transport to the respective countries of all exhibited articles that should not have been sold during the Exhibition.

VIII.—Application.

Applications must be made on special blank forms, to be forwarded free of charge by the General Commission, which blank forms shall be filled up properly and legibly and sent in duplicate to the office of the General Commission (Budapest, V, Ferencz József-tér No. 6) at the latest till the last day of August 1884. The same Committee will be answerable for a prompt and quick despatch of all applications, and will pay every attention to the correspondence with Exhibitors.

IX.—Acceptance and Admittance.

The General Committee will decide upon the acceptance of the notified objects.

In case of acceptance of any object to be exhibited, the Exhibitor will receive a Certificate of Admittance within 30 days after sending in his application.

X.—Rent for Space.

The rent for space has been fixed as follows:—

(a) For a space of one square meter 8 fls. = 16/.

(b) a space of one square meter beside the wall 6 fl. = 12/.

The wall itself to the height of 3 meters being included in this latter case.

No space less than a meter can be hired.

Half of the rent to be paid down to the counting office of the "Magyar országos bank részvény-társulat Budapest" at the latest within 30 days from the remittance of the Certificate of Admittance, and the other half at the latest till the 15th of May 1885.

If the rent is not paid in due time, the General Committee will be entitled to dispose otherwise of the space claimed. If, after having paid down the first half part of the rent, the applicant does not exhibit, no money will be returned.

If, after the placement of articles, it should appear that more space has been occupied than stated in the application, the difference shall be paid up to the 15th of July 1885.

XI.—Stands and Tables.

The General Committee itself will provide for the stands, tables, &c., required for the Exhibition, for the use of Exhibitors, at a moderate price.

In case of any Exhibitors wishing to exhibit upon his own stand or case, drawings of such stands or cases shall be submitted to the approval of the General Committee.

XII.—Transport.

All articles to be exhibited shall be sent free to Steamship or Railway Stations of Budapest. If the returning of any article be required, it is to be declared in the application, no subsequent claim being admitted in the contrary case.

XIII.—Bills of Delivery. Sending in.

Before forwarding the articles, bills of delivery must be sent in to the General Committee containing the exact list of articles.

All objects for exhibition shall be sent between the 15th February and the 15th March 1885.

XIV.—Objects to remain exhibited.

No object exhibited will be permitted to be removed before the closing of the Exhibition, viz., before the 15th October 1885, except with the permission of the General Committee.

XV.—Arrangement, Custody, and Cleaning.

The General Committee will provide for a necessary number of trustworthy persons for the arrangement, custody, and cleaning of the articles exhibited.

No guarantee will be given for losses or damages happening on the premises.

XVI.—Fire Insurance.

The General Committee will undertake to insure all objects against fire at a premium in proportion to the value stated in the application.

XVII.—Commercial Agents.

The General Committee will provide for active and experienced Agents to act as the Commercial Representatives of Exhibitors at moderate fees. Any claim for such representation shall be expressed under the proper head of the application.

Exhibitors represented by their own Agents are requested to announce them in time to the General Committee.

XVIII.—Catalogue.

With regard to admission in the Catalogue, Exhibitors may, besides their Firm and the list of the objects to be exhibited, supply, in due time and in as concise a form as possible, also statistical or descriptive particulars concerning their produces or their trade.

Regular advertisements will only be admitted at a moderate tax to be fixed subsequently.

XIX.—Subsequent Publications.

Subsequent Special Regulations or Publications issued by the General Committee respecting the objects of Exhibition will be either forwarded direct to the Exhibitors or by way of Agents to be published in the different countries.

XX.—Acceptance of Regulations.

With the sending in of the Application, every Exhibitor submits, in his own name and in that of his representatives and employés, to the above Regulations, as well as to all further directions that may be issued by the General Committee.

In the name of the General Committee of the Budapest General National Exhibition, 1885.

MATLEKOVITS, President.

COUNT EUGEN ZICHY, Second-President.

Invitation concerning the International Exhibition of Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manure.

In conformity with a Bill submitted to the Hungarian Legislature by Count Paul Széchényi, Royal Hungarian Minister of Agriculture, Commerce, and Industry, a Law (XII, 1883) has been passed for the purpose of instituting a "General National Exhibition" to be held in Budapest, the same having on the 9th March 1883 received the sanction of His Imperial and Apostolic Royal Majesty Francis Joseph I.

By this Law the Budapest General National Exhibition to be held in the year 1885 has not only been placed under the patronage of the Hungarian Government, but has been declared a National Question; the Government being charged with the preparatory and organizatory works, as well as with the direction of this Exhibition.

A General Committee has been appointed by the above-named Minister and intrusted with the immediate management of the affairs of the Exhibition.

This General Committee will be presided by Dr. Alexander Matlekovits, Secretary of State, while Count Eugen Zichy, President of the National Industrial Society, will be Second-President, and Dr. Julius Schnierer, Ministerial-Counselor, will be Director of the Committee.

The General Committee, all by maintaining the limited character of the Exhibition, intending to produce in the first line only as complete and faithful a picture as possible of the Natural and Industrial Produces of Hungary, has decided to organize, simultaneously with and within the limits of the General National Exhibition, an International Exhibition of Seeds, Cattle-Food, and Manure, with the participation of any Foreign Country.

The object of this International Exhibition is to acquaint the Hungarian agriculturists with foreign produces and, in the interest of the interchange of seeds, also with foreign places of import, and generally to give a clear picture of foreign agricultural production, whereby opportunity shall be given to foreigners to procure themselves a favourable market for their produces in Hungary.

These general points are the main cause which have induced the General Committee to admit into the Agricultural Section seeds, cattle-food, and manure also from abroad, and to permit also foreign products to compete, whereby the interests of foreign Exhibitors shall be taken into due consideration and protected by way of appointing foreign members into the Jury.

In the name of General Committee of the Budapest General National Exhibition, 1885.

MATLEKOVITS, President.

	Chandpore ...	0·65
25	Chittagong Hill Tracts. „ 11 „	1·92	Weather—cloudy and rainy during the middle of the week; foggy this morning. Jum cutting still continues. Some damage has been done to mustard crop by the rain, but it has benefited the tobacco crop.
	Hill Tipperah, „ 11 „	0·78	Weather—seasonably cool Winter crops are not grown in the hills. In the plains chillies and tobacco are doing well. Public health good.
BEHAR.
Patna Divn.
26	Patna, Feb. 14 '85	Nil	Weather—cold. Reaping of rubbee crops is pushed on. Opium is being collected. Public health good.
27	Gya, „ 14 „	0·22	Weather—frequently cloudy. Prospects of rubbee and poppy crops are very fair, but considerable damage has been done by insects, and the outturn of poppy will be decidedly less than that of last year.
	Nowada ...	0·04
	Aurangabad ...	0 25
28	Shahabad, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—cloudy. Harvesting of peas and masur has commenced. Blight is now general all over the district and has done much harm, especially to poppy.
	Buxar ..	0·04
29	Durbhunga, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—seasonable. Prospects of rubbee and poppy crops continue favourable. Wheat and barley will suffer a little from blight. Prices stationary. General health good
30	Mozufferpore, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—dry with much cloud and variable winds. Prospects of rubbee crops, including poppy, are very good. Public health fair.
31	Sarun, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—cool and cloudy with west winds. Mustard, peas, masur and linseed are being reaped. Other spring crops are doing well. Prospects of poppy continue favourable: lancing has commenced, blight has not increased Public health good.
	Sewan ...	0·02
32	Chumparun „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—cool with westerly winds. Prospects of poppy and rubbee crops continue favourable. Prices stationary. Public health fair.
Bhagulpore Divn.
33	Monghyr, Feb. 14 '85	Nil	Weather—cloudy. Prospects of crops continue good, though the cloudy weather is not very favourable. Poppy crop is good and the collection of opium is going on. Prices stationary. Public health good.
34	Bhagulpore, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—cloudy. Prospects of rubbee crops good. Mustard harvest very good. Prices of food-grains are slightly rising. Public health good.
35	Purneah, „ 14 „	Nil	Weather—rather colder than it has been in two previous weeks. Winter crops are still generally fair throughout the district; but some damage has been done to peas and mustard by catterpillars in south of the district. Wheat requires rain.
36	Maldah, „ 14 „	A few drops.	Weather—cool, and generally fine with westerly winds. Boro paddy is still being sown in thanas Gomastapur and Maldah. There has been a little rain in some places the late rubbee crops appear not to have been much benefited by it. Common rice is selling at 15 seers per rupee. Public health generally good.
37	Sonthal Pergha. „ 14 „	0·27	Weather—cloudy and cool. The recent rain has greatly benefited standing crops and has certainly softened land for its preparation for next paddy crop. Prices stationary. Public health good.
	Deoghur ...	0·28
	Pakaour ...	2·09
ORISSA.
Orissa Divn.
38	Cuttack, Feb. 13 '85	0·93	Weather—cloudy with prospects of rain. The outturn of sarad is estimated at from 10 to 12 annas. Rubbee crops are being gathered. Wheat and dalua are doing well. Common rice is selling at from 18 to 22 seers per rupee in town, and 25 to 30 seers in the interior. Public health generally good, with the exception of isolated cases of cholera and ordinary fever.
39	Pooree, „ 12 „	0·07	Weather—cloudy with occasional showers of rain. Threshing of sarad or late paddy continues; lands are being ploughed for the ensuing sarad crop. Dalua crops are doing well. Common rice is selling at an average of 22 seers 7 chittacks in the Sudder station, and 23 seers 4 chittacks in the Khoorda sub-division. Cases of cholera are reported from several parts of the district.
	Khoorda	1·25
40	Balasore „ 13 „	2·11	Weather—cool and seasonable. Heavy showers of rain have fallen in the north of the district. Ploughing commenced in some places. Cutting of paddy finished, and harvesting of rubbee crops is in progress. Public health generally good.
CHOTA NAGPORE.
South-West Frontier Agency.
41	Hazaribagh, Feb. 13 '85	0·90	Weather—cold. The recent rain has considerably benefited wheat and barley. Lancing of poppy and the collecting of opium are in progress. Small-pox continues in the interior; otherwise health good.
42	Lohardugga, „ 14 „	0·03	Weather—cold and rainy. Rubbee crops are generally promising well except in Barwai. Prices steady Public health good.
	Lahurdugga ...	0·50
43	Singbhoom, „ 13 „	0·11	Weather—cloudy with slight rain; clear and cold today. Cold-weather crops are doing well. General health good. Cattle-disease continues in some parts of the district.
44	Manbhoom, „ 14 „	0·01	Weather—seasonable; sky at present overcast. Prospects of cold-weather crops generally fair; bad in Sudder and Jhalda thanas; indifferent in the neighbourhood of Manbazar. Common rice is selling at 20 seers per rupee in the Purulia market. Public health good.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h, and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

CALCUTTA, the 17th February 1885.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 13TH OF FEBRUARY 1885.

THE week under review has again been rather important, for moderate rain has occurred generally in Orissa, Chutia Nagpur and South-West Bengal, while showers have also been received in East Bengal, and portions of North Bengal and of South Behar. North Behar has, however, received no rain.

At the close of the previous week a large depression which had existed over Northern India had rapidly filled up, but it had been succeeded on the 7th instant by a slight and shallow depression, which existed over Orissa and South-West Bengal. The weather over this area was consequently disturbed on this day, and the area of low pressure was again slightly noticeable on the 8th over South-West Bengal and Orissa, but it had practically disappeared on the 9th. On the following day relatively low pressures again existed over the whole of the Deccan and a large part of the Central Provinces, and this unfavourably affected the weather in Bengal, rendering the conditions disturbed, and rain was reported from numerous stations. These unsettled weather conditions continued in Bengal on the following day, and again rain was general over the southern and western districts. On the 12th the area of disturbed conditions diminished, and it was confined principally to the south-western portions of South-West Bengal and to Orissa, while on the last day of the week weather conditions in Bengal itself became more settled though an area of slight disturbance still existed over Orissa, from which district again rain showers were reported. Consequently it will be seen that for the greater part of the week the conditions in the southern and western parts of the Province were those of slight disturbance, and this has been accompanied by moderate general rain in these districts, while smaller amounts of rain have fallen in the other districts previously mentioned.

The mean pressure for the week over the whole Province has been only very slightly in defect of the normal, but, as might be expected from the meteorological conditions for the week above described, the area of greatest defect has been Orissa and South-West Bengal, and the average defect here is equal to more than 0·02″. In the other districts the mean pressures are not far removed from the normal, in some instances being slightly in excess, and in other instances slightly in defect.

Temperature has been in defect in all stations except in Orissa, the greatest defect being in Behar and Chutia Nagpur, where at Gya and Hazaribagh it has been about 4°. In Orissa the mean excess temperature has equalled 1·4°. In South-West and East Bengal the defect has been less than 1°; in North Behar the defect has been nearly 2°, while in South Behar and Chutia Nagpur the defect has been between three and four degrees. The reduced temperature has been principally in the day temperatures, and in many instances, where the mean daily temperature has been below the normal, the night temperatures have been decidedly above the normal. This is shown in the following table, where the normal and actual mean maximum and minimum temperatures for the week at eight selected stations are given.

Hazaribagh	77·1	72·2	—4·9	53·6	51·4	—2·2

Rainfall has been very general in the southern and western districts of the Province, and at most of these stations light rain has fallen on two or three, and in some cases on four days during the week. Rain was most general on the 7th and on the 10th, 11th and 12th, but in addition local showers fell on the 8th and 9th. South-West Bengal has received an average rainfall of 0·63 inches, which is considerably more than twice the normal fall; Chutia Nagpur reports an average of 0·51 inch, again more than twice the normal fall. Orissa has also received a mean fall of 0·67 inch which is six times the normal. In East Bengal the amount recorded was 0·18 inch, a fall decidedly less than the normal, but North Bengal and South Behar have only received small fractions of the usual amount of rain, and North Behar reports no rain at all during the week

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Province for the week ending Friday, the 13th February 1885 :—

For Meteorological Reporter to the Govt. of India.

MEMORANDA.

'BIRTHS and deaths were registered in the first class Municipalities in Bengal, during the week ending 31st January 1885, at the rates, respectively, of 23·7 and 30·1 per 1,000 of population, against 24·7 and 30·9 per 1,000, respectively, in the preceding week ending 24th January, indicating a falling off in the record of both events, particularly of the former.

2. These events were registered in the highest proportions in the following Municipalities :—

Births.	Ratio per mille.	Deaths.	Ratio per mille.
Utterpara	47·2	Poori	77·1
Durbhanga	33·8	Jessore	61·2
Gya	33·5	Burdwan	51·9
Serampore	33·4	Suburbs of Calcutta	46·5
Patna	31·7	Hughli	40·2
		Serampore	33·4
		Midnapore	32·5
		Dacca	31·2

3. The principal diseases, indicated in the table appended to this memoranda, furnished the death-rates exhibited below :—

	Ratio per mille during the weeks ending—
	31st January 1885.	24th January 1885.
Cholera	2·6	2·3
Small-pox	·4	·6
Fever	12·6	13·6
Bowel-complaints	5·5	6·1
Injury	·2	·1
Other causes	8·8	8·2

showing that, in comparison with the preceding week, there was a decrease of mortality from fever, and only fractional differences in that from other diseases.

4. Excluding injury, the casualties from which were nowhere large, the rest of the diseases were reported to have caused the highest mortality in the following Municipalities :—

* A special census of the Europeans in the Darjiling Municipality was recently taken as the census of this section of the community, taken in February 1881, was not reliable owing to the Europeans being at a minimum in that month. The number of the natives remains as before, as it was not necessary to re-census them. The ratios have consequently been calculated on the revised population under all heads in the above table, except "Age," the ratios under which have been omitted, inasmuch as the census of the Europeans, above alluded to, cannot be employed as a basis of calculation owing to the results of the census under this head not having been reported under the authorized form of age classification.

General Remarks on the fluctuation of principal staples carried over the East Indian Railway during the month ending 31st December 1884.

INCREASES.

Coal.—The increase in both the upwards and downwards coal is accounted for by an improved demand at stations on the Loop line and in the Calcutta market.

Indigo.—This increase is due to an advance in prices in the Calcutta mart.

Hides.—This is attributable to firmer prices and better supplies than in 1883.

Lac.—A moderate demand for shell-lac in England and America led to the increase in freight.

Oil.—Large despatches of kerosine oil up country owing to low prices in Calcutta account for the increase in this commodity.

Opium.—The improvement in the staple is due to a better outturn this season than in 1883

Salt.—A brisker demand in Behar, principally in the Patna and Gya districts, is assigned as the reason for the increase in this staple.

Iron.—The small increase under this head is attributable to larger despatches to Cawnpore.

DECREASES.

Cotton.—Business in cotton was restricted by the high prices asked by sellers, which may be accepted as the reason for this decrease.

Piece-goods.—Stiffness of prices in Manchester and the Calcutta market being very flat caused this decrease.

Wheat.—A tendency to lower prices in the Calcutta market, caused by dull advices from home, led to the decrease in this commodity.

Rice (husked and unhusked)—Failure of the old crop and the new crop not being in the market are the causes of a decrease in this commodity.

Other Grains.—This decrease is assignable to the absence of local demand owing to favourable crops throughout the country.

Railway Materials, Foreign—The active demand for transport of material for the construction of State and other Railways in 1883 having ceased, led to the decrease under this head.

Seeds.—Attributable to stocks of teel and poppy seed having become exhausted and the market for other seeds dull.

GENERAL REMARKS AND EXPLANATIONS

There are only two insignificant decreases to record in the month's traffic. They are in ginger and tea, for both of which articles the season has ended. Under all other heads an improvement has taken place, resulting in an increase of 5,040 91 tons, or 28·31 per cent. as compared with last December's traffic

Below will be found the necessary explanations of the fluctuations recorded.

INCREASES.

Ale ... Tons 13 07

This increase is due to consignments for the public, as little or nothing is coming forward for the Commissariat Department.

Food-grain ... Tons 254·18

This increase is in paddy, for which there is a fair demand. The rice market still continues dull.

Gunny bags ... Tons 73·74

The demand for local consumption continues.

Jute ... Tons 2,985·78

During the month the market for both loose and baled jute has been fairly active, and prices have advanced one to two annas.

Miscellaneous ... Tons 640·57

A very large quantity of machinery has been coming forward.

Piece-goods ... Tons 162·47

An improvment in the despatches of this staple generally takes place in the cold weather months.

Railway material ... Tons 159·34

Coal for the Locomotive Department and material for the Assam-Behar Railway make up this increase.

Salt ... Tons 320·27

This increase is due to the reduced rate which came in force on the 1st December.

Sugar ... Tons 14·87

The demand for local consumption continues.

Seeds ... Tons 56 87

The demand for linseed continues.

DECREASES.

Ginger ... Tons 6·69

The season is at an end.

Tea ... Tons 110·73

The season is at an end, and the market has declined.

INCREASE.

Tons.

Sugar and jaggree 25

This increase is due to previous stock being entirely exhausted.

Silk and silk cloth 17

This increase is due to most of the silk despatched by goods trains instead of by parcel

Revenue stores 29

This increase is due to revenue stores being carried by ordinary trains.

DECREASE.

Coal 70

This decrease is due to previous stock not being exhausted.

Cotton 14

This decrease is due to previous stock not being exhausted.

Edible grains 360

This decrease is due to partial failure of paddy crops for want of rain as well as that of pulse (kalai) which was damaged by sudden rise of the Ganges.

Salt 18

This decrease is due to carriage of salt this year by river.

Sundries 78

This is due to carriage by boat this year.

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT TO

The Calcutta Gazette.

CALCUTTA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1885.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

BENGAL TENANCY BILL, 1885, No. III.

The following Further Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend and consolidate certain enactments relating to the Law of Landlord and Tenant within the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 13th February, 1885 :—

WE, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend and consolidate certain enactments relating to the law of Landlord and Tenant within the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the schedule annexed, and have now the honour to submit this our further Report.

It must be understood that in referring to the decisions of the Committee we state the view of the majority where there has been any difference of opinion.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

2. We have made some slight amendments in, and additions to, this chapter, but few of them call for notice here.

The definition of "estate" and that of "proprietor", which is dependent on it, have given rise to the erroneous supposition that it was intended to exclude Government tenants from the operation of the Bill. We have now so amended the definitions as to remove any misapprehension on this point.

3. As it seems reasonable that the provisions of the Bill contained in sections 53 to 68, both inclusive, sections 72 to 75, both inclusive, Chapter XII and Schedule III should apply to money recoverable under any enactment as if it was rent, we have added to the definition of "rent" a clause providing that "rent" shall in those portions of the Bill include such money.

CHAPTER II.

CLASSES OF TENANTS.

4. The only amendments calling for notice in this chapter are—

1st—that we have omitted all reference to the raiyat converted into a tenure-holder under section 37 of the Bill No. II, as it has been determined to omit section 37 (see infra, paragraph 17) ; and 2nd—that we have altered section 5 (5) so as to provide that a tenant holding more than 100 bíghás shall be presumed, until the contrary is shown, to be a tenure-holder, without raising an issue as to his having sub-let any part of his holding.

CHAPTER III.

TENURE-HOLDERS.

5. We have in section 7 of this chapter included, among the matters to which a Court must have regard in enhancing the rent of a tenure-holder, the questions "whether the tenure was originally granted at a specially low rent for the purpose of reclamation" and "whether any fine or premium was paid on the creation of the tenure."

6. We have omitted section 8 of the Bill No. II, which provided that a Court should not enhance the rent of a tenure to more than double the previous rent.

7. We have in section 9 made the interval which must elapse between successive enhancements of the rent of a tenure the same as in the case of an occupancy-holding, namely, fifteen years.

8. We have omitted the provisions of this chapter specially applicable to patní tenures, and Chapter XVI, relating to summary sale of patní and other tenures for arrears, as we are, on further consideration, reluctant to interfere at present with the existing law regarding patní tenures, and are of opinion that any extension of the patní sale law to other tenures should be reserved for consideration in connection with the Bengal Registration Bill, to which we shall presently have to refer.

9. We have in sections 12 to 16 of the Bill so far altered the system of the registration of transfers of, and successions to, permanent tenures as to provide merely for enabling the landlord to register such transfers instead of compelling him to do so.

The Bill in its previous stages provided for a compulsory system of registration by the landlord. This, it was objected, would not work satisfactorily, especially as the landlords of many tenure-holders are poor and ignorant persons, having no regular office and no means of establishing one or maintaining a suitable register. At the same time it was pointed out that the establishment of an official registry would confer a great benefit on all concerned, and especially on the landlords, who might, if such a registry were established, be allowed to realize their rents by the process of summary sale which is now available only in the case of a limited class of tenures.

A Bill for the establishment of an official registry is at this moment before the Bengal Legislative Council, and the object we have set before ourselves in re-casting the portion of our Bill now under consideration has been to frame its provisions in such a manner as to secure to the Collector, who will be the officer entrusted with the preparation and maintenance of the official register, early and accurate information of all transfers and successions which may from time to time take place.

We have not overlooked the fact that the substitution of official registration for registration in the landlord's sherista would deprive the landlords of the fees which it was proposed to allow them under the Bill as originally framed, and which, it is believed, they commonly realize at present, though in most cases without any warrant of law. We think that the fees prescribed by the Bill in its earlier stages may well be paid to the landlord, even though he is to be relieved of the duty of registration.

10. The provisions we have inserted in the Bill in order to give effect to these views are as follows:—

First, as regards voluntary transfers (section 12), the simplest plan has appeared to us to be to require that every such transfer shall be registered under the ordinary law relating to the registration of documents. It is understood that the Local Government will make all arrangements requisite for facilitating the registration of such transfers. The parties applying for registration will be required to pay to the registering officer "the landlord's fee" and a process-fee for the service of notice on the landlord. When the registration has been completed, the registering officer will forward to the Collector the landlord's fee and a notice of the transfer containing all necessary particulars, and the Collector will thereupon cause the landlord's fee to be paid to the landlord and the notice to be served upon him, at the same time taking any such steps as may be prescribed by the measure now pending before the Bengal Legislative Council for the entry of the transfer in his official register.

When a transfer takes place by sale in execution of a decree (sections 13 and 14), the procedure will be substantially similar, the notice and the fee being sent to the Collector by the Court, except that, following the lines of the Bill in its earlier stages, we have not provided for the payment of a fee to the landlord when the sale takes place in execution of a decree for arrears.

In the only remaining case of transfer, namely, that of transfer by summary sale, the Collector will have in his own office all the information requisite for the purpose of registration.

11. When a succession to a permanent tenure takes place, the party succeeding will be bound (section 15) to give notice to the Collector and pay to him the landlord's fee and the process-fee above referred to, and the Collector will then proceed as above described.

12. In order to compel the person succeeding to comply with the provisions of this section, we have retained, for the case of successions, the provision of section 18 of the Bill No. II, under which a person succeeding will be debarred from recovering his rent by suit, distraint or otherwise, until he has given the notice and paid the fees prescribed.

CHAPTER V.

Occupancy-raiyats.

13. The first alteration in this chapter which appears to call for notice has reference to the area over which the status of settled raiyat is to hold good.

In the 11th paragraph of our first Report we referred to the inconvenience which might arise in certain exceptionally large estates from the status holding good over the whole estate, and this has given rise to considerable discussion. The Bengal Government, in the 22nd paragraph of its report of the 15th September, 1884, stated that "the majority of the officers consulted disapproved of the definition of 'settled raiyat' as given in the Bill," and that "the proposal which found favour was the elimination of the word 'estate' from the definition".

That Government, nevertheless, was of opinion that it was necessary to retain the word "estate" in order to meet the danger of the acquisition of the occupancy-right being prevented by shifting raiyats from one village to another within the estate.

It seemed to us that this danger was not so great as to justify the extension, over all portions of an estate of the status of "settled raiyat" acquired in one portion of it, since estates are frequently divided among numerous tenure-holders, who would have no opportunity of examining each other's books, or knowing anything about each other's raiyats. The danger in either direction is not serious, for in the vast majority of cases the raiyat is practically tied to his own village; and we felt, moreover, that by confining the status to the village we should be proceeding in closer conformity to the original conception of a khúdkásht raiyat, which, as explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill, it has been always intended to keep in view.

14. We have in section 22 re-cast sections 28 and 29 of the Bill No. II so as to carry out more precisely the intention with which they were framed, and we have inserted a sub-section (2) providing that if the occupancy-right in land is transferred to a person jointly interested in the land as proprietor or permanent tenure-holder it shall cease to exist.

15. Sections 23 to 26 of the amended Bill take the place of sections 31 to 36 of the Bill No. II; but, except a saving of custom as regards the descent of the occupancy-right in section 26, the only important change they involve is the omission of all provisions regarding the transfer of the occupancy-right, which, apart from the matter of sale in execution of a decree for rent (dealt with in Chapter XIV), we now propose to leave to custom as under the existing law.

16. The reasons for and against the proposal to make the occupancy-right everywhere transferable by an express legislative enactment have been so fully discussed within the last three years, and are so well known to all interested in such matters, that we shall not lengthen this Report by attempting to recapitulate them. It is enough to say that the Government of Bengal, in their letter of the 15th of September last, proposed to leave the law relating to the transferability of the right for the present untouched in Behar, and that on a further consideration of the question we are of opinion that the most prudent course will be to omit the provisions relating to voluntary transfer altogether from the present Bill. This decision has enabled us to omit all reference to the question of pre-emption.

17. The 37th section of the Bill No. II, which provided that raiyats sub-letting their land should in certain cases be deemed to be converted into tenure-holders, has met with much adverse criticism, and we now propose to omit it.

The remaining provisions as to sub-letting we have relegated to Chapter IX, where they will be found with certain modifications and additions.

18. In regard to the enhancement of rent in the case of occupancy-rights the Government of Bengal made certain proposals in their letter of 15th September, 1884, which are summarised in the 84th paragraph of that letter as shown on the margin.*

In regard to VI and VII we said in paragraph 34 of our Report last year that in applying the proportion rule in the case of prices the question of making some deduction to cover the effect of increased prices on the cost of cultivation would receive further consideration. The Government of Bengal recommended a deduction of one-half on this account.

* VI.—To recognize the principle that, in the absence of reason to the contrary, the Courts shall regard a rise in the price of staple food-grain as entitling the landlord to an enhancement of rent.

VII.—To fix the percentage by which the enhanced rent shall exceed the former rent at a definite proportion (one-half is suggested for consideration) of the percentage by which the enhanced prices exceed the former prices, the other portion going as an allowance for increased cost of production.

VIII.—To assign to enhancements on the ground of landlords' improvements a maximum limit of double the former rent.

IX.—To abandon the provision for enhancement on the ground of a "prevailing rate," experience having shown that no such rate exists, and that the position assigned to it in the present law has led to the construction of collusive and fictitious rates for the purpose of forcing up rents.

X.—To abandon fluvial action as a ground of enhancement of rent, but to recognize freedom of contract between landlord and raiyat in regard to new alluvium.

XI.—To withdraw the arbitrary limitations on enhancements by suit on account of a rise in prices, and to allow contracts for enhancement of rent out of Court up to a maximum limit of two annas in the rupee (12½ per cent) of the former rent, and for a minimum period of 15 years.

XII.—To withdraw all restrictions on freedom of contract in respect of the initial rent of all land which may lapse to the landlord from whatever cause.

XIII.—To re-introduce the provision that the rent of the occupancy or non-occupancy raiyat shall not exceed one fifth of the value of the gross produce calculated in staple food-grains.

We recognised the difficulty of making the Courts ascertain the actual cost of production, and as it was necessary to fix an arbitrary limit we have fixed the deduction at one-third as a general rule.

19. With reference to VIII we did not think we could justify any arbitrary limit in terms of a fractional proportion of the old rent being placed on enhancement when made on the ground of landlords' improvements.

20. We were unable to accept the proposal (IX) to abolish the prevailing rate as a ground of enhancement, inasmuch as this has, in one shape or another, been a ground of enhancement ever since the Permanent Settlement, and as it is the only means by which a landlord can remedy the effects of fraud or favouritism on the part of his agent or predecessors. In view, however, of the dangers which are said by competent authorities to arise from the artificial manufacture of rates, and from the very wide interpretation given to the term "places adjacent," we have somewhat modified the terms of the section, have limited enhancement to the rate ascertained to be the prevailing rate in the village, and have required that this rate should be determined with reference to the rates actually paid during a period of not less than three years before the institution of the suit.

21. We were not able to accept the proposal (X) to abandon fluvial action as a ground of enhancement.

22. On the other hand, we have accepted the proposal (XI) to limit enhancements by registered contract (except on the ground of improvement made by the landlord) to two annas in the Rupee (12½ per cent.) carrying with it in all cases a right to hold at the enhanced rent for 15 years, and we have at the same time struck out all the fractional limits placed on enhancement in Court by sections 44 (a), 45 (b) and 47 (b) of the Bill No. II.

23. The restrictions which it was proposed by section 42 to impose in certain cases on the initial rents payable by settled raiyats have, we think, been shown to be impracticable, and we have therefore, as proposed by the Government of Bengal (XI), omitted the section.

24. We were not able to accept the recommendation numbered XIII.

25. The only other amendments in the chapter which appear to call for special notice are as follows:—

(a) we have required Courts, in dealing with claims to enhancement on the ground of a rise in prices, to take decennial periods instead of quinquennial periods for the purposes of comparison, except when owing to the absence of price-lists or any other cause they find it impracticable to take such periods, in which case they may take any shorter periods;

(b) we have amended section 39 so that the price-lists prepared under it shall be merely presumptive evidence instead of being conclusive, as provided in the corresponding provision of the Bill No. II. The Bengal Government are of opinion that their arrangements are not at present so perfect as to justify these lists being made conclusive evidence;

(c) we have in section 40 included among the matters to be taken into consideration by an officer commuting rent the charges incurred by the landlord in respect of irrigation under the system of rent in kind and the arrangements made on commutation for continuing those charges.

CHAPTER VIII.

General Provisions as to Rent.

26. We have omitted from the section (50) which enacts the well-known presumption arising from holding at a rent unchanged for 20 years the sub-section which made the presumption applicable to produce-rents, as opinions generally were opposed to it.

27. We have, in section 52, providing for the alteration of rent on the ground of an alteration in the area of the holding, assimilated the provisions of the two clauses (a) and (b), which provide respectively for increase and reduction; and we have inserted the following new sub-section to guide the Courts in cases where there may be a dispute as to the area for which the tenant has been paying rent:—

"In determining the area for which rent has been previously paid, the Court shall, if so required by any party to the suit, have regard to—

"(a) the origin and conditions of the tenancy; for instance, whether the rent was a consolidated rent for the entire holding;

"(b) whether the tenant has been allowed to hold additional land in consideration of an addition to his total rent or otherwise with the knowledge and consent of the landlord;

"(c) the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area; and

"(d) the length of the measure used or in local use at the time of the origin of the tenancy as compared with that used or in local use at the time of the institution of the suit."

We have also brought the section under the general rule that the Court shall not fix a rent which would be unfair or inequitable.

28. We have substituted for the section of the Bill No. II regulating the instalments in which rent is to be payable the following simpler provision, namely:—

"58. Subject to agreement or established usage a money-rent payable by a tenure-holder or raiyat shall be paid in four equal instalments falling due on the last day of each quarter of the agricultural year"; and to prevent raiyats being harassed by successive suits for arrears, when by agreement or custom a larger number of instalments than four may be established, we have inserted in Chapter XIII a section (147) enacting in effect that such suits shall not be instituted against a raiyat oftener than once in three months.

29. We have made certain amendments in the division of the chapter relating to receipts and accounts, but the only one calling for special notice is the insertion of a new section (59) requiring the Local Government to provide and keep on sale forms of receipts and accounts. It will be for the landlords to choose whether they will use those forms, but we believe they will be found convenient.

30. In pursuance of the policy of the Bengal Act for the registration of proprietors, we have inserted the following section:—

"60. Where rent is due to the proprietor, manager or mortgagee of an estate, the receipt of the person registered under the Land Registration Act, 1876, as proprietor, manager or mortgagee of that estate or of his agent authorized in that behalf shall be a sufficient discharge for the rent; and the person liable for the rent shall not be entitled to plead in defence to a claim by the person so registered that the rent is due to any third person.

Effect of receipt by registered proprietor.

"But nothing in this section shall affect any remedy which any such third person may have against the registered proprietor, manager or mortgagee."

31. We have likewise modified in some particulars the provisions relating to the deposit of rent, but need only mention the provision that the deposit shall be made in the Court having jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the rent, and the limitation of the second ground on which an application to deposit rent may be made to cases where the tenant has reason to believe, owing to a tender having been refused or a receipt withheld on a previous occasion, that the landlord will not be willing to receive the rent or grant a receipt.

32. We have omitted the second sub-section of section 77 of the Bill No. II, which enacted that, when the right, title and interest of a tenant is brought to sale in execution of a decree obtained by a person other than the landlord, the landlord shall be entitled to have his rent paid first out of the sale-proceeds, and we have so re-cast the section as to make it clear that in the case of a tenure-holder, raiyat at fixed rates or occupancy-raiyat the landlord's remedy for arrears will be sale and not ejectment, and that the arrears will be a first charge on the tenure or holding.

33. We have substituted for section 79 of the Bill No. II a section (67) providing that an arrear of rent shall bear simple interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the expiration of that quarter of the agricultural year in which the instalment falls due.

34. To meet those cases in which transfer without the landlord's consent is a valid custom, we have provided in section 73 that, until notice of such a transfer is duly served on the landlord, the transferor and transferee shall be jointly and severally liable for arrears of rent accruing after the transfer.

CHAPTER IX.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS AS TO LANDLORDS AND TENANTS.

35. We have in section 79 provided that a non-occupancy raiyat shall be entitled to construct a well for the irrigation of his holding. A well constructed under this provision will be an improvement within the meaning of the Act, and the raiyat will on being ejected be entitled to receive compensation for it. The high importance of facilitating and encouraging the construction of all works of irrigation in this country with a view to the prevention of famine points to the necessity of this.

36. We have inserted a new section (84) giving power to landlords to acquire by compulsory sale, through the Civil Court and at a price to be fixed by the Court, any land in their estate required for building purposes or for religious, charitable or educational objects. The necessity of some such power, especially with a view to provide building-sites either for new tenants or in cases of diluvion, has been strongly urged upon us. We have guarded the section against abuse by requiring the certificate of a Collector as to the sufficiency of the reason before action can be taken under it.

37. We have inserted a section (85) providing that if a raiyat sub-lets otherwise than by a registered instrument the sub-lease shall not be valid against his landlord unless made with his landlord's consent, that a sub-lease by a raiyat shall not be admitted to registration if it purports to create a term exceeding nine years (seven years was the longest term for which an occupancy-raiyat could sub-let under section 38 of the Bill No. II) and that where a raiyat has without his landlord's consent granted a sub-lease by an instrument registered before the commencement of the Act the sub-lease shall not be valid for more than nine years from the commencement of the Act.

38. In dealing with surrender and abandonment the only changes made by us which need here be noticed are the provisions which we have inserted to check collusive surrender or abandonment in fraud of the rights of third parties. The necessity for this was brought to notice in paragraph 69 of the Bengal Government's letter of 15th September, where it is shown that raiyats not unfrequently sub-let the whole or a portion of their holdings in consideration of a large bonus for a term of years. To leave the interests of sub-lessees in such cases entirely at the mercy of the sub-lessor in collusion with his landlord would do serious practical harm. We have therefore provided (section 86 (6)) that the surrender of a holding which is subject to a registered incumbrance shall not be valid without the consent of the incumbrancer and the landlord, and in case of abandonment we have provided (section 87 (4)) that the sub-lease shall only be avoided after the sub-lessee has had the opportunity of taking over for the unexpired period of his sub-lease the full rights and liabilities of his lessor in regard to the rent of his entire holding. These provisions appear to us to present the only method by which protection can be given to the sub-lessee without injury to the landlord or without risking the conversion of these sub-leases into permanent transfers. In the case of sale in execution of a decree for rent, the sub-lessee has the same protection as other incumbrancers under Chapter XIV.

39. We have in section 88 provided that a division of rent shall not be valid as against the landlord without his consent in writing. This we understand to be the existing law.

40. We have amended section 90 so as to make it clear that a landlord is not entitled to enter on and measure land exempt from the payment of revenue.

41. We have in section 92 substituted the acre for the standard bíghá as the official standard of measurement, and have empowered a Court or Revenue-officer to direct, where such a course may seem more convenient, that a measurement shall be made by any other specified standard.

CHAPTER X.

Record-of-rights and Settlement of Rents.

42. In the Bill No. II the two processes known as the record-of-rights and the settlement of rents were dealt with separately, but it seemed to us more convenient that they should be amalgamated, and we have accordingly given to the Revenue-officer who is appointed to settle disputes during the operation of recording rights a similar power to settle disputes regarding rents.

We have, however, provided for two distinct kinds of settlement. Under the ordinary settlement, the officer will only have the power to settle rents when a settlement of land-revenue is being made or a question between the landlord and tenant arises, and such rents as he settles will generally be fixed for a term of years; in other cases his recorded entries will only have a presumptive value; he can, moreover, only reduce rents on the grounds under which reduction is demandable in the Civil Courts. Under the special settlement, which will only be undertaken with the previous sanction of the Government of India, and which is meant to be applied only in circumstances in which the operation of the ordinary law is likely to prove insufficient, the Settlement-officer will have power to settle all rents, and will, moreover, have power to reduce rents on other grounds than those ordinarily applicable. We think that in the exceptional cases in which it may be necessary to have recourse to this procedure the Government should have power to go to the root of the matter, and to put its settlement on a thoroughly stable footing.

Tables of Rates.

43. We have decided, in deference to the opinion of many experienced officers and with the consent of the Government of Bengal, to omit the chapter (XI of Bill No. II) providing for the preparation of tables of rates. It was evident that the procedure would only be made use of in rare and exceptional cases, and a more effectual method of treating these cases is provided in the Settlement chapter.

CHAPTER XI.

Record of Proprietors' Private Lands.

44. The only amendment calling for notice in this chapter is the insertion of a provision in section 116, that nothing in the chapter (VI) relating to non-occupancy-raiyats shall apply to a proprietor's private lands. This merely expresses what was always intended, though by an oversight it was not previously provided for.

CHAPTER XII.

Distraint.

45. We have inserted two sections of some importance at the end of this chapter.

The first (141) provides that when the Local Government is of opinion that in any local area or in any class of cases it would, by reason of the character of the cultivation or the habits of the cultivators, be impracticable for a landlord to realize his rent by an application to the Court under this chapter, it may by order authorize the landlord to distrain by himself or his agent; but that a landlord so distraining shall forthwith give notice to the Court, and that the Court shall thereupon depute an officer to take charge of the produce distrained, and proceed thereafter as if he had distrained under the ordinary procedure. The other section (142) added to this chapter empowers the High Court to make rules regulating the procedure under it.

CHAPTER XIII.

Judicial Procedure.

46. Section 147 has already been noticed (supra paragraph 28).

47. We have in section 148 added to the sections of the Civil Procedure Code, which are not to apply to rent-suits, section 326, empowering the Court to authorize the Collector to stay an execution sale of land in certain cases.

48. We have in section 153 excepted from the rules restricting appeals in rent-suits cases in which a question of the amount of rent annually payable by the tenant has been determined.

49. We have omitted section 172 of the Bill No. II, which required all mutual claims between the landlord and tenant as such to be inquired into and determined in every suit and proceeding for ejectment.

CHAPTER XIV.

Sale for Arrears under Decree.

50. We have added to the "protected interests" in section 160—

"(e) the right of a non-occupancy-raiyat to hold for five years at a rent fixed under Chapter VI by a Court or under Chapter X by a Revenue-officer."

The section as it stood would probably have been construed to cover such cases, but we think it well to leave no room for doubt on the point.

51. We have, in order to shorten proceedings, inserted in section (163) a clause enacting that in cases under this chapter the order of attachment and the proclamation of sale required by section 287 of the Civil Procedure Code shall be issued simultaneously.

52. We have, at the suggestion of our honourable colleague Bábú Peári Mohan Mukerji, inserted a new section (174) allowing a judgment-debtor to apply to set aside a sale of his tenure or holding, on depositing in Court within thirty days from the date of sale for payment to the decree-holder the amount recoverable under the decree with costs, and for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to 5 per cent. of the purchase-money. Applications under section 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside sales cause expense and annoyance to the decree-holder and auction-purchaser. It is believed that they are often instituted merely with a view to recovering the tenure or holding which has been sold, and it is anticipated that, if a judgment-debtor is allowed to recover his property by depositing after the sale the amount decreed against him, the number of these applications will be considerably diminished.

CHAPTER XV.

Contract and Custom.

53. A question having been raised as to how far section 210 of the Bill No. II, which was intended to have retrospective effect, should be allowed such effect, we have carefully considered each provision of that section, and have come to the conclusion that some of those provisions ought, with reference to this point, to be treated differently from others. The way in which we propose to treat the matter will be best seen from the new section we now propose, which runs as follows:—

Restrictions on exclusion of Act by agreement.

"178. (1) Nothing in any contract between a landlord and tenant made before or after the passing of this Act—

"(a) shall bar in perpetuity the acquisition of an occupancy-right in land, or

"(b) shall take away an occupancy-right in existence at the date of the contract, or

"(c) shall entitle a landlord to eject a tenant otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or

"(d) shall take away or limit the right of a tenant, as provided by this Act, to make improvements and claim compensation for them.

"(2) Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and tenant since the 15th day of July, 1880,* and before the passing of this Act shall prevent a raiyat from acquiring, in accordance with this Act, an occupancy-right in land.

"(3) Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and tenant after the passing of this Act shall—

"(a) prevent a raiyat from acquiring in accordance with this Act an occupancy-right in land;

"(b) take away or limit the right of an occupancy-raiyat to use land as provided by section 23;

"(c) take away the right of a raiyat to surrender his holding in accordance with section 86;

"(d) take away the right of a raiyat to transfer or bequeath his holding in accordance with local usage;

"(e) take away the right of a raiyat to sub-let subject to, and in accordance with, the provisions of this Act;

"(f) take away the right of a raiyat to apply for a reduction of rent under section 38 or section 52;

"(g) take away the right of a landlord or tenant to apply for a commutation of rent under section 40; or

"(h) affect the provisions of section 67 relating to interest payable on arrears of rent."

54. To meet the important case of a lease for the reclamation of waste land to which these provisions are not suitable, we have added the following proviso:—

"Provided as follows:—

"(i) Nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of a lease granted bonâ fide for the reclamation of waste land, except that, where, on or after the expiration of the term created by the lease, the lessee would, under Chapter V, be entitled to an occupancy-right in the land comprised in the lease, nothing in the lease shall prevent him from acquiring that right."

* This was the date of the publication by the Government of Bengal of the Rent Commission's Report and Draft Bill.

55. We have further provided that the section shall not affect those contracts which are occasionally entered into for the temporary cultivation of orchard land with agricultural crops.

56. We have in section 180 put útbandi lands on the footing on which chur lands were placed by section 213 of the Bill No. II, that is to say, no occupancy-right will be acquirable in them until they have been held for twelve years, and meantime the tenant will be bound to pay whatever rent may be agreed on between him and his landlord. We have further provided that Chapter VI of the Bill shall not apply to such lands.

57. We agree with the Government of Bengal in thinking that it is not desirable to make any special provision regarding the lands known as "hál-hasili," and we have accordingly omitted all references to them in this chapter.

58. We have considered the proposals of the Government of Bengal regarding homestead lands, and find that they practically resolve themselves into this, that the tenure of such lands should, as provided by section 216 of the Bill No. II, be regulated by local custom, with this addition, however, that, subject to local custom, they should be regulated by the provisions of the Bill applicable to land held by a raiyat. We have amended the section (182) on these line.

CHAPTER XVII.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

59. We have in section 189 added to the powers which may be conferred on officers by the rules to be made by the Local Government—"any power exerciseable by any officer under the Bengal Survey Act, 1875."

60. We have also inserted the following new section, which speaks for itself :—

"194. Where a proprietor or permanent tenure-holder holds his estate or tenure subject to the observance of any specified rule or condition, nothing in this Act shall entitle any person occupying land within the estate or tenure to do any act which involves a violation of that rule or condition."

Tenant not enabled by Act to violate conditions binding on landlord.

61. Lastly, we have added a section (196) providing that "this Act shall be read subject to every Act passed after its commencement by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in Council." In the absence of some such provision as this, the Bengal Legislative Council would, owing to the wide extent of ground covered by this measure of the Supreme legislature, find itself practically debarred for all time to come from dealing with almost every question affecting the relations of agricultural landlords and tenants.

62. In the 99th paragraph of our former Report we mentioned certain points on which we desired further information, and on which we solicited the opinions of the Local Government or High Court or both, and to these it is necessary briefly to allude in so far as they have not been disposed of by the foregoing remarks.

63. The first of these points, which was referred to the Local Government, was "whether, with reference especially to landlord's improvements, it is desirable to empower Revenue-officers to arrange for the cutting of irrigation-channels, the distribution of water and the payment of compensation, and, if so, what form such provisions should take."

We are fully sensible of the great importance of this question, but on full consideration we agree with the Government of Bengal in thinking that a discussion of it would be out of place in connection with the present Bill, and that it will be most appropriately treated in connection with the irrigation law, which will probably soon come under revision in Bengal.

64. The only other points specially referred to the Local Government, and to which we have not already adverted, were certain proposals to extend the patní sale procedure. Those proposals did not commend themselves to the Local Government, and now that the patní procedure is to be excluded from the present Bill, they would more properly be reserved for future consideration.

65. The remaining points to which we think it necessary to advert had reference to the question as to the possibility of devising some simplification of the procedure in rent-suits. In paragrap h 83 of our former Report we said—"For ourselves we must confess that, after the most anxious consideration of the various schemes which have been propounded for shortening and simplifying the procedure in rent-suits, we are unable to suggest anything of importance in this direction, which would not involve a serious risk of failure of justice." We, however, proposed that certain suggestions which had been made should be referred for the opinion of the High Court. The reply of the Honourable Judges is among the papers before us, and we regret to find that, as we apprehended, they too are unable to strike out any royal road to the result desired. They disapprove of the specific suggestions made, and they state it as their opinion that the true remedy for the evils complained of is to be found in executive rather than in legislative action, that is to say, in an increase in the judicial staff and a reduction of the court-fees.

Since the reply of the Honourable Judges has been received, further proposals have been submitted to us, and in particular a scheme put forward by Bábú Mohiny Mohun Roy, on which the opinions of certain officers have been taken, but we regret to say we have not found among them anything which would materially abridge the procedure without entailing a risk of serious failure of justice. The executive measures referred to by the High Court will, doubtless, receive careful consideration at the hands of the Government.

Memorandum of dissent from the decisions of the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

In signing the Report of the Select Committee on this Bill I wish to place on record my opinion that, having regard to all that has been elicited by the commissions and enquiries of the last six or seven years, the Bill inadequately meets the necessities of the case which called for legislation. It is unsatisfactory, in so far as it gives insufficient protection to all raiyats against excessive enhancements of rent, and no real protection in other directions to the non-occupancy-raiyat.

I note, firstly, that the change under which the limit of the "village" has been substituted for the "village or estate" in section 20 of the Bill may seriously affect the fixity of the "settled raiyat's" tenure. As originally drawn, "estate" formed part of this section, and its adoption as part of the definition had the sanction of the Secretary of State. In that form the definition met with considerable opposition in Committee, but I was prepared to meet objections by accepting an arrangement whereby a permanent cultivator, when willing to pay a fair rent, should carry his status as a settled raiyat to any land in that portion of his landlord's estate which might be situated in the pargana or fiscal circle in which the raiyat resided.

Secondly, I have opposed the "prevailing rate" as a ground of enhancement. There is ample evidence in the recorded literature on the subject to shew that such a thing as a "prevailing rate" of rent does not exist in any part of the country. Under the law as it stands it is admitted that the zamíndárs have been unable to establish a "prevailing rate" in their suits for enhancement on this ground; and the consequence was that, failing proof, the endeavour was made to create it fictitiously. The result has been demoralizing and very injurious to the raiyats, and I am afraid that the Select Committee, though animated by the very best intentions, have not provided any positive safeguard against the mischievous tendencies to which I have referred. On the contrary, their proposals on the subject will probably facilitate enhancements up to the average of rates prevailing in the village, and will thus place a much stronger power in the hands of the zamíndárs than even the present law permitted or ever contemplated.

Thirdly, the Bill as it leaves the Committee almost entirely abandons the non-occupancy and the under raiyat. They are practically unprotected; and such a result appears to me to be contrary to the intention with which the legislation on the Rent question was undertaken, and contrary to the conclusions of authoritative opinion that, in the case of all tenants of this class, the growth of the right of occupancy, as tending to establish a substantial peasantry, should be encouraged and advanced.

Lastly, the loss of the limitation of the maximum rent to one-fifth of the gross produce is a serious loss, specially as it affects the non-occupancy and under raiyats. The proposal to limit rents to a fraction of the gross produce in staple food-crops did not originate with me, though I accepted it and suggested the particular fraction of one-fifth. Indeed, had my views been supported in regard to the abolition of the "prevailing rate" as a general ground of enhancement, and in regard to the protection of the non-occupancy-raiyat, I should not have placed the stress I now do on the gross-produce limit. But as the majority of the Select Committee have rejected, one by one, every effectual check on rack-renting adopted in the original Bill,—as they have also rejected the equivalents for those checks advocated by me without themselves proposing any substitutes,—it seemed to me that the only hope of escape from the danger of a Bill for the unlimited enhancements of rent lay in a recurrence to the proposal made by the Government of India in their first Bill to limit rents to a share of the gross produce. I am, of course, conscious of the objections to which such a limitation is open as a matter of theory; but theory and practice do not always coincide, and practically a gross produce limit on rents is indigenous in the country, has been asked for by the landlords, and recommended by the ablest among my predecessors. My views on the subject are not shared by a majority of the Committee, and the proposal falls to the ground. I have always admitted that in some Bengal districts the tenantry can well afford to pay higher rents, and I have endeavoured to provide landlords with reasonable facilities for enhancement. But there are many parts of Bengal in which rents are already excessive; and, taking Bengal and Behar together, I cannot contemplate without anxiety a legislative measure whose tendency is to promote, without an ultimate check, a further increase of those rents.

I had hoped that the legislation now in hand, which has been the subject of discussion and consideration by no less than four Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal, would have carried with it some measure of finality. I gladly recognise in the Bill some advance on the present law as regards security of tenure in the case of raiyats with a right of occupancy. I recognise too potentialities for good in the chapter which provides for a survey and a record-of-rights. But fixity of tenure for one class of raiyats loses much of its value as against the power of unlimited enhancements of rent; and in its present outcome there is scarcely the assurance, which had been expected, of a final settlement of many important principles connected with a Tenancy Bill in the Lower Provinces of Bengal.

RIVERS THOMPSON.

The 13th February, 1885.

Memorandum of dissent from the decisions of the Select Committee on the Tenancy Bill.

ALTHOUGH I think the Bill as it now leaves the hands of the Select Committee an improvement on the Bill submitted to it for amendment, it still contains certain provisions with reference to which I differ with the majority in opinion, and on these points I would beg to record my dissent.

1. I object to the omission of the words "and the whole or part of it is sub-let" from section "5", sub-section "5". The word should be again inserted or the whole of the sub-section omitted.

Under the Bill a tenure-holder is a tenant "who has acquired a right to hold land for the purposes of collecting rents or bringing it under cultivation by establishing raiyats on it." A raiyat, is a person "who has acquired land for the purpose of cultivating it himself or by hired labour."

I cannot understand on what grounds the majority of the Committee deemed it necessary to over-ride the essential difference in the nature of the two tenancies, and to declare that all persons holding more than 33 standard acres of land shall be presumed to be tenure-holders until the contrary is proved.

To me it appears that the first and only enquiry to be made is whether the tenant cultivates it himself or sub-lets the whole or a portion of it. If he cultivates it himself it should be presumed that he is a raiyat until the contrary is proved. If he sub-lets a portion of it, it should be presumed that he is a tenure-holder, until he proves that he originally acquired the land for cultivating purposes, and that the tenants who hold under him are sub-tenants.

Our efforts in this instance should be confined to strengthening the position of the actual cultivators of the soil.

2. I dissent from the decision of the majority of the Select Committee to omit transferability from among the incidents attached to an occupancy-holding.

I have already exhausted every argument I can think of to induce the Government and the Committee to legalize and control transfer and failed to gain their support, it is unnecessary to recapitulate them here, I will therefore only record my dissent.

3. Section 18, Chapter 3.—The provisions of this chapter should be confined to mocurraree holdings, holdings admitted by the landlord to be held at fixed rents, and holdings the rents of which have been declared fixed in perpetuity under decrees of competent Courts. If this is not allowed, sections 15 to 22 of Bill No. 2 should be again inserted in the Bill in place of sections 12 (3) and 13.

All raiyati holdings acquired for the purposes of cultivation whether held at a fixed rent or at a rent subject to enhancement, should only be used for the purpose for which they were acquired, viz., for the purposes of cultivation, and for the growth of crops. There can be no sufficient reason for allowing an ordinary cultivator to be ejected from his holding if he uses it in a manner to render it unfit for the purposes of the tenancy and at the same time to allow raiyats at fixed rates of rent to do, as they think right with the land even to destroying it whatever the rate of rent may be, whether subject to periodical enhancement or not, the purpose for which the land was originally acquired was the same in both instances and should remain so.

If the provisions of the chapter were confined to admitted rights, the injury to the landlord would be lessened, as they stand in the Bill, in every instance that a landlord sues under section 25 (a), the provisions of this chapter will be pleaded to debar suit.

If the above suggestions were adopted, it would not inflict any hardship on the tenant; if the tenant claiming to hold at fixed rates, but whose rights had not been admitted wished to avail himself of the privileges allowed him under this chapter, all he need do is to apply under section 157, to have the nature of his tenancy declared previous to availing himself of them.

If the operation of this chapter is not confined to mocurraree holdings, and holdings the rents of which have been declared fixed by a competent Court, sections 15 to 22 of Bill No. 2 should be again inserted in the Bill, or the landlord will be compelled to bring a suit to set aside every conveyance in which the holding is incorrectly described as a holding at fixed rates, when he receives notice of transfer.

4. The restrictions placed on voluntary enhancement under section 29, will have the effect of compelling the landlord to exact every pice of rent the law will permit him to demand, it prohibits all enhancement out of court, or it will induce the parties concerned to resort to deception and fraud to evade the payment of the heavy costs entailed upon them in a heavy law suit for enhancement of rents, they will fight it out to the bitter end or lie.

5. Section 35 I consider superfluous we have throughout the Bill directed the Courts to decree only fair and equitable rents, therefore to tell the Courts that they shall not decree unfair and inequitable rents is unnecessary. With an experienced judge it will have no weight but an inexperienced judge may attach undue importance to it and in doing so do substantial injustice to one of the parties concerned.

6. Under sections 48 and 49 we have effected too little for the protection of the sub-tenant, the actual cultivator of the soil.

The sub-tenant holding under a registered lease is, I think, amply protected short of allowing him to acquire occupancy-rights in the land, the Committee have gone as far as it is possible to go without encroaching on the rights of others, but the sub-tenant who holds under a verbal agreement or an agreement which cannot be accepted as evidence under the law is not sufficiently protected. I would wish to see the sub-tenant receive the same protection against hasty eviction, rack-renting, &c., as is afforded the non-occupancy-raiyat under the Bill.

7. Section 50 is an improvement on section 64 of Bill No. 2, but it does not go far enough. I am of opinion that the suggestions made in the Bengal Government letter of September, 1884, that the presumption should run from 20 years previous to the introduction of the suit, should be adopted, my reasons for wishing it so I stated in my dissent on the Bill No. 2, therefore need not repeat them here.

8. The penal clauses 59, 74 and 185 require modification as they stand, they will be harsh in their operation and may be used solely for the purpose of giving the landlord annoyance.

9. Section 89—2 prohibiting the landlords measuring lands oftener than once in ten years will have the effect of encouraging encroachments. As the landlords are prohibited from bringing suits for enhancement oftener than once in 15 years there is no necessity for this prohibition and the right to do so will, in all instances, be useful to them to test encroachments.

10. Section 138 limits the area of the landlords zeraut or home cultivation to all land held by him as such for 12 years continuously "previous" to the introduction of the Act, thereby preventing him from acquiring any more land as zeraut after the passing of the Bill.

It does not prevent his cultivating more land as home cultivation, but if he once lets it out of his possession, lets it to another person for one season, he will lose his rights in it for ever.

I think the period he is required to hold it for, in order so acquire zeraut rights in the land should run for a period of 12 years before or after the Act is introduced.

11. Section 173 contains a new provision in law, it permits a judgment-debtor to recover possession of his holding 30 days after it has been sold by decree of Court by paying in the amount of the decree.

I object to it as I think it will have an effect contrary to what is intended.

It will deter would-be purchasers from bidding, thereby allowing holdings to be sold for one quarter their value.

It will encourage hangers on about the Courts to make speculative purchases.

And last not least it will induce the judgment-debtors to be careless in the due payment of their debts.

T. M. GIBBON.

12th February, 1885.

Dissent.

I REGRET I cannot concur with many of the decisions arrived at by the majority of the Select Committee. It seems to me that we have failed to achieve some of the principal objects of the Bill, and that the modifications which the measure has undergone, whilst securing to the landlords substantial advantages, have left the raiyats as defenceless as before.

The Bill was introduced in Council with certain well-defined objects which were of a two-fold character, namely (1) to give reasonable security to the peasant in the occupation and enjoyment of his land; (2) to give reasonable facilities to the landlord for the settlement and recovery of his rent. In order to attain the first object, it was proposed to make the following changes in the existing system:—

(1) to extend to permanent cultivators, holding land in a particular village or estate, the right to hold that land on payment of a fair rent;

(2) to make occupancy-rights transferable;

(3) to introduce a fixed maximum limit for the enhancement of rents; and

(4) to provide some efficient guarantee to non-occupancy-raiyats against arbitrary eviction and arbitrary enhancement of rents. As regards the first object, the proposal, no doubt, has been maintained with some modification. But this has certainly not been the case with the others, and I must confess to a feeling of disappointment at the withdrawal of most of those provisions which were from time to time introduced to secure these objects.

The free transfer of occupancy-holdings was, if I may so call it, the keystone of the measure. The custom had grown up in various parts of Bengal and was gradually extending itself to the entire province. Excepting those places where the presence of a foreign element predominated and caused some degree of friction between landlords and raiyats, the tenants who enjoyed the right of free transfer were admittedly more prosperous and better able to withstand the periodical shocks of scarcities and famines. It was admitted that, during the years immediately preceding the introduction of the measure in Council, the evidence in favour of the extension of the right of transferability had accumulated considerably. It was accordingly proposed to give a statutory sanction to that right. With reference to Behar, however, a doubt was entertained by the Government of Bengal, and my own knowledge of the circumstances of that province induced me last session to bring forward a proposal to withdraw Behar from the operation of the provision. That proposal, however, was not approved of, and it was resolved to give the right to all occupancy-raiyats throughout Bengal and Behar. During the present session, the provision has been dropped entirely from the Bill. Whilst agreeing to the advisability of leaving to custom the right of free transfer in Behar, I consider that as regards Bengal it would have a mischievous tendency. In every place, even where the right has been freely exercised, such as the Presidency, Rajshahye, Dacca, and Chittagong Divisions, the custom will be disputed, with the result that a large portion of the consideration money will pass either into the hands of the landlords or their servants. It would have been far better to recognize transferability throughout Bengal Proper, subject, if necessary, to the payment by the raiyat of a graduated scale of fees upon the consideration money, than to have left it to custom, which I fear will henceforth be disputed in every instance, to the serious prejudice of the tenant in the exercise of his right. With the safeguards which the Bengal Government proposed to attach to the recognition of the right in Bengal Proper, no injury to the landholding interests need have been feared. I think the mode in which the question has been discussed and decided is likely to produce mischief. Had the question not been raised, this mischief might have been avoided.

2. From the very inception of the Bill, it was considered necessary to introduce a maximum limit on rents. In many parts of the province it was proved by the stern testimony of facts that the enhancement of rent beyond a certain limit implied starvation to the cultivators of the soil, and that any endeavour to exact rent beyond that limit ended in failure to the landlord or distress to the tenant. In the interests of the landholding classes themselves it was proposed to provide a check to the system of rack-renting which many of them were disposed to adopt. The East Landholders Association and the late Bábú Kristodás Pál both proposed a gross produce-limit—the former one-fifth as the highest limit of enhancement which the zamíndárs thought proper to demand, the latter one-fourth. The important question to determine was what proportion should the raiyat be left in enjoyment of after payment of his rent? If experience and the collective evidence of competent observers are of any account, it is clear that the raiyats in Bengal can hardly pay for rent more than one-fifth of the gross produce without trenching upon the bare means of subsistence. If in some places the jamábandis shew a higher rent, the question remains is the raiyat ever able to discharge his liability? Among other evidence, that recently supplied by the Board of Revenue as the result of its experience of wards' estates furnishes a negative answer to this question. It certainly cannot be the interest of anybody to leave the raiyat a bare subsistence. Whatever the proportion it may have been considered desirable to adopt, a gross produce-limit appeared to me the most satisfactory and most feasible of all the proposals brought forward to prevent rack-renting. The adoption of this limit would have also enabled the legislature to give some degree of protection to the large body of non-occupancy and under-raiyats who are now practically left without any protection. The withdrawal of the fractional limit upon enhancements in Court is in my opinion likely to prove injurious to the raiyats.

3. I consider the ground of enhancement on the basis of "prevailing rates" as open to serious objection. It introduces, in the form it has now assumed in this Bill, an entirely novel principle into the law of Bengal. The law has hitherto not recognized enhancements up to the average of rates payable, and it seems to me that the recognition of such a principle is not only dangerous, but, without any correlative ground of reduction, unjust. It will end in screwing up rents to the factitious average of a large number of rates, over the correctness or reality of which no individual raiyat has any control, and that average will furnish the basis for a fresh increase until the highest possible rate is reached.

4. Enhancement on the ground of increase in the price of staple food-crops is to my mind economically indefensible. When the price of food-crops increases, the price of other necessary articles also increases. Is it fair or reasonable to constitute a rise in the price of staple food-crops as a ground of enhancement when a hundred other circumstances, like the increasing cost of production, increasing cost of the bare necessities of life, &c., tend to show that the raiyat of to-day in the majority of instances is not a whit better off than the raiyat of twenty years ago? Let us take for example an instance (which is not uncommon in Bengal), of a raiyat whose holding is fit for growing, say cotton, and whose cultivation, owing to a fall in the cotton-market, has diminished in value. As the Bill stands such a raiyat would, notwithstanding his contracted ability to pay enhanced rent, be still liable to enhancement should the price of food-grains have risen. In other words, although he gets less for his crop and has to pay more for his food, he is still liable to have his rents increased. I cannot help thinking that the Select Committee have failed to realize the full effects of this ground of enhancement, and I would strongly urge that the old ground of enhancement on the basis of net values should be reverted to.

5. The Bill provides no efficient safeguard against the ejectment of a non-occupancy raiyat to prevent the possibility of his acquiring an occupancy-right.

6. I am not able to understand the object of the factitious difference which has been created between under-raiyats holding under registered sub-leases, and under-raiyats holding verbally or under an unregistered lease. The system of sub-letting is interwoven with the agricultural economy of the country, and the Committee at a very early stage recognized the inexpediency of introducing any provision in the Bill interfering with it. Considerable protection has been given to planters and capitalists taking lands for purposes of indigo cultivation from the raiyats under registered sub-leases. No protection, however, is given to the mass of under-raiyats. It is said that these may secure to themselves the same rights by simply taking registered leases; but it must be remembered that the majority of the under-raiyats are poor to the verge of starvation, and that they are not in a position to demand registered leases.

7. I demur, also, to the provision embodied in the Bill regarding útbandi tenures. This provision seems to me to be in direct contradiction to the views of the Secretary of State and the Government of India, that "shifting" should be put an end to. The útbandi provisions recognize and legalize the eviction of a raiyat at the mere caprice of the landlord. I had no objection to the proposals of the Bengal Government, to allow land held on the útbandi system to be a matter for contract; but I have strong objections to the útbandi raiyat being left, as this Bill leaves him, without any practical protection whatsoever.

These are the main and essential points on which I differ from my colleagues; but there are various minor details with reference to which, also, I cannot agree with them.

8. On the whole I regret to think that a measure from which so much was expected should prove so inadequate in its general result. The guarantees to which the raiyats had laid claim, as well on constitutional grounds as on those of equity and expediency, have been either withheld or only partially conceded. Between contending claims the Bill does not in my opinion strike a just balance, and it seems to me that unless some further modifications are made in the direction which I have indicated, it will not answer the purpose of definitely setting at rest the disputes between landlord and tenant in Bengal.

AMÍR ALÍ.

MINUTE.

I signed the preliminary Report of the Select Committee last year, on the understanding that I postponed the expression of my opinion on certain questions until the submission of the final Report to Council. Some of the sections to which I then objected have, during the subsequent revision, been removed from the Bill, others have been modified, and I now confine my remarks to four principal points. I desire, however, at the same time to record in general terms my hesitation in regard to several other provisions in the Bill. For the Select Committee has been asked to deal with the entire relation of landlord and tenant in Bengal, without being furnished with any body of cross-examined evidence to guide its deliberations. Opinions and statements, often conflicting and sometimes contradictory, have been furnished to it in large numbers. But it has not had the means of ascertaining which of these opinions and statements would have borne the test of cross-examination, or how far their discrepancies might have been reconciled. Absence of such data is the more to be regretted in a measure affecting land-right in Bengal; for in Bengal almost alone among the Provinces of India, there is no central department of statistics, and until quite recently there was no agricultural bureau, which might in some measure have compensated for the evidence of witnesses heard in the Districts. But, while I regret the defective method of enquiry originally adopted, I acknowledge that, at the stage which the measure had reached when the Bill came before the Select Committee, the time for an effective local enquiry had gone past. The Committee heard the views of several gentlemen in Calcutta on two minor points, but no body of evidence has been collected in the Districts and subjected to cross-examination. The result has been to leave in my mind an extreme uncertainty in regard to several important classes of rights with which the Bill deals.

Coming to specific grounds I object, in the first place, to the application of one set of minute provisions for the regulation of rent, to two Provinces in which the relation of landlord and tenant is so widely dissimilar as in Bengal and Behar. [Section 1 (3).] The statements before the Committee show that in Behar, owing to over-population and to the consequent competition for land, the difficulty is to secure a sufficient share of the crop to the cultivator; while throughout large areas in Bengal the difficulty is for the landlord to realise his rent. Yet the fundamental differences between Bengal and Behar find no recognition in the Bill. The effect of this has been, in my opinion, to increase the difficulty of making effective provision for either Province. Thus in regard to perhaps the most important question dealt with in the Bill, namely, the restrictions to be placed on enhancement of rents, the Bengal Government declared that to limit rents to one-fifth of the gross-produce was a necessity for Behar, while the imposition of that limit was found indefensible for Bengal. The one-fifth limit has accordingly been dropped, and minor restrictions have been introduced. It seems doubtful to me whether some of these minor restrictions do not go further than is warranted by the facts in Bengal; and it is more than doubtful, considering the statements made on behalf of the Bengal Government, whether these restrictions will meet the necessities of Behar.

I object, in the second place, to the discouragement which the Bill places on the reclamation of waste lands by proprietors at their own expense. Important provisions in the Bill rest on considerations arising out of the pressure of the population on the soil, and on the necessity of protecting the cultivator against the monopoly in land which is thus conferred on the landlord. The most direct remedy for this state of things is to increase the area available for cultivation. Yet the Bill not only gives no new inducement to landholders to reclaim wastes, but places discouragements, which did not exist under the previous law, upon their doing so. As regards lands brought under cultivation by means of reclamation leases, the landlord will be in a rather worse position than before; for the occupancy-right will now commence to accrue to the tenants during the currency of such leases, and it may be enforced immediately on their expiry. As regards lands brought under cultivation by the landlord himself, by means of hired labour, he is in a much worse position than before. Henceforth the landlord who cuts down heavy jungle, or digs tanks, or drains swamps at a large outlay, by means of his own servants, will, under the provisions of the Bill, begin to lose the occupancy-right in the reclaimed land as soon as he lets it out to tenants. If the landlord lets the reclaimed fields to a settled raiyat of the village, the tenant acquires the occupancy-right the moment he enters on the land: if the landlord lets the reclaimed fields to any other raiyat, the title to occupancy-rights immediately begins to accrue. In no case will the landlord be permitted, by special contract in his lease, to bar the growth of occupancy-rights in land which he has reclaimed by his own servants at his own expense. Considering the pressure of the people on the cultivated soil, and the existence of large un-reclaimed tracts within a few days' walk of centres of congested population, I think it impolitic to place any new discouragements on efforts to add to the cultivated land. Considering that the Bill, in order to deal with the evils of over-population, restricts the former rights of the landholders, I think that such discouragements are not only impolitic but unjust. I purpose, therefore, to move amendments in Council, which will have the effect of protecting a landlord who reclaims at his own expense bonâ fide waste lands, against the growth of occupancy-rights in those lands during a reasonable period to recoup his outlay, say for thirty years.

In the third place, I object to certain of the provisions for the enhancement and reduction of rents on the ground of a rise in prices [section 39]. The Bill substitutes for an old and a scarcely workable ground of enhancement, namely, a rise in the value of the produce, a much more simple ground, namely, a rise in the prices of staple food-crops. The latter contention would in any case be more easily susceptible of proof. But the Bill further simplifies the burden of proof, by directing that the Courts shall be guided by certain lists of prices to be published in the official Gazette. These lists are to be of two kinds; one set of lists are to record current prices in the future, the other set refer to prices in the past. A new and sharp weapon of enhancement is thus placed in the hands of the landlord; but, subject to conditions on its application imposed by the Bill in favour of the tenants, I believe it to be a fair ground of enhancement. The weapon is two-edged; it cuts against the tenant as a means of enhancement if prices have gone up, and against the landlord as a ground for the reduction of rent if prices have gone down. It is obvious, however, that as the Bill entrusts the Local Government with the duty of supplying the evidence, it should take reasonable guarantees that the evidence thus supplied shall be good evidence. The draft Bill of last year provided that all the price lists officially published, should be conclusive evidence. The Bill as now finally settled directs that the Courts shall presume that the facts stated in the lists are correct unless and until it is proved that they are incorrect; thus giving the value of presumptive evidence to both the sets of lists.

I believe that the lists to be prepared for current prices in the future, under the safeguards provided by the Bill, will merit this degree of credibility: but that the lists, purporting to record prices in the past, do not. This latter class of lists will have to be compiled, ex post facto, for a period running back ten or fifteen years, from certain price-lists which were collected at a time when adequate safeguards were not taken to secure their accuracy, and when the effective safeguards now provided by the Bill for future price-lists were not thought of. At the period of their collection, moreover, it was never contemplated to give to them the value of conclusive or presumptive evidence in the Courts. I have examined some of the old lists. I do not think that they afford a safe basis for a recompilation which should be accepted by the Courts either as conclusive or presumptive evidence of prices in the past. They are valuable concurrent evidence, taken together with the evidence to be derived from the business books of grain-merchants, zamíndárs, and dealers in export produce. I do not think that lists to be mainly compiled from them should now have a greater weight than the original lists would have had under the Evidence Act. I propose, therefore, to move an amendment which will have the effect of leaving the value of presumptive evidence to the lists prepared for current prices in future, but withdrawing that value from the lists to be compiled for prices in the past.

In the fourth place, while not dissenting from the powers granted by section 112 to the Local Government, in certain exceptional circumstances, to reduce rents, I wish to place on record the hesitation with which I have agreed to that provision. The exceptional circumstances contemplated are when the Government has to intervene between landlord and tenant, "in the interests of public order or of the local welfare." On the one hand, the experience of the past, and the statements which have been made in regard to the future, seem to render it expedient that this power should, under due safeguards, be accorded to the Local Government. The Bill, in requiring that the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council must be obtained, provides due safeguards. On the other hand, I do not think that a general disruption of contracts between landlord and tenant, such as is involved by a reduction of rents on a large scale, should be effected by any authority of a less deliberative character than the Legislature itself. If, therefore, it ever becomes necessary to apply this clause to a considerable area, I hope that the process will be conducted under, or receive effect from, an express Act. It is in this hope that I have agreed to the provision in the present Bill.

I have thought it my duty to place on record objections to specific provisions of the Bill, and to mention in general terms my uncertainty in regard to several important classes of rights with which it deals. I ought, therefore, to state clearly that I believe the Bill, taken as a whole, makes substantial improvements on the existing law, and that, where it alters that law, the changes are, with certain exceptions, expedient and just.

W. W. HUNTER.

Dissent.

I DISSENT from this Report, because I am not satisfied that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, affords that effectual protection to the raiyat which the measure, as introduced into the Council, was intended to give. What the nature of that protection was, and on what grounds it was thought necessary, can readily be learnt from the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and from the speech delivered in Council on the 2nd March, 1883, by the Hon'ble Member who introduced the Bill. It was the intention of the Bill to secure to the occupancy-raiyat fixity of tenure, fair rent and free sale. The Bill accordingly declared, first, that every settled raiyat should have a right of occupancy throughout the village or estate in which he held land at the date of the introduction of the Bill; secondly, that his rent should never exceed one-fifth of the value of the gross produce of the land in staple crops; thirdly, that he might transfer his holding at his pleasure, subject to a right of pre-emption on the part of the landlord, and that the landlord's purchase of the holding should not extinguish the occupancy-right, but that the right should revive as soon as the land was let to another tenant. The interests of the non-occupancy-raiyat were not less carefully guarded. "Tenants of this class", said the Hon'ble Member who introduced the Bill, "should not be exposed to arbitrary rack-renting and eviction at the hands of their landlords, and the acquisition by them of the status of settled raiyats should be facilitated in every possible way." The Hon'ble Member quoted with approval a remark made by Sir Ashley Eden, that "no raiyat should be evicted from his fields on any ground save persistent failure to pay a fair and reasonable rent". In accordance with these principles, the Bill prescribed a maximum limit of rent for the non-occupancy-raiyat; it did not allow him to be ejected on the ground that the term of his lease had expired; and it provided that, if he were ejected for refusing to agree to an enhancement demanded by the landlord, he should be entitled to receive compensation for disturbance.

Such was the Bill which was introduced into the Council, and which was referred to the Select Committee. It was drawn with a full recognition of the character and the gravity of the evils which it was designed to remedy. "What we hope for" (said the Hon'ble Member who introduced the Bill) "is, first, that a stop may be put to the vigorous efforts which are at present being made by landlords in some parts of the country to withdraw land from the operation of the occupancy-right by preventing the natural growth of a fresh occupancy-right in the place of an old right which has determined; and secondly, that where occupancy-rights do, as a matter of fact, exist, the proof of their existence may be a matter of less difficulty than it is at present to the ignorant and helpless raiyat". In speaking of the necessity for legislation, and of the kind of legislation required, the Hon'ble Member re-produced a striking passage from the Report of the Famine Commission. "We have received" (the Famine Commissioners wrote) "a large amount of evidence, remarkable in its weight and unanimity, to the effect that in the Bengal Province the relations of landlord and tenant are in a specially unsatisfactory condition. We feel no doubt that the condition of the rent-law and the way in which it is administered in Bengal are a very grave hindrance to its agricultural prosperity, and that large portions of the agricultural population remain, owing mainly to this cause, at all times dangerously near to actual destitution, and unable to resist the additional strain of famine. We can feel no doubt that in all the provinces of Northern India, and particularly in Bengal, it is the duty of the Government to make the provisions of the law more effectual for the protection of the cultivators' rights. * * * * It is only under such tenures as convey permanency of holding, protection from arbitrary enhancement of rent and security for improvements, that we can expect to see property accumulated, credit grow up, and improvements effected in the system of cultivation. There could be no greater misfortune to the country than that the numbers of the occupancy-class should decrease, and that such tenants should be merged in the crowd of rack-rented tenants-at-will, who, owning no permanent connection with the land, have no incentive to thrift or to improvement. It is desirable for all parties that measures should be framed to secure the consolidation of occupancy-rights, the enlargement of the numbers of those who hold under secure tenures, and the widening the limits of that security, together with the protection of the tenant-at-will in his just rights, and the strengthening of his position by any measure that may seem wise and equitable."

These, I repeat, were the principles upon which the Bill was based, and these objects would have been effectually secured by the Bill as originally introduced into Council. In the amended Bill, fixity of tenure is weakened by the limitation of the definition of a settled raiyat to the village alone; fair rent is deprived of the safeguard (the only ultimate safeguard) of a maximum limit beyond which rent can never be enhanced; and free sale has disappeared altogether from the Bill, or survives only in a section which saves customary rights. The non-occupancy-raiyat has fared even worse, at the hands of the Select Committee, than his occupancy brother. The gross produce limit of his rent is struck out; he is declared liable to ejectment on the ground that the term of his lease has expired; if he refuses to agree to any enhancement demanded of him, he cannot claim a judicial rent for a longer period than five years; and he may be ejected at any time before he has acquired a right of occupancy without obtaining any compensation for disturbance.

It will possibly be said that these alterations, sweeping as they may seem to be, are counterbalanced by other changes which have been made in the Bill, and that, when the account on both sides is fairly summed up, it will be seen that the objects of the original measure have substantially been attained. Let us consider how far this is the case as regards each of the two great classes of raiyats, and, first, as regards the occupancy-raiyat.

It must be admitted that transferability, or the right of free sale, is not an essential provision of the Bill. I believe that (in Bengal at any rate) it might usefully and safely have been conceded; but there were arguments in favour of a different conclusion, and it was open to the Select Committee to decide that transferability would not have the effect of either strengthening or extending the occupancy-right. I do not therefore desire to lay any stress on the abandonment of this provision.

With regard to fixity of tenure, the elimination of "the estate" from the definition of the settled raiyat is, I think, much to be regretted. If no middle course could be found, the Committee had to decide between a definition which might, in a few exceptional cases, entail a slight hardship on the landlord, and a definition which could easily be worked so as to produce, in a multitude of cases, a grievous wrong to the tenant. On this point the decision of the Committee was, in my opinion, a lamentable mistake. At the same time I admit that, as regards fixity of tenure, the position of the occupancy-raiyat is somewhat stronger under the amended Bill than under the present law, and that this object of the Bill has been partially, though still imperfectly, attained.

Fixity of tenure, however, without fair rent is worse than useless, and in the matter of fair rent the Bill signally fails to afford the occupancy-raiyat reasonable protection. He is protected, under the existing law, by the fact that the enhancement provisions of the Act now in force have proved to be unworkable. Such a condition of things is a public scandal, and the Select Committee rightly resolved that just claims to enhancement should no longer be baffled by the uncertain wording or the complicated conditions of the law. But the Committee seem to have overlooked the danger of enlarging the facilities for the use of the enhancement sections without also taking precautions to guard against the abuse of them. The Bill puts enormous powers of enhancement into the hands of the landlords. The sections relating to enhancement on the ground of the prevailing rate have been re-cast in a form which will practically allow the landlord to raise the rent of every raiyat in the village to the highest rate which he can persuade or compel any one to pay. In suing for enhancement on the ground of a rise in prices, the landlord will find the evidence, which it has hitherto been impossible for him to adduce, provided by Government ready to his hands. He will have nothing to do but to lay before the Court the official price-lists, and a decree in his favour will follow as a matter of course.

The feeble palliatives which the Bill provides are impotent to restrain the evils which the working of the enhancement sections is calculated to produce. It is declared that no enhancement shall be decreed in excess of what is fair and equitable; that the rent of a raiyat shall not be enhanced at intervals of less than 15 years; and that, in extreme cases, the Government of India may interpose, and may depute an officer, not, as usual, to enhance rents, but to reduce them. The first of these provisions may occasionally be of use in tempering the rigour of the law, but it is of too vague and indeterminate a character to afford any adequate protection. The second will make the pauperizing process more gradual, but not less certain or complete. And what shall we say of the third? Where is the wisdom of enacting a law the natural operation of which may produce a state of things which will require the law to be not merely suspended, but reversed? But in truth what is most to be feared is not such outrageous oppression as would call for the interposition of Government under this special provision of the Bill. What is most to be feared is that the gradual and steady operation of the enhancement sections will be a permanent bar to all improvement in the condition of the occupancy-raiyats. They will have no inducement to raise larger crops or to cultivate more valuable products, for they would be toiling for the benefit, not of themselves, but of their landlords. The machinery of this Bill they can neither resist nor evade.

These evil consequences would have been avoided, if the Select Committee had accepted two of the recommendations of the Government of Bengal. That Government desired, first, to restrict enhancement on the ground of the prevailing rate to those individual cases which it was originally intended to meet, and secondly, to prescribe an absolute limit beyond which no claims to enhancement should be allowed. The Government of Bengal saw that, if the landlord's demand were restricted to one-fifth of the gross produce in staple crops, rack-renting would be effectually stopped, the cultivation of the more valuable crops would be encouraged, and the agricultural advance of the country would be ensured. Unhappily, these views were not accepted by the majority of the Select Committee, and the amended Bill leaves the occupancy-raiyat without any adequate security in the matter of fair rent.

With respect to the non-occupancy-raiyat, the original Bill was designed to protect him against unreasonable exactions, and to facilitate his acquisition of the right of occupancy. I have shown what stress was laid on these objects, and especially on the second of these objects, by the Famine Commissioners and by the Hon'ble Member who introduced the Bill. It is therefore somewhat remarkable that the amended Bill leaves the non-occupancy-raiyat entirely at the mercy of his landlord as regards his rent. When first admitted to occupation he must pay such rent as may be agreed upon between himself and his landlord. It is true that, if he is afterwards called upon to agree to an enhancement, he may demand a judicial rent for a term of five years. But this provision will be inoperative, for the raiyat will be aware that, unless he comes to terms with his landlord in the matter of rent, the landlord will not formally demand an enhancement, but will sue to have him ejected. Those who know the peasantry of Bengal know that a raiyat will agree to pay any rent rather than face the alternative of ejectment from his holding. The provisions of Chapter VI of the Bill will therefore enable the landlord to exact from the non-occupancy-raiyat the highest rent which the land can possibly bear, a rent which will leave the tenant nothing more than a bare subsistence: and the demand of enhancement may be repeated year after year.

It is remarkable, as I have observed, that the amended Bill affords the non-occupancy-raiyat no protection as regards his rent. But it is still more remarkable that it does nothing to facilitate his acquisition of the right of occupancy. It provides, it is true, that he shall not contract himself out of the power to acquire the right. But this stipulation is useless so long as the Bill affords a simple and effectual means of ensuring that the right shall never accrue. The right can be acquired only by 12 years' continuous occupation of village-land. The Bill leaves it in the power of the landlord to rack-rent the non-occupancy-raiyat during eleven years, to evict him in the twelfth, and then to re-admit him and begin the process again. In the populous parts of the country, the raiyat, who cannot live without the land, will have no resource but to submit.

Can it be alleged that such provisions as these redeem the pledges made when the Bill was introduced, or place the non-occupancy-raiyat in the position which he may equitably claim to hold? What was his status under the Regulations of 1793—the contract to which the landlords and their advocates so continually appeal? He was entitled (as Mr. Justice O'Kinealy has shown) to hold at the customary rate, and was not liable to eviction, except for non-payment of rent. What is his status under this Bill? He is a mere tenant-at-will, with absolutely no rights beyond those which his landlord may be pleased to allow him. It may not be possible to revert at the present day to the conditions of 1793, but at least it is reasonable to ask that the legislation of 1885 shall not place the non occupancy-raiyat in a worse position than he held in 1859.

I cannot admit that there is any force in the plea that the landlords, as a body, are not likely to strain to the utmost the powers given them by the Bill. The legislature is not justified in putting one class of men at the mercy of another class, on the chance that the latter will use their irresponsible power with moderation. And I must add that I feel no assurance that, as regards the accrual of the occupancy-right, these powers will be moderately used. I have already quoted the words in which the Hon'ble Member who introduced the Bill referred to "the vigorous efforts now being made by landlords to prevent the natural growth of occupancy-rights". There is overwhelming evidence before the Council to show that this feeling among the landlord class is widely spread and deeply seated. I apprehend that landlords will not fail to use largely the opportunities which this Bill will give them. They will not merely prevent the growth of the right over lands now held by non-occupancy-raiyats, but, as occupancy-holdings from time to time fall into their hands by death, abandonment or surrender, they will treat the new tenants of these holdings in the same manner. "There could be no greater misfortune to the country", said the Famine Commissioners, in a passage which I have already quoted, "than that the numbers of the occupancy-class should decrease". The provisions of the amended Bill seem to me to threaten the country with this misfortune.

For these reasons I am unable to assent to the Report, or to regard the Bill, in the form which it has now assumed, as an adequate and final settlement of the questions raised in this great controversy. If the Bill is to be accepted, it must, I think, be accepted only as an instalment of the legislation necessary to place the relations of landlord and tenant in these Provinces on a secure and satisfactory basis.

H. J. REYNOLDS.

Minute of Dissent.

The present rent law has been in operation for the last 25 years. One would have thought that legislation which aimed at an amendment of that law would be directed to such defects and objectionable provisions in it as judicial administration during this long period had brought to prominent notice. But this is far from the actual state of things. Upon one point, indeed, there was a consensus of opinion. The Government and the zamíndárs alike were agreed that the present procedure for the recovery of rent was lamentably defective. So acutely did the Government feel the difficulty that they caused special enactments to be passed by the Local Council for securing for themselves a summary procedure for the recovery and settlement of rent in their own estates, while the zamíndárs were left to follow the procedure which Government in their own case were compelled to abandon. When, again, the obligation of collecting the road and public works cesses was imposed upon the landholders, distinct promises were made to them that they should obtain statutory facilities for the recovery of rent by suit in Court. And when two Bills were introduced for the purpose in the Local Council (and neither of them was carried through) it was observed by the President from his place in the Local Council that "only the procedure sections (those for the more effective realisation of rents) should be proceeded with." So far, therefore, the very facts, which point to legislative action clearly show that there was no necessity for a substantive amendment of the Rent Law. There was besides the unwarrantable Proclamation issued by Sir George Campbell in 1872, setting forth that "it is perfectly lawful to unite in a peaceable manner to resist any excessive demands of the zamíndárs; but it is not lawful to unite to use violence and intimidation." For, the Pubna disturbances which occurred about this time, and the significant declaration of the raiyats that they had become the direct tenants of Her Majesty showed not that they were rising in arms against a Government which they meant to condemn as unmindful of their requirements, but that they considered themselves powerful for the assistance they had secured and that they were possessed of the upper hand over their landlords to whom they were liable for arrears of rent. In fact, before the Report and draft Bill of the Rent Commission were published in July 1880, no complaint was made on behalf of the raiyats about the harsh operation of any of the sections of the law and no suggestion for a revision of its fundamental principles emanated from any judicial officer. On the contrary, Sir Barnes Peacock had expressed as his decided opinion that the occupancy section was operating unjustly against the legitimate interests of the landholders and that it should be abolished. And it would be extraordinary to treat Sir Barnes Peacock's recommendation or the Government promise of a summary procedure for the recovery of rent as evidence of necessity or justification of a Bill like the one before Council which, in our opinion, makes serious inroads upon the ancient rights and privileges of the landholders. The draft Bill of the Rent Commission was based almost wholly upon theory and speculation, and its many innovations have only been shown up but never proved justifiable in the different stages through which it has since passed. In the meetings of the Select Committee, on which we had the honor to sit, the authority of the Rent Commission was invoked in support of several of the provisions of the revised Bill; in some cases the opinions of the Bengal Government contained in their letter of the 15th of September last was appealed to; in some the opinions submitted by public officers on the requisition of the Bengal Government were pressed into service; and in others again, it was advanced that it would be unwise to disturb the resolutions passed by the Committee last year. Authority ranging under one or other of these heads was no doubt forthcoming in support of the different sections of the revised Bill, but we do not see how this could be convincing to the Legislature in the absence of evidence duly tested by cross-examination by the members of the Select Committee. The advantages of cross-examination are sufficiently well-known and it would certainly be no disrespect to the most talented person or the best qualified expert if a man of inferior ability sought from his place in the Supreme Legislative Council of the country to satisfy himself by such orderly enquiries as happened to suggest themselves to him. And until such opportunity is offered to the most junior member of the Council, its deliberations must remain very unsatisfactory to itself and to the outside public. The private opinions of even judicial officers, when not confined to experiences of the actual operation of particular sections of the law, do not possess much value, and it would be dangerous to introduce new provisions in a difficult branch of the law on the basis of untested opinions of subordinate officers. When a learned judge of the High Court reads the Regulations to mean that "no lease was valid till it had been submitted to, and approved by, the Revenue Authorities;" and when another learned Judge of the High Court adduces the passage in Regulation 11 of 1793, viz., "the property in the soil was never before formally declared to be vested in the landholders" as "conclusive on the point that the soil was not the property of the zamíndárs," we believe no apology is needed for our not placing implicit faith in the extra-judicial opinions of distinguished officers of Government. As regards the condition of the people and the necessity of radical changes in the law, in other words, the policy of the measure, if high officers of State, judicial and executive, may speak with any authority, it is no small accession of strength to those who are opposed to the main principles of the Bill to be able to say that a majority of Divisional Commissioners and not a few District Judges, share in their views.

Justice Cunningham's Minute, paragraph 16.

Justice O'Kinealy's Minute, paragraph 4.

But these opinions and the opinions of experienced Subordinate Judges on the operation of the different provisions of the present law have in many cases been undervalued by the majority of the Select Committee and consideration shown for the opinions of much less experienced officers upon a perfectly unsupportable estimate of personal weight. We shall have occasion further on to refer to some of these opinions. As regards the general features of the Bill it appears to us that vested rights of landholders have been interfered with without the sanction either of juridical principles or the formally declared authority of the Executive Council; that rights have been created in favor of one class of subjects and at the uncompensated cost of another class which, to say the least, are of dubious benefit to the country at large, and looking to the large question of growth of population and famine difficulties the changes are simply calculated to augment, rather than relieve, the pressure on Government. The changes proposed to be introduced by the Bill will have the further effect of making, in opposition to well-established principles of Government the judicial administration subordinate to the Executive authorities in many respects. And lastly, the changes alluded to are sure to bring about such an extent of litigation and uncertainty in dealings out of Court, that we shudder to think of the subject barely as inhabitants of the country and apart from our interests as landholders and from our feelings as the representatives of the landholders of Bengal and Behar. By a consensus of opinion, official and non-official, the result of the operation of the present law has been to place the whole body of raiyats in a condition of prosperity superior to what they previously enjoyed, and to what is enjoyed by the corresponding classes of people in any the smallest corner of this immense continent of British India. There would be no objection to that condition being made still better if it could be done without interfering with the welfare of the other classes. But we strongly believe that far from benefiting the tenantry the measure, in its present shape, if put in operation, will effect their ruin as a class, or in any case of the honester and poorer portion of them, by endless and harassing litigation. The very discussion of the measure upon the lines disclosed in the Bill is fraught with dangerous consequences upon the rural economy of the country and the firm social relations between class and class of the subject community, and between all classes and the Government at the head. We shall now proceed to examine some of the objectionable provisions of the Bill in detail.

Section 5 (5)—The rule that whenever the area of a holding exceeds one hundred bíghás, the raiyat shall be presumed to be a tenure-holder, is arbitrary and opposed to fact. There are many districts in which holdings, each exceeding a hundred bíghás, are not uncommon, but the tenants thereof are raiyats all the same. As no written engagements are usually exchanged, landholders will find great difficulty in rebutting the presumption which this clause will raise, while on the other hand the divisions and sub-divisions created by Hindu and Muhammadan rules of succession will ere long present the spectacle of tenures comprising of only 20 or 30 bíghás of land cultivated by the holders thereof.

Sections 8 and 56.—The power given to the Court to direct in the case both of tenure-holders and raiyats, that the enhancement of rent shall be gradual, is novel. As the enhanced rent represents what the landlord is entitled to get, and what the Court considers to be fair and equitable under the circumstances of the case, the provision in question is wholly indefensible. Lord Bramwell truly observed with reference to this provision.—"Now what consideration would influence the Court; I do not know whether if the tenant had got half a dozen children it would be a hardship upon him to have his rent suddenly enhanced I do not know. We do not see how that can be taken into account, indeed, what could be taken into account really under such a clause as that.

Sections 9 and 37.—The change of the minimum period from 10 to 15 years for which an enhanced rent should obtain currency, is equally arbitrary. Both in the draft Bill of the Rent Commission and the Bill introduced into the Council, the period was 10 years. Although landholders are lawfully entitled to claim enhancement whenever there is a rise in the value of produce and consequent depreciation of the exchange value of money, the limitation of 10 years would be an effectual check to oppressive repetitions of claims for enhancement, but considering the strides the country is daily making in material progress the extension of the period is wholly unwarrantable.

Section 18.—The provision to extend to a raiyat holding at a rent or rate of rent fixed in perpetuity the same rights of transfer and succession that belong to a tenure-holder is wrong in principle. The same considerations which have induced the committee to expunge the sections regarding free sale of occupancy-rights hold good in the case of these raiyats as forcibly as in the case of other occupancy-raiyats. The landholder's objections to a free sale no less than economic considerations in the interests of the raiyats do not lose a particle of their force, whether the raiyat is protected from enhancement or he is liable to pay a fair and equitable rent. The practical operation of the section would, moreover, be productive of the greatest confusion. Every raiyat will claim to hold at a rent or rate of rent fixed in perpetuity, as by so doing he would not only secure to himself a right of free sale, but also protect himself from the conclusion that his rent is liable to enhancement. It would be suicidal on his part to behave himself otherwise than as a raiyat contemplated by this section and thus without any struggle with his landlord to confess himself a raiyat whose rent is liable to enhancement. But what is the Registering Officer, the Court and the Collector to do when a raiyat applies under Chapter III for the registration of a transfer of his holding? Is the Registering Officer or the Collector to enquire and decide in every such case whether the holding is protected from enhancement, or is he to exercise an arbitrary discretion in the matter? Again, is the section to apply to a raiyat who holds at a rent or rate of rent fixed in perpetuity, but whose rent has nevertheless been enhanced by reason of improvements made by his landlord or by reason of his having been found in possession of more land than what he pays rent for? The difficulty would, to a certain extent, be remedied if it were provided, that the provisions of Chapter III should be made applicable only to those raiyats whose rents are protected from enhancement by a registered lease or judicially declared title.

Section 20 (5).—This sub-section provides that for one year after a man has ceased to hold any land as a raiyat in a village he shall continue to be a settled raiyat in that village. This is wholly anomalous. A man cannot have ceased to be a raiyat and still continue to be a raiyat at one and the same time. The provision contained in Section 87 in respect of apparent and not actual abandonment would be a sufficient protection to the raiyat in cases contemplated by this sub-section which involves a contradiction in terms.

Section 20, Sub-section 7.—The rule of presumption created by this sub-section is a downright perversion of the law of evidence. Nothing is more easy for a raiyat who has held land for 12 years than to prove his possession by the production of his rent-receipts. It is not altogether an easy matter for the landholder to prove the negative. Even supposing that there has been no change of hands in the proprietary title, a landholder would be unable to prove his papers if within 12 years there have been changes, as there frequently are, by deaths, dismissal and otherwise, in his collecting agency. The difficulty would be unsurmountable in the case of auction-purchasers who would have no means whatever at their disposal for rebutting the presumption.

Section 21.—The provision contained in sub-section 1, to the effect that a settled raiyat shall have a right of occupancy in all land for the time being held by him cannot be supported on any considerations which justify the accrual of a right of occupancy. It is no reason that because a man has a right of occupancy in a certain plot of land that the right should extend by possession for a single day to every plot of land that might be let to him. This is directly opposed to the Despatch of the Secretary of State. It is, moreover, a provision which will act injuriously on the settled raiyats themselves. They will hardly get new lands for cultivation which landholders will take care to let to non-occupancy raiyats and strangers with a view to prevent the accrual of a right of occupancy.

Section 21 (2).—The effect of the operation of sub-section (2) would be to give a raiyat a right of occupancy in land which he has held "at any time between the 2nd day of March, 1883, and the commencement of this Act," although such land might have passed to the possession of the landholder or another raiyat by abandonment, surrender or transfer at some time within that period. Nothing could be a more fruitful source of litigation.

Section 22, Sub-section 1.—This sub-section introduces the doctrine of merger in a matter relating to landlord and tenant not for the purpose of preventing in the spirit of the Ruling reported in 10 Indian Law Reports, Calcutta 45, the acquisition of a right within a superior right, but for the purpose of merging an existing right in the superior right. For reasons explained by Sir Barnes Peacock in a case reported in 10 W. R. 15, this is quite opposed to the system of land-tenures and the condition of the country. The provision is the more objectionable as it saves the right of third parties in the land. The landholder would, therefore, get the land which comes to his possession by purchase, ejectment, abandonment or surrender subject to all the encumbrances created by the out-going tenant. Provisions have been made, it is true, in subsequent sections for defining what would be deemed to be valid encumbrances in different cases, but the language of this sub-section is absolute.

Section 25.—As the provision for a free-sale of occupancy-holdings has been abandoned, this section should provide for ejectment for non-payment of rent. A sale of the holding at the instance of the landholder in execution of a decree for rent would, in every case, heap upon the raiyat additional costs which the sale proceeds might not cover and would thus entail loss both upon the landholder and the raiyat. Ejectment would be a simple and effective remedy to the landholder, while the raiyat would always be able to prevent it whenever his holding is worth more than the amount of the decree.

Section 29 (1).—It might well be taken as an established fact that the price of produce has quadrupled since 1793, and at least doubled within the last 30 years. The productiveness of land has also increased immensely. The restriction which this section imposes upon enhancement by contract to 2 annas in the rupee is therefore most arbitrary. The rule involves a serious infringement of the rights of landholders. The right which the Government of India, when introducing the Bill, assumed it possessed of determining the rates of rent payable by raiyats to their landlord has, I venture to think, been found to be non-existent. A close examination of it will show it to be wholly unfounded. The question, it is well known, engaged the attention of a Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1832, and the conclusion to which they came after a searching enquiry can hardly be ignored at the present moment. They observed—"unless the Government should either, by public or private purchase acquire the zamíndáry tenure, it would under the existing Regulations be deemed a breach of faith, without the consent of the zamíndárs to interfere directly between the zamíndár and the raiyat for the purpose of fixing the amount of land tax demandable from the latter under the settlemet of 1792-93." The proposed restriction is, however, altogether uncalled for by the circumstances of the country. No evidence whatever has been adduced to show that the raiyats in any parts of these Provinces are rackrented; all the evidence on the contrary goes to show that landholders have been extremely moderate and forbearing in the matter of settlement of rent with their raiyats. The ratio which rent bore to the value of annual produce at the time of the Permanent Settlement varied according to Sir John Shore from ½ to ⅞ths, and although the landholders were clearly entitled to get from time to time such enhanced rents as represented the changed value of money according to that ratio, it is an undisputed fact that the ratio which rent bears to the annual value of produce at the present day ranges in different parts of these Provinces from $\frac{1}{10}$ to ⅔ths. Apart therefore from the question of legal rights the restriction in question is a great injustice to the landholders. The effect of the rule on the economic condition of the country would be an unmixed evil. The experience of every country has confirmed Arthur Young's observation that low rents always act as a damper upon industry and ultimately tells seriously upon the condition of agriculture and the prosperity of the cultivating class. The restriction in question will no doubt be felt by the raiyats as a benefit for a few years but ere long the profits of the holdings will give rise to a large class of under-raiyats, increase sub-infeudation to an alarming extent, and thus make a definite area of land feed two, perhaps, three families of raiyats in the place of the one that it is now feeding. In these Provinces where, according to the figures given in Dr. Hunter's Statistical Accounts, more than one-fourth of the average cultivable area is still uncultivated, not one of the least deplorable consequences of such a state of things would be to check the extension of cultivation and the progress of emigration. The question presents another aspect. Would this legislative embargo effectively control the law of demand and supply? Can the legislature force the principles of political economy to bow to its dicta? If a raiyat and his landlord agree between themselves as to the extent to which the rent should be enhanced, ways and means would not be wanting to give their agreement the form of a binding contract. After the terms have been agreed upon the landholder may sue the raiyat for enhancement at a certain figure and the raiyat may confess judgment in Court, or the raiyat may give the zamindár's as salami the capitalized value of the increase in excess of the enhancement allowed by law. The parties may have recourse to other shifts and devices to defeat the law. But perhaps the history of the provision is its strongest condemnation. The draft Bill (section 71) of the Rent Commission provided that there should be no limit to enhancement by contract. That provision was maintained in the draft Bill (section 63) of the Bengal Government, and also in the draft Bill (section 63) which was sent up to the Secretary of State in Council. It was the Bill which was sent up to the Secretary of State in Council. It was the Bill which was introduced in Council in March 1883, which for the first time provided (section 59 (2) that the increased rent should not exceed 6 annas in the rupee. The Select Committee in the course of deliberations last year reduced the limit to 4 annas in the rupee (section 41). At a meeting of the Select Committee, held on the 8th ultimo, a motion was made on the part of the Bengal Government to reduce the maximum limit to 2 annas in the rupee, but it was not supported by a single member, and it was therefore not carried. The motion was renewed on a subsequent date in connection with the question of a maximum limit to enhancement by suit in Court and carried by a majority. It should be further observed that the extension of the minimum time from 10 to 15 years during which the enhanced rent should obtain currency, was for the first time made by the Select Committee last year; the draft Bill of the Rent Commission, the draft Bill of the Bengal Government, the draft Bill of the Government of India, and also the Bill which was introduced in Council in 1883, all fixed the minimum period at 10 years. The objections to this limit which we have mentioned with reference to tenures apply with double force in the case of raiyati holdings.

Section 29 (2).—This sub-section contemplates an exercise of powers by the registering officer which is likely to do the raiyat more harm than good. Registering officers are not expected to exercise judicial powers, and yet in the face of his opinion under this sub-section, it would be difficult for a raiyat to prove in the Civil Court that he was not at the time in a sound state of mind, or that he was not competent by reason of his minority or other disability to enter into the contract.

Section 30 (b).—The alterations made by this section in the grounds on which a suit for enhancement of rent may be instituted would deprive landholders of enhancement which is justly due and at the same time introduce unnecessary complications in the law to the injury both of the landholder and of the raiyat. There will be no enhancement on the ground of a rise in price unless the rise is in respect of the price of the staple food-crops. By section 39 (7) the local Government has to determine what shall be deemed to be staple food-crops in these provinces, and it appears from a letter written by the Revenue Secretary to the Government of Bengal to the Secretary of the British Indian Association, dated the 23rd February 1884, that "the Lieutenant-Governor would probably declare to be staples the two food-grain crops (apparently rice and wheat) which appear * * to be most largely produced in each district." The effect of this alteration would be very harmful. The landholder would get no enhancement for a large rise in the price of jute, sugarcane, or potato, if there has been no rise in the price of rice; while on the other hand a raiyat cultivating simply jute, sugarcane, potatoes or pulses would have to pay not only enhanced rent to his landlord but also to spend more money for his living if the price of rice has risen although the price of these other crops has fallen or remained stationary. It is easy to see that in some cases the operation of this section would be disastrous to the raiyats.

Section 30 (c & d).—The alteration made in the ground of enhancement relating to increase of the productive powers of the land is equally objectionable. These clauses provide for enhancement when the increase is due either to improvements effected by the landlord, or by fluvial action; but there are other causes of improvement for which the landlord is undoubtedly entitled to get enhancement of rent. Where, for instance, a change in the course of a river, a new railway, a new public road or a new Government embankment frees land from periodical inundations or from frequent trespasses by cattle or wild animals, any rule which deprives the landlord of his share of the benefit of the improvement militates against the very principle on which enhancement on the ground of improvement of the land is based. The alteration in this ground of enhancement has necessitated the introduction of a number of sections about landlords' improvements, and enquiries into the same and registration thereof which might well have been omitted.

Section 31 (a).—There is no justification for the rule contained in this clause to the effect that a landholder, claiming enhancement on the ground that the rent paid by a raiyat is below the prevailing rate should prove the rates of rent paid during a period of not less than 3 years. If the majority of the raiyats of a village have agreed to pay a certain rate of rent and paid that rent by reason of a rise in the price of produce or improvement of the land, why should the landholder have to wait for 3 years before he could sue the remaining dozen or score of raiyats for enhancement of rent at that rate? If these raiyats have any grounds entitling them to continue to hold at a lower rate of rent they may prove such ground as well at the time as 3 years after.

Section 32 (a).—Enhancement of rent on the ground of a rise in price of produce would be more visionary than real if, in addition to the other limitations, the restrictions contained in this section are allowed to stand. The Court is required to ascertain the price by comparing the average prices during the 10 years' immediately preceding the date of suit. An average of such a long period will necessarily reduce the rate of enhanced rent and deprive the landholder of his proper dues. It would be enough, for the purpose of determining whether a rise in price is merely casual or steady if the average of 3 years is taken. In connection with this matter it is noticeable that section 38, which provides for reduction of rent on the ground of a fall in the price of produce does not contain the rule to which I object. In all fairness, the rule of procedure should be the same in both cases, but from the way in which section 38 is worded there is nothing to prevent the Court from decreeing reduction of rent on the basis of an average of 2 or 3 years

Section 32 (b).—The restriction to enhancement contained in this clause is based on a wrong assumption of facts and on false reasoning. The clause provides that, for the purpose of determining the enhanced rent according to the rule of proportion, the average price should be reduced by ¼rd of the excess, that fraction representing the increased cost of cultivation. The portion of the Report of the Bengal Government (segment 44), on the basis of which the rule has been introduced, proceeds on wholly erroneous data from beginning to end. Enhancement by the rule of proportion as contained in the first part of this clause involves three different contingencies as regards the costs of cultivation. The costs of cultivation (1) might have increased in the same ratio as the price of produce; (2) they might have increased in a less ratio; (3) they might have increased in a greater ratio. If these costs be taken into consideration the result, by the rule of proportion, would be wholly unaffected in the first case; the landholder would be entitled to get more in the second case in the shape of enhanced rent than he would otherwise get, and it is only in the third case that the raiyat would be entitled to a reduction in the enhanced rent. But where is the evidence to show that the costs of collection have increased in a greater ratio than the price of produce? The statement made by some of the officers to the effect that the costs have increased goes for nothing, as they may have increased in the same or in a less ratio than the price of produce. To illustrate our meaning we shall take a hypothetical case. Let the value of the annual produce of a bígáh of land be Rs. 8, of which Rs. 3 represents the costs of cultivation. Rs. 3 the rent and Rs. 2 the profit of the raiyat, and let the rise, as assumed by the Bengal Government for purposes of illustration, be 25 per cent. in prices, so that the value of the annual produce has become Rs. 10. Then, under the simple rule of proportion, the enhanced rent would be Rs. 3-12, the profit of the raiyat under the rule of proportion would be Rs. 2-8, and the balance Rs. 3-12 would represent the costs of cultivation. The rule of proportion, therefore, assumes that the costs of cultivation have risen in the same proportion as the price of produce—an assumption which in a majority of cases is far more favorable to the raiyat than to the landholder. It is this which induced the learned Judges in Thakurany Dasi's case to hold that the cost of cultivation should not be taken into calculation in working the rule of proportion. The report of the Bengal Government states: "Thus if prices rise 25 per cent. they would increase the rent 12½ per cent., and allow the other 12½ per cent. to go as an allowance for increase in costs of production." It is easy to see that this is both arithmetically and logically erroneous. If 12½ per cent. be allowed for costs of cultivation out of the landholder's share, the actual allowance for such costs would be 37½ per cent.

Section 33 (a).—The necessity of registering landlord's improvements created by this section would involve an amount of expensive enquiry which few landholders will care to invite, and the result will, therefore, be to deprive them of enhanced rents to which they are fairly entitled.

Section 54 (b).—Where land is washed away or covered with sand, it is the landlord who suffers. A portion of the land on which lay the security for his revenue is gone. The raiyats who held the land would be welcome to cultivate other plots of lands, but the loss to the landholder is irretrievable. As some compensation for such cases, might not they reasonably ask that they should be allowed the whole benefit of improvements in land caused by natural causes?

Section 38 (b).—The same rule of procedure as regards the determination of average prices should hold good both in cases of enhancement and reduction of rent. If it be an average of 10 years in the one case let it be the same also in the other.

Section 40.—Few provisions in the Bill will do more harm to the Behar landholders than the provision contained in this section for the commutation of produce rent into money rent on the application of the raiyat. The institution of payment in kind is one eminently deserving of every encouragement at the hands of the legislature. A Government settlement-officer has rightly observed: "It gives the landlord a fair profit in any improvement he may make; the rents are self-adjusting; the tenant is not driven into debt to meet a fixed demand; if he borrows, he borrows from his landlord, a less exacting creditor than the village banker; a feeling of mutual interdependence and self-interest is created between landlord and tenant; the former is more than a mere rent collector, his own prosperity depends on that of the cultivator." If commutation is allowed at the instance of the raiyat it would entail all the trouble, expense and litigation inseparable from settlements of money rent, involve raiyats in debt, and seriously affect the cause of agriculture. Lands for which produce rents are paid usually require the co-operation of the landholder for their cultivation. In most places, as in the districts of Patna and Gya, such co-operation is indispensible. The utter uselessness of attempts on the part of individual raiyats to cultivate such lands without the help of the landholder is nowhere better explained than in the very valuable letter written on the subject by Bábú Bhupsen Sing, Government Pleader of Gya. He writes: "Because, in the first place, his holding being scattered in small plots and patches all over the village area, many at considerable distances from the ahars and pynes, he will not think it worth his while to spend any money upon the construction and repairs of the common reservoirs and water-courses; secondly, because he has not the means, nor has he any credit with money-lenders, to raise the required sum by loan; thirdly, because, in the present state of the country, the habits of the people, their ancient and inherited mode of thinking, and their want of confidence in each other, so natural in monetary transactions among the ignorant and illiterate mass to which the majority of the cultivators belong, would make combination and raising up of subscriptions among themselves, creation of a joint common fund and the appointment of trustees for the proper management of such a fund, anything but practicable within the bounds of possibility; fourthly, because, assuming, even for the sake of argument, the possibility of the creation of such a fund and the appointment of such trustees as aforesaid, the mob would be without a lead, and each raiyat having paid for the common reservoirs and water-channels would claim the priority of irrigating his fields, and try to assert his rights or supposed rights, by means, fair or foul, which would often lead to serious affrays, resulting in the "breaking of bones and shedding of blood, and sometimes terminating in murders and man-slaughters."

Chapter VI.—The rights given by the Bill to a non-occupancy-raiyat will, to all intents and purposes, convert him into an occupancy-raiyat. He may (section 85) sub-let his holding so as to make the sub-lease binding for 9 years, although his own tenure might be for a much shorter time. The landlord will have no power to eject him for refusal to pay enhanced rent. He must serve upon him a notice of enhancement, sue him in Court, and it is only when the raiyat refuses to pay rent at the rates paid by occupancy-raiyats that the landlord may get a decree for ejectment. A non-occupancy-raiyat may (section 79), as a matter of right, dig a well, and erect a dwelling-house and out-offices on his land and make any other improvement after having first served a notice on his landlord requiring him to do so. When a decree for ejectment is passed the Court may extend the time beyond 15 days, the raiyat will be entitled to get from his landlord the price of the crops, if any, on the land or the cost of the preparation of the land and also (section 82) compensation for improvements made by him. If the landlord applies for a record and settlement of rights, or if the process is forced upon him by the Local Government, the rent of the non-occupancy-raiyat, whether enhanced or reduced, will hold good for 5 years. All these provisions are violent inroads upon well-recognized rights of landholders. It appears to us, however, that the effect of their operation would be to place non-occupancy-raiyats in a much worse position than at present. Having an absolute right of ejecting such a raiyat on the expiry of the term of his lease, the landholder will in every case grant short term leases with a view to protect his interests and thus reduce non-occupancy-raiyats to mere tenants-at-will. For the purpose of providing for the comparatively small number of cases in which landholders have not or may not protect themselves by contract, a number of sections have been introduced in different parts of the Bill which might well be omitted. They simply add to the radical aspect of the measure without doing any corresponding good.

Chapter VII.—I shall discuss the provisions of this chapter along with section 85 which might well have formed a part of this chapter.

Section 50 (2).—The operation of the rule of 20 years' presumption has been most injurious to the landholders. Instead of merely giving the raiyat a facility for proving that he and his ancestors before him have been in possession by payment of rent at a uniform rate since 1793 in cases where he has been actually in such possession, it has, like a rule of prescription or of limitation, created rights where none existed before. By the very circumstances of their position the landholders have been unable in most cases to rebut the presumption. Those landholders whose families have been in possession of estates since 1793 form a very insignificant number, the vast majority having acquired their estates by purchase since that time, and as it is notorious that the records of landholders are badly kept, and the climate of the country is inimical to the preservation of old records, it is easy to see that excepting a very few cases landholders have been wholly unable to discharge the burden laid upon them by law. The injustice of this rule of presumption has been exposed by none so well as by the Hon'ble Mr. Reynolds in the report which accompanied his draft Bill. He is supported in this respect by a large number of experienced Revenue Officers, District and Subordinate Judges, who were consulted by the Bengal Government on the subject. Mr. H. L. Dampier, Mr. E. E. Lowis, Mr. G. N. Barlow, Mr. Kean, Mr. D. W. Doyly, Mr. R. Porch, Mr. A. Weekes, Mr. C. B. Garrett, Mr. J. Tweedie, Babu Srinath Rai, Babu Bhagaban Chandra Chakerbutty, Babu Naffar Chandra Bhutta, Syed Moazim Hossein and others have recommended either the abolition of this rule of presumption or a material modification of it. Considering that the rule is opposed to the recognised principles of evidence, that it is opposed to the fact that from ½ to ⅔rds of the area of these provinces was waste at the time of the Permanent Settlement, that it has been in operation for the last twenty-five years during which all who really required it and many more have had their titles judicially declared, that it places in the way of auction-purchasers, seeking to get their just dues, obstacles which are practically insurmountable, and that it would operate in future with double hardship upon the landholder, it is but fair to him that the rule should be expunged from the Bill. The justice and necessity of its abolition cannot be better supported than by referring to section 190 of the Bill. When Government with all the means and appliances which a well kept and organised system of accounts placed at their disposal, find it necessary to protect their own interests by freeing those khas mehals which have never been permanently settled (and these form the majority) from the operation of this rule of presumption, how much more imperative must be the necessity for an amendment of the law in the interests of private landholders?

Section 50 (3).—The question as to in what cases the rule of 20 years' presumption, notwithstanding that land has been added to or taken from a holding should apply should be left to the decision of the Courts, according to the merits of each case. A hard-and-fast rule, that the presumption shall appy to all cases of consolidation or reduction of holdings may be fraught with great mischief. The remarks of Sir R. Couch in this connection contained in a ruling reported in 21 W. R. 267 are well worth considering.

Section 56 (4).—Considering that section 58 gives the tenant full remedy for refusal or neglect on the part of his landlord to give him a receipt in proper form, this sub-section is wholly unnecessary. It is likely to prove a fruitful source of litigation by holding out to the tenant a prospect of discharge from all liability, if he can shew that his landlord has not put in some one particular in his receipt although it might have been from ignorance or oversight.

Section 58.—A demand of the receipt by a letter under a registered cover should precede the institution of a suit for recovery of penalty. The section, as it is, would offer a great temptation to the tenant to refuse to take the receipt and sue his landlord for recovery of double the amount paid by him.

Section 61.—Clauses (c) and (d) of this section are objectionable. A landholder's agent might have once refused to take rent from a raiyat on the ground of his not being a recorded tenant, or on the ground of some dispute as to the amount of rent, but that is no reason why it should be assumed that he would refuse to take rent at all future time, notwithstanding that the matters in dispute have been settled. There should be a tender of payment in every case before deposit is allowed. Nor should the raiyat be allowed to constitute himself a judge of his landlord's title, and to deposit his rent in Court on the plea that by reason of a suit instituted by a third party, against his landlord, he feels a bonâ fide doubt as to his title to receive it.

Section 64 (1).—If this sub-section were made applicable only to rents deposited under clause (d) of section 61, we should have nothing to say; but we strongly object to it as it clearly refers to all classes of deposit of rent. The Court should certainly have no power to pay money to B, when the raiyat has deposited to the credit of A.

Sections 74 and 75.—Exception should have been made in these sections in regard to such impositions "in addition to actual rent" which are allowed by law. Take for instance the case of zamíndárí dawk charge, which is by law (Act VIII of 1862, B.C.) payable by the zamíndár, but which he may (section 9) stipulate with his raiyats for payment by them. Take again, the case of the road cess. It is payable by law both by the raiyat and his landlord in certain proportions, but there is nothing to prevent the latter to bind the former by contract for the payment of the whole amount by him. Sec. 4, Indian Law Reports, Calcutta, 576. The Salamy which the landholder is clearly entitled to get for parting with a portion of his rights, e. g., allowing the tenant to take earth for brick-making, should also be expressly excepted. This is the more necessary, as the penalty provided in section 74 is very heavy.

Sections 76—83.—These sections, about improvements and compensation for improvements have been strongly objected to by landholders. If they are allowed to stand, landholders should be given the prior right to make an improvement, where both they and their raiyat wish to make it; the right of non-occupancy raiyats to make improvements should be taken away, and the difference in this connection between an occupancy-raiyat holding at a fixed rent or fixed rate of rent, and other occupancy-raiyats should be abolished. Section 77 furnishes another instance of the great confusion which will arise, if this distinction is maintained. It is provided in clause (3) that if there is a dispute between the raiyat and his landlord "as to the right to make an improvement," the Collector should "decide the question and his decision shall be final." The Collector must therefore determine finally and conclusively, although quite in an incidental way, whether a raiyat holds at a fixed or enhancible rent.

Section 85.—The effect of the various provisions of the Bill regarding sub-letting and under-raiyats would be to give a great impetus to the progress of the institution, although both the Secretary of State in Council and the Government of India have expressed a desire that the institution should be discouraged. A registered sub-lease will be ordinarily binding for nine years, the sub-lessee's rent may not be enhanced beyond a certain percentage over the lessors' rent, in certain cases of sale of the lessors' title the sub-lease cannot be avoided, and even in cases of abandonment by the lessor he will have the right to hold on if he agrees to pay the rent payable by his lessor. These provisions would be more harmful to landholders and their raiyats than a provision of free sale of occupancy holdings with the restrictions which the revised Bill imposed upon it.

Section 86 (2).—The Bill provides for a notice of six months to be given to the raiyat in a case of ejectment. It is fair to the landholder that he should receive a notice of an equal period in a case of surrender.

Section 86 (3).—This clause is objectionable. The notice may fairly be presumed if the landholder lets the surrendered land to another raiyat in the beginning of the year, but to presume it in any other case would be doing him wrong. To presume the service of the notice from the fact that the raiyat has taken a new holding in the name of a relative or friend would be contrary to all rules of evidence, and to raise the presumption from the fact that the raiyat has ceased for three months to live in the village, would be to expect the landholder to act in a way quite opposed to the provisions of section 87. When the question is one of continued liability of the raiyat to pay rent, he will be presumed to have surrendered his holding simply from the fact of his having ceased to live in the village for three months, but when the question is one of the landholder's right to re-let land which has been abandoned, no abandonment will be presumed till the expiry of the year, in which the raiyat so abandons, and not even then till the Collector on the application of the landlord has published a notice in the locality. It is provisions like these which have given the Bill such an one-sided character.

Section 87.—The attempt made in this section to formulate the nature of evidence required to prove an abandonment, has singularly failed. A raiyat must (1) abandon his residence; (2) omit to make any arrangement for the payment of rent, and (3) cease to cultivate the land, before he can be said under the section to have abandoned his holding. In the case therefore of a pykust or non-resident raiyat, there can be possibly no abandonment of a holding, unless the raiyat abandons his native village belonging to a different landholder. The landholder will have no right to let the lands abandoned by a pykust raiyat to another raiyat until the pykust raiyat "abandons his residence," a contingency which may never happen. Again, there is no reason why a landholder should have to wait for one year, and lose his year's rent, if he is satisfied that the raiyat has really abandoned his holding. The provision for the publication of notice contained in clause (2) and for the recovery of possession by the raiyat contained in clause (3) would be a sufficient check against any malâ fides of the landholder.

It should be also observed that clause (3) extends the time within which a raiyat may sue to recover possession from one year to two years. This extension of time is under the circumstances of the case, altogether unnecessary, and it will complicate matters, and give rise to litigation. If the land be let in the meantime to a settled raiyat of the village, and if he lets it to another under-raiyat under a registered sub-lease, what an amount of confusion would be caused?

Section 90.—This section takes away important rights of landholders as regards measurement. If the raiyat refuses to attend the measurement and point out his land, clause (2) will place him in no worse position than a raiyat who has attended and pointed out his land. In both cases, the measurement will be presumed to be correct unless the contrary is shewn. The most noticeable defect in the section is however, the absence of any provision for cases in which a landholder, usually an auction-purchaser, is unable to ascertain the raiyats who are in possession of the lands of his estate. A landholder may under such circumstances, it is true, make an application under the Record-of-Rights Chapter, but it would throw upon him not only a deal of expense and trouble but would place him at the mercy of the Revenue-officer.

Sections 93-100.—The strong support which the Bengal Government gave in their Report to the provision for the appointment of managers in joint estates was based on an erroneous assumption that it was the existing law. That law was, however, repealed in 1874 when other obsolete enactments were repealed. Since then no necessity has been made out for a provision like this which will place in the hands of a small fractional shareholder of an estate the power of seriously annoying and injuring his co sharers. Considering that the holders of small estates collect their own rents from the raiyats, the appointment of a manager by Court will eat up all their profits. The facilities which the law and the rulings of the Courts have given for the partition of joint estates have rendered such a provision as this wholly unnecessary.

Sections 101-114.—Both among landholders and raiyats this is one of the most unpopular portions of the Bill. These sections give to the Executive Government a power to convulse rural society to an extent far exceeding anything which any differences arising out of the ordinary relations of landlord and tenant can create. Even under circumstances of agrarian disturbances neither of the contending parties would avail themselves of these provisions. The Agrarian Disturbance Act of 1876 remained a dead-letter so long as it was in the Statute Book. The Select Committee have made these provisions much more objectionable than before by introducing a section (section 111) which gives the Revenue-officers power to reduce existing rents either on the grounds allowed by law or on any other ground, and we think that in justice to the landholders and in the interests of the raiyats themselves, these sections should be omitted.

Section 116.—A record of proprietor's private lands should be made only on his application, as it would otherwise put the landholder and his raiyats to great expense and trouble at a time when there is perhaps perfect peace and harmony between the parties and when neither of them is prepared for the enquiry. The provision empowering the Local Government to order such an enquiry at any time they please, and without any application on the part of the raiyats or their landlord, is, therefore, highly objectionable. Section 120 involves an anomaly. If a landholder after having cultivated by his own servants a piece of land for 12 years before the passing of the Act, turns it into raiyatti land, he will still be enabled after a lapse of 15 or 20 years, when the record will be made, to claim it as his private land and to get it so recorded.

CHAPTER XII.—The provisions relating to distraint amount virtually to an abolition of the institution. They will give the landholders no greater powers than what the Code of Civil Procedure gives to every plaintiff who may wish to get an attachment before judgment. The landholder looks upon the crops as the security for the recovery of his rent. The sale of the houses and the goods and chattels of raiyats is often times quite inadequate to meet the landholder's claim. In the case of non-resident raiyats the crops raised by them are the landlord's only security for his rent. If they remove the crops before paying the rent the landholder generally loses his rent for the year. The procedure contained in this chapter would therefore result in this, that while the landlord is engaged in making application to the Court and satisfying it of the bona fides thereof, the raiyat will quietly remove his crops and the former will not only lose his rent but also the costs of the application. It is a misnomer to call that a distraint which is nothing more or less than a process of Court. The present law on the subject does not give the landholder any power which might be possibly abused. He can only attach the crops, but he cannot interfere with the raiyat's doing what he likes with the crops without the assistance of the Court. It is the fear of the consequences if the raiyat removes the distrained crops that constitute the landholder's whole security for the rent. There have been no complaints on the part of judicial officers of any abuse of the power which the present law allows with impunity. On no point, on the contrary, have public officers expressed themselves more forcibly than in condemnation of the procedure contained in the Bill and in support of the existing law. The Presidency Conference, the Patna Conference, the Rajshahi Conference, the Burdwan Conference, the Orissa Conference and a number of individual officers have recommended the retention of the existing law.

Section 153 (b).—The rule allowing an appeal in all cases should not be interfered with. Rent suits should not be judged by the amount of the claim. Very often they possess an importance to which the value of the suit is no index. All those whom we have consulted are of opinion that it is much better that they should have the constitutional right of an appeal than that their suits should be finally decided by special officers selected by the local Government.

Section 154.—The time within which a suit for enhancement may be instituted should be extended to the first 9 months in order to enable the landholder to judge from the condition of the crops whether he should institute the suit in a particular year. No one would like to institute a suit for enhancement when the prospect of the crops is gloomy or distress is impending over the country.

Section 155 (1).—Provision should be made for service by Court of the notice of ejectment. If it were left to the landholders, as this sub-section does, the service would be denied in most cases and the enquiry would entail unnecessary expense and delay.

Section 156.—A decree for ejectment severs the relation between landlord and tenant. If there be crops on the land they go with the land to the landholders, as ruled in a case reported in 5 Indian Law Report, Calcutta, 135. This section lays down a principle and provides for an elaborate enquiry quite in opposition to the judge-made law on the subject. A raiyat may be ejected only at the close of the year when the crops have been reaped. There is, therefore, no necessity for this section. Moreover, when a raiyat's interest may be sold outright four times in the year, a provision regarding crops in cases of ejectment only would give the raiyat an illusory protection.

Section 160.—This section introduces serious changes in the present law regarding what are called the protected interests. There could be no objection to a lease for building or manufacturing purposes granted at a fair rent being protected from avoidance on the sale of the superior tenure as provided in the present law, but this section goes much farther. A lease of land whereon manufactories have been erected, perhaps without the consent of the landholder, and reserving a nominal rent is declared a protected interest by this section; as also judicial leases granted to non-occupancy raiyats and permanent leases granted by the out-going tenure-holder. The effect of these provisions will be that it would be in the power of a tenure-holder to creates leases in the names of his servants and relations which would absorb the entire profits of the tenure and then put it up to sale by making default in the payment of rent. Most tenures would be rendered quite valueless in no time if these provisions are retained.

Sections 161—169.—These Sections introduce alterations in the existing law which will prove a fruitful source of litigation. No necessity whatever was felt for provisions like these. If the sale be made in the first instance subject to the registered encumbrances, and then, after the sale proceeds have been found to be inadequate, a second sale be made with power to avoid such encumbrances, it would saddle the judgment-debtor with unnecessary costs, reduce the market value of the tenure and delay the realisation of money due to the landholder. These evils would be greatly enhanced if the procedure be extended by the Local Government to sales of occupancy holdings under Section 168.

Section 177.—The preamble of Regulation V of 1812 shows that although the Legislature of 1793 enjoined the exchange of written engagements between landholder and tenant, the raiyats of these Provinces in a body deliberately refused to enter into written engagements which would make it obligatory on them to pay as rent, cesses, and abwábs which they had been paying as benevolences, and that that Regulation was passed, among other objects to provide for such refusal. Since that time there has been vast progress in the material prosperity of the country, in the spread of education and in the condition of the raiyats. They might well therefore be left to the resources of their own judgment in matters relating to their own interests. They will be perfectly free to contract away their liberties and become emigrants in a strange country, to borrow money at usurious rates of interest involving their ultimate ruin, and to mortgage their holdings or sell them in some cases, and yet this section imposes restrictions upon freedom of contract in a variety of matters in which they are the best judges of their own interests. It is very doubtful how far these would be effective in practice and how far they would prevent parties from having recourse to shifts and devices for the purpose of evading the law. These provisions, it should be observed, offer a striking contrast to the provision contained in section 192. In the case of private landholders, free contract is restricted in the interest of raiyats; in the case of Government no contract entered into by a landholder with his raiyats before the property came into the hands of Government would be respected if it interfered with the right of Government to assess fair and equitable rent upon the land.

Section 182.—This Bill should have nothing to do with homestead lands in towns and trading places. Where homestead lands do not form part of a raiyatti holding its incidents should be left to custom and contract.

Section 184.—The schedule to which this section refers has extended from one year to two years the time within which a raiyat dispossessed by his landlord may sue to recover possession. We see no reason why this alteration in the existing law should be made.

Section 186.—A provision which converts into a criminal offence acts, otherwise not criminal, which relate to the daily transactions of life is most objectionable. The provisions of the section are, moreover, very one-sided. In the case of the landholder, for instance, an "attempt to distrain" would be a criminal offence, but in the case of the raiyat not only is an attempt to resist distraint or remove distrained crops not criminal, but he may remove crops stored for division or appraisement under the Danabundy system without subjecting himself to any penalty, civil or criminal.

Sections 191 & 192.—For reasons stated in different parts of this Dissent, these two sections should be omitted and Government should be placed in exactly the same position regarding landholding rights as private landholders.

Section 196.—We do not see either the necessity or the value of this section. If the Acts of the Local Legislature in any way conflict with the provisions of this Bill such Acts would be rendered inoperative by the Indian Councils Act, 1861. If those Acts provide for matters not embraced by this Bill they would have the force of law without any provision like this.

Schedule I.—We strongly object to the sections of Regulation VIII of 1793 mentioned in this schedule being omitted. They contain the most important provisions on which the Permanent Settlement was based, next in importance only to the provisions fixing the revenue in perpetuity.

We desire to say, in conclusion, that the Bill does not provide for any summary procedure for the recovery of rent. By making an express provision for decrees directing recovery of rent by instalments, by extending the time before a sale can take place from 20 to 30 days from the date of the proclamation, and by giving the Courts discretion to extend beyond 15 days the time within which a raiyat might protect himself from ejectment by payment of the decreed amount, the Bill has, on the contrary, thrown additional obstacles in the way of recovery of rent.

Considering the importance of the measure and the material changes in the Bill made by the Select Committee since their Preliminary Report was submitted last year we think that it should be republished before its provisions are taken into consideration by the Council.

12th February 1885.

I wish to add that I regret that my unavoidable absence from the Meetings of the Select Committee in the last stage of their labors and the very short time at my disposal between the receipt by me of the draft report of the majority of the Committee and the date fixed for the submission of the report to the Council, prevents me from recording my opinions at greater length. I adhere to the opinions expressed in my last year's dissent. The measure as a whole is even now opposed to the just rights of the proprietors of land and detrimental to the best interests of the entire community. If not withdrawn, it still requires further and serious consideration by the light of actual ascertained facts and circumstances of the country as opposed to mere opinions and ex-parte reports.

[B., s. 1 B., s. 1.] (3) It shall extend by its own operation to all the territories for the time being under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, except the Town of Calcutta, the Division of Orissa, and the Scheduled Districts specified in the third part of the First Schedule of the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874; and the Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the local official Gazette, extend the whole or any portion of this Act to the Division of Orissa or any part thereof.
Local extent.

[IV of 874.

[B., s. 2.], s. 2. ection 2.] 2. (1) The enactments specified in Schedule I hereto annexed are repealed in the territories to which this Act extends by its own operation.
Repeal.

(2) When this Act is extended to the Division of Orissa or any part thereof, such of those enactments as are in force in that Division or part, or, where a portion only of this Act is so extended, so much of them as is inconsistent with that portion, shall be repealed in that Division or part.

(3) Any enactment or document referring to any enactment hereby repealed shall be construed to refer to this Act or to the corresponding portion thereof.

(4) The repeal of any enactment by this Act shall not revive any right, privilege, matter or thing not in force or existing at the commencement of this Act.

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,— Definitions.

(1) "Estate" means land included under one entry in any of the general registers of revenue-paying lands and revenue-free lands, prepared and maintained under the law for the time being in force by the Collector of a district, and includes Government khás maháls and revenue-free lands not entered in any register: [D., § 1. C. B., s. 3. B. B., s. 3. Section 3 (1).]

(2) "Proprietor" means a person owning, whether in trust or for his own benefit, an estate or a part of an estate. [D. § 1. C. B., s. 3. B. B., s. 3. Section 3 (2).]

(3) "Tenant" means a person who holds land under another person, and is, or but for a special contract would be, liable to pay rent for that land to that person. [Section 3 (3).]

(4) "Landlord" means a person immediately under whom a tenant holds, and includes the Government. [Section 3 (4).]

(5) "Rent" means whatever is lawfully payable or deliverable in money or kind by a tenant to his landlord on account of the use or occupation of the land held by the tenant: [D., § 1. C. B., s 3. B. B., s. 3. See s. 227. Section 3 (5).]

In sections 53 to 68, both inclusive, sections 72 to 75, both inclusive, Chapter XII and Schedule III of this Act, "rent" includes also money recoverable under any enactment for the time being in force as if it was rent.

(6) "Pay," "payable" and "payment," used with reference to rent, include "deliver," "deliverable" and "delivery." [Section 3(6).]

(7) "Tenure" means the interest of a tenure-holder or an under-tenure-holder.

(8) "Permanent tenure" means a tenure which is heritable and which is not held for a limited time.

(9) "Holding" means a parcel or parcels of land held by a raiyat and forming the subject of a separate tenancy. [Section 3(7).]

(10) "Village" means an area included in a village map of the revenue-survey within the same exterior boundary, or, where no such maps have been prepared, such area as any officer appointed by the Local Government in this behalf may determine after local inquiry held on such notice as the Local Government considers sufficient for giving information to all persons interested. [B. B., s. 19, expl 11. Section 27.]

(11) "Agricultural year" means, where the Bengalí year prevails, the year commencing on the first day of Bysák, where the Faslí or Amlí year prevails, the year commencing on the first day of Asin, and, where any other year prevails for agricultural purposes, that year. [Sec. 3 (9).]

[D., § 20 & 37. C. B., ss. 6 & 16 B.B., ss. 6 & 15.) Section 3 (9).]

(12) "Permanent Settlement" means the Permanent Settlement of Bengal, Bihár and Orissa, made in the year 1793.

[Section 3 (11).]

(13) "Succession" includes both intestate and testamentary succession.

[C. B., s. 1. B. B., s. 3. Section 3 (12).]

(14) "Signed" includes "marked" when the person making the mark is unable to write his name; it also includes "stamped" with the name of the person referred to.

[Section 3 (13).]

(15) "Prescribed" means prescribed from time to time by the Local Government by notification in the official Gazette.

[Section 3 (14).]

(16) "Collector" means the Collector of a district or any other officer appointed by the Local Government to discharge any of the functions of a Collector under this Act.

[Section 3 (15).]

(17) "Revenue-officer" in any provision of this Act includes any officer whom the Local Government may appoint by name or by virtue of his office to discharge any of the functions of a Revenue-officer under that provision.

(18) "Registered" means registered under any Act for the time being in force for the registration of documents.

CHAPTER II.

Classes of Tenants.

[Section 4.]

4. There shall be, for the purposes of this Act, the following classes of tenants, namely:—

Classes of tenants.

(1) tenure-holders, including under-tenure-holders,

(2) raiyats, and

(3) under-raiyats, that is to say, tenants holding whether immediately or mediately under raiyats;

and the following classes of raiyats, namely:—

(a) raiyats holding at fixed rates, which expression means raiyats holding either at a rent fixed in perpetuity or at a rate of rent fixed in perpetuity,

(b) occupancy-raiyats, that is to say, raiyats having a right of occupancy in the land held by them, and

(c) non-occupancy-raiyats, that is to say, raiyats not having such a right of occupancy.

[Section 5.]

5. (1) "Tenure-holder" means primarily a person who has acquired from a proprietor or from another tenure-holder a right to hold land for the purpose of collecting rents or bringing it under cultivation by establishing tenants on it, and includesalso the successors in interest of persons who have acquired such a right.

Meaning of "tenure-holder" and "raiyat."

(2) "Raiyat" means primarily a person who has acquired a right to hold land for the purpose of cultivating it by himself, or by members of his family, or by hired servants, or with the aid of partners, and includes also the successors in interest of persons who have acquired such a right.

Explanation.—Where a tenant of land has the right to bring it under cultivation, he shall be deemed to have acquired a right to hold it for the purpose of cultivation notwithstanding that he uses it for the purpose of gathering the produce of it or of grazing cattle on it.

(3) A person shall not be deemed to be a raiyat unless he holds land either immediately under a proprietor or immediately under a tenure-holder.

(4) In determining whether a tenant is a tenure-holder or a raiyat the Court shall have regard to—

(a) local custom; and

(b) the purpose for which the right of tenancy was originally acquired.

(5) Where the area held by a tenant exceeds one hundred standard bighás, the tenant shall be presumed to be a tenure-holder until the contrary is shewn.

CHAPTER III.

Tenure-holders.

Enhancement of rent.

Tenure held since Permanent Settlement liable to enhancement only in certain cases.

6. Where a tenure has been held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, its rent shall not be liable to enhancement except on proof—

(a) that the landlord under whom it is held is entitled to enhance the rent thereof either by local custom or by the conditions under which the tenure is held, or

(b) that the tenure-holder, by receiving reductions of his rent, otherwise than on account of a diminution of the area of the tenure, has subjected himself to the payment of the increase demanded, and that the lands are capable of affording it.

Limits of enhancement of rent of tenures.

7. (1) Where the rent of a tenure-holder is liable to enhancement, it may, subject to any contract between the parties, be enhanced up to the limit of the customary rate payable by persons holding similar tenures in the vicinity.

(2) Where no such customary rate exists, it may, subject as aforesaid, be enhanced up to such limit as the Court thinks fair and equitable.

(3) In determining what is fair and equitable the Court shall not leave to the tenure-holder as profit less than ten per centum of the balance which remains after deducting from the gross rents payable to him the expenses of collecting them, and shall have regard to—

(a) the circumstances under which the tenure was created, for instance, whether the land comprised in the tenure, or a great portion of it, was first brought under cultivation by the agency or at the expense of the tenure-holder or his predecessors in interest, whether any fine or premium was paid on the creation of the tenure, and whether the tenure was originally created at a specially low rent for the purpose of reclamation; and

(b) the improvements, if any, made by the tenure-holder or his predecessors in interest.

(4) If the tenure-holder himself occupies any portion of the land included in the area of his tenure, or has made a grant of any portion of the land either rent-free or at a beneficial rent, a fair and equitable rent shall be calculated for that portion and included in the gross rents aforesaid.

8. The Court may, if it thinks that an immediate increase of rent would produce hardship, direct that the enhancement shall be gradual; that is to say, that the rent shall increase yearly by degrees, for any number of years not exceeding five, until the limit of the enhancement allowed has been reached.

Power to order gradual enhancement.

9. When the rent of a tenure-holder has been enhanced by the Court or by contract, it shall not be again enhanced by the Court during the fifteen years next following the date on which it has been so enhanced.

Rent once enhanced may not be altered for fifteen years.

Other incidents of tenures.

10. A holder of a permanent tenure shall not be ejected by his landlord except on the ground that he has broken a condition consistent with the provisions of this Act and on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between him and his landlord, liable to be ejected.

Permanent tenure-holder not liable to ejectment.

11. Every permanent tenure shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be capable of being transferred and bequeathed in the same manner and to the same extent as other immoveable property.

Transfer and transmission of permanent tenure.

12. (1) A transfer of a permanent tenure by sale, gift or mortgage (other than a transfer by sale in execution of a decree or by summary sale under any law relating to patni or other tenures) can be made only by a registered instrument.

Voluntary transfer of permanent tenure.

Other incidents of tenures.

(2) A registering officer shall not register any instrument purporting or operating to transfer by sale, gift or mortgage a permanent tenure unless there is paid to him, in addition to any fees payable under the Act for the time being in force for the registration of documents, a process-fee of the prescribed amount and a fee (hereinafter called "the landlord's fee") of the following amount, namely:—

[D., § 27. C. B., ss. 47, 49. B. B., ss. 39, 41.] III of 1877.

(a) when rent is payable in respect of the tenure, a fee of two per centum on the annual rent of the tenure: provided that no such fee shall be less than one rupee or more than one hundred rupees; and

(b) when rent is not payable in respect of the tenure, a fee of two rupees.

(3) When the registration of any such instrument is complete, the registering officer shall send to the Collector the landlord's fee and a notice of the transfer and registration in the prescribed form, and the Collector shall cause the fee to be paid to, and the notice to be served on, the landlord in the prescribed manner.

13. (1) When a permanent tenure is sold in execution of a decree other than a decree for arrears of rent due in respect thereof, the Court shall, before confirming the sale under section 312 of the Code of Civil Procedure, require the purchaser to pay into Court the landlord's fee prescribed by the last foregoing section and such further fee for service of notice of the sale on the landlord as may be prescribed.

Transfer of permanent tenure by sale in execution of decree other than decree for rent.

[C. B. ss., 47, 48 (c). B. B., ss. 39, 40 (c). Section 16.] XIV of 1882.

(2) When the sale has been confirmed, the Court shall send to the Collector the landlord's fee and a notice of the sale in the prescribed form, and the Collector shall cause the fee to be paid to, and the notice to be served on, the landlord in the prescribed manner.

14. When a permanent tenure is transferred by sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due in respect thereof, the Court shall send to the Collector a notice of the sale in the prescribed form.

Transfer of permanent tenure by sale in execution of decree for rent.

[Section 17.]

15. When a succession to a permanent tenure takes place, the person succeeding shall give notice of the succession to the Collector in the prescribed form, and shall pay to the Collector the prescribed fee for the service of the notice on the landlord and the landlord's fee prescribed by section 12, and the Collector shall cause the landlord's fee to be paid to, and the notice to be served on, the landlord in the prescribed manner.

16. A person becoming entitled to a permanent tenure by succession shall not be entitled to recover by suit, distraint or other proceeding any rent payable to him as the holder of the tenure, until the Collector has received the notice and fees referred to in the last foregoing section.

Bar to recovery of rent pending notice of succession.

17. Subject to the provisions of section 88, the foregoing sections shall apply to the transfer of, or succession to, a share in a permanent tenure.

Transfer of, and succession to, share in permanent tenure.

CHAPTER IV.

RAIYATS HOLDING AT FIXED RATES.

[Section 23.]

18. A raiyat holding at a rent, or rate of rent, fixed in perpetuity—

Incidents of holding at fixed rates.

(a) shall be subject to the same provisions with respect to the transfer of, and succession to, his holding as the holder of a permanent tenure, and

[C. B., s. 18 B B., ss. 12 & 17]

(b) shall not be ejected by his landlord except on the ground that he has broken a condition consistent with this Act, and on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between him and his landlord, liable to be ejected.

CHAPTER V.

OCCUPANCY-RAIYATS.

General.

General. [B. B., s. 19 (1) & Expl. IV (c), proviso. Section 24.]

19. Every raiyat who immediately before the commencement of this Act has, by the operation of any enactment, by custom or otherwise, a right of occupancy in any land shall, when this Act comes into force, have a right of occupancy in that land.

Continuance of existing occupancy-rights.

[Section 26.]

20. (1) Every person who for a period of twelve years, whether wholly or partly before or after the commencement of this Act, has continuously held as a raiyat land situate in any village, whether under a lease or otherwise, shall be deemed to have become, on the expiration of that period, a settled raiyat of that village.

Definition of "settled raiyat."

(2) A person shall be deemed for the purposes of this section to have continuously held land in a village notwithstanding that the particular land held by him has been different at different times.

(3) A person shall be deemed, for the purposes of this section, to have held as a raiyat any land held as a raiyat by a person whose heir he is.

(4) Land held by two or more co-sharers as a raiyatí holding shall be deemed, for the purposes of this section, to have been held as a raiyat by each such co-sharer.

(5) A person shall continue to be a settled raiyat of a village as long as he holds any land as a raiyat in that village and for one year thereafter.

(6) If a raiyat recovers possession of land under section 87, he shall be deemed to have continued to be a settled raiyat notwithstanding his having been out of possession more than a year.

(7) If, in any proceeding under this Act, it is proved or admitted that a person holds any land as a raiyat, it shall, as between him and the landlord under whom he holds the land, be presumed for the purposes of this section, until the contrary is proved or admitted, that he has for twelve years continuously held that land or some part of it as a raiyat.

[Sect

21. (1) Every person who is a settled raiyat of a village within the meaning of the last foregoing section shall have a right of occupancy in all land for the time being held by him as a raiyat in that village.

ocSettled raiyats to have upancy-rights.

(2) Every person who, being a settled raiyat of a village within the meaning of the last foregoing section, held land as a raiyat in that village at any time between the second day of March, 1883, and the commencement of this Act, shall be deemed to have acquired a right of occupancy in that land under the law then in force; but nothing in this sub-section shall affect any decree or order passed by a Court before the commencement of this Act.

[Sect and 2

22. (1) When the immediate landlord of an occupancy-holding is a proprietor or permanent tenure-holder, and the entire interests of the landlord and the raiyat in the holding become united in the same person by transfer, succession or otherwise, the occupancy-right shall cease to exist; but nothing in this sub-section shall prejudicially affect the rights of any third person.

Effect of acquisition of occupancy-right by landlord

(2) If the occupancy-right in land is transferred to a person jointly interested in the land as proprietor or permanent tenure-holder, it shall cease to exist; but nothing in this sub-section shall prejudicially affect the rights of any third person.

(3) A person holding land as an ijárádár or farmer of rents shall not, while so holding, acquire a right of occupancy in any land comprised in his ijárá or farm.

Enhancement of rent by registered contract.

(a) the rent must not be enhanced so as to exceed by more than two annas in the rupee the rent previously payable by the raiyat;

(b) the contract must fix the rent for a term of at least fifteen years.

(2) The registering officer shall, before registering a contract under this section, ascertain that the contract is not inconsistent with sections 74 and 178 of this Act, and that the raiyat is competent and willing to enter into it, and understands its nature.

(3) Nothing in sub-section (1), clause (a), shall apply to a contract by which a raiyat binds himself to pay an enhanced rent in consideration of an improvement which has been or is to be effected in respect of the holding by, or at the expense of, his landlord, and to the benefit of which the raiyat is not otherwise entitled; but an enhanced rent fixed by such a contract shall be payable only when the improvement has been effected, and, except when the raiyat is chargeable with default in respect of the improvement, only so long as the improvement exists and substantially produces its estimated effect in respect of the holding.

Enhancement of rent.

(4) The Local Government may, from time to time, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, make rules for the guidance of officers registering contracts under this section.

30. The landlord of a holding held at a money-rent by an occupancy-raiyat may, subject to the provisions of this Act, institute a suit to enhance the rent on one or more of the following grounds, namely:—

Enhancement of rent by suit.

[D., § 43 (1) and (2). C. B., s. 22 (1), (3) and (4.) B. B., s. 23 (1), (3) and (4). Section 43.]

(a) that the rate of rent paid by the raiyat is below the prevailing rate paid by occupancy-raiyats for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same village, and that there is no sufficient reason for his holding at so low a rate;

(b) that there has been a rise in the average local prices of staple food-crops during the currency of the present rent;

(c) that the productive powers of the land held by the raiyat have been increased by an improvement effected by, or at the expense of, the landlord during the currency of the present rent;

(d) that the productive powers of the land held by the raiyat have been increased by fluvial action.

(b) if in the opinion of the Court the prevailing rate of rent cannot be satisfactorily ascertained without a local inquiry, the Court may direct that a local inquiry be held under Chapter XXV of the Code of Civil Procedure by such Revenue-officer as the Local Government may authorize in that behalf by rules made under section 392 of the said Code;

(d) in ascertaining the prevailing rate of rent the amount of any enhancement authorized on account of a landlord's improvement shall not be taken into consideration.

[Section 45.] Rules as to enhancement on ground of rise in prices.

32. Where an enhancement is claimed on the ground of a rise in prices—

(a) the Court shall compare the average prices during the decennial period immediately preceding the institution of the suit with the average prices during such other decennial period as it may appear equitable and practicable to take for comparison;

(b) the enhanced rent shall bear to the previous rent the same proportion as the average prices during the last decennial period bear to the average prices during the previous decennial period taken for purposes of comparison: provided that, in calculating this proportion, the average prices during the later period shall be reduced by one-third of their excess over the average prices during the earlier period;

(c) if in the opinion of the Court it is not practicable to take the decennial periods prescribed in clause (a), the Court may, in its discretion, substitute any shorter periods therefor.

[Section 46.] Rules as to enhancement on ground of landlord's improvement.

33. Where an enhancement is claimed on the ground of a landlord's improvement—

(a) the Court shall not grant an enhancement unless the improvement has been registered in accordance with this Act;

(b) in determining the amount of enhancement the Court shall have regard to—

(i) the increase in the productive powers of the lands caused or likely to be caused by the improvement,

(ii) the cost of the improvement,

(iii) the cost of the cultivation required for utilizing the improvement, and

(iv) the existing rent and the ability of the land to bear a higher rent;

40. (1) Where an occupancy-raiyat pays for a holding rent in kind, or on the estimated value of a portion of the crop, or at rates varying with the crop, or partly in one of those ways and partly in another, either the raiyat or his landlord may apply to have the rent commuted to a money-rent.

Commutation of rent payable in kind.

(2) The application may be made to the Collector or Sub-divisional Officer, or to an officer making a settlement of rents under Chapter X, or to any other officer specially authorized in this behalf by the Local Government.

(3) On the receipt of the application the officer may determine the sum to be paid as money-rent, and may order that the raiyat shall, in lieu of paying his rent in kind, or otherwise as aforesaid, pay the sum so determined.

(4) In making the determination the officer shall have regard to—

(a) the average money-rent payable by occupancy-raiyats for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity;

(b) the average value of the rent actually received by the landlord during the preceding ten years or during any shorter period for which evidence may be available; and

(c) the charges incurred by the landlord in respect of irrigation under the system of rent in kind, and the arrangements made on commutation for continuing those charges.

(5) The order shall be in writing, shall state the grounds on which it is made, and the time from which it is to take effect, and shall be subject to appeal in like manner as if it were an order made in an ordinary revenue proceeding.

(6) If the application is opposed, the officer shall consider whether under all the circumstances of the case it is reasonable to grant it, and shall grant or refuse it accordingly. If he refuses it, he shall record in writing the reasons for the refusal.

CHAPTER VI.

NON-OCCUPANCY-RAIYATS.

[Section 55.]

41. This chapter shall apply to raiyats not having a right of occupancy, who are in this Act referred to as non-occupancy-raiyats.

Application of chapter.

[Section 56.

42. When a non-occupancy-raiyat is admitted to the occupation of land, he shall become liable to pay such rent as may be agreed on between himself and his landlord at the time of his admission.

Initial rent of non-occupancy-raiyat.

[Section 57.]

43. The rent of a non-occupancy-raiyat shall not be enhanced except by registered agreement or by agreement under section 46.

Conditions of enhancement of rent.

(Chapter VII.—Under-raiyats.—Secs. 48-49.)

[C. B., s. 79 (5) B. B., ss. 26, 72 (5). Section 58.]

Grounds on which non-occupancy-raiyat may be ejected.

44. A non-occupancy-raiyat shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be liable to ejectment on one or more of the following grounds, and not otherwise, namely :—

(a) on the ground that he has failed to pay an arrear of rent ;

(b) on the ground that he has used the land in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of the tenancy, or that he has broken a condition consistent with this Act, and on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between himself and his landlord, liable to be ejected ;

(c) where he has been admitted to occupation of the land under a registered lease, on the ground that the term of the lease has expired ;

(d) on the ground that he has refused to agree to pay a fair and equitable rent determined under section 46, or that the term for which he is entitled to hold at such a rent has expired.

[Section 59.]

Conditions of ejectment on ground of expiration of lease.

45. A suit for ejectment on the ground of the expiration of the term of a lease shall not be instituted against a non-occupancy-raiyat unless notice to quit has been served on the raiyat not less than six months before the expiration of the term, and shall not be instituted after six months from the expiration of the term.

[Section 60.]

Conditions of ejectment on ground of refusal to agree to enhancement.

46. (1) A suit for ejectment on the ground of refusal to agree to an enhancement of rent shall not be instituted against a non-occupancy-raiyat unless the landlord has tendered to the raiyat an agreement to pay the enhanced rent, and the raiyat has within three months before the institution of the suit refused to execute the agreement.

(2) A landlord desiring to tender an agreement to a raiyat under this section may file it in the office of such Court or officer as the Local Government appoints in this behalf for service on the raiyat. The Court or officer shall forthwith cause it to be served on the raiyat in the prescribed manner, and when it has been so served it shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to have been tendered.

(3) If a raiyat on whom an agreement has been served under sub-section (2) executes it, and within one month from the date of service files it in the office from which it issued, it shall take effect from the commencement of the agricultural year next following.

(4) When an agreement has been executed and filed by a raiyat under sub-section (3), the Court or officer in whose office it is so filed shall forthwith cause a notice of its being so executed and filed to be served on the landlord in the prescribed manner.

(5) If the raiyat does not execute the agreement and file it under sub-section (3), he shall be deemed for the purposes of this section to have refused to execute it.

(6) If a raiyat refuses to execute an agreement tendered to him under this section, and the landlord thereupon institutes a suit to eject him, the Court shall determine what rent is fair and equitable for the holding.

(7) If the raiyat agrees to pay the rent so determined, he shall be entitled to remain in occupation of his holding at that rent for a term of five years from the date of the agreement, but on the expiration of that term shall be liable to ejectment under the conditions mentioned in the last foregoing section, unless he has acquired a right of occupancy.

(8) If the raiyat does not agree to pay the rent so determined, the Court shall pass a decree for ejectment.

(9) In determining what rent is fair and equitable the Court shall have regard to the rents generally paid by raiyats for land of a similar description and with like advantages in the same village.

(10) A decree for ejectment passed under this section shall take effect from the end of the agricultural year in which it is passed.

[Sectio

Explanation of "admitted to occupation"

47. Where a raiyat has been in occupation of land and a lease is executed with a view to a continuance of his occupation, he is not to be deemed to be admitted to occupation by that lease for the purposes of this chapter, notwithstanding that the lease may purport to admit him to occupation.

CHAPTER VII.

UNDER-RAIYATS.

[Sectio

Limit of rent recoverable from under-raiyats

48. The landlord of an under-raiyat holding at a money-rent shall not be entitled to recover rent exceeding the rent which he himself pays by more than the following percentage of the same, namely :—

(a) when the rent payable by the under-raiyat is payable under a registered lease or agreement—fifty per cent.; and

(b) in any other case—twenty-five per cent.

[Sectio

Restriction on ejectment of under-raiyats.

49. An under-raiyat shall not be liable to be ejected by his landlord, except at the end of an agricultural year and after a written notice to quit has been served on him in the prescribed manner not less than six months before the expiration of that year.

(2) In determining the area for which rent has been previously paid, the Court shall, if so required by any party to the suit, have regard to—

(a) the origin and conditions of the tenancy, for instance, whether the rent was a consolidated rent for the entire holding;

(b) whether the tenant has been allowed to hold additional land in consideration of an addition to his total rent or otherwise with the knowledge and consent of the landlord;

(c) the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area; and

(d) the length of the measure used or in local use at the time of the origin of the tenancy as compared with that used or in local use at the time of the institution of the suit.

(3) In determining the amount to be added to the rent, the Court shall have regard to the rates payable by tenants of the same class for lands of a similar description and with similar advantages in the vicinity, and, in the case of a tenure-holder, to the profits to which he is entitled in respect of the rent of his tenure, and shall not in any case fix any rent which under the circumstances of the case is unfair or inequitable.

(4) The amount abated from the rent shall bear the same proportion to the rent previously payable as the diminution of the total yearly value of the holding bears to the previous total yearly value thereof, or, in default of satisfactory proof of the yearly value of the land lost, shall bear to the rent previously payable the same proportion as the diminution of area bears to the previous area of the holding.

56. (1) Every tenant who makes a payment on account of rent to his landlord shall be entitled to obtain forthwith from the landlord a written receipt for the amount paid by him, signed by the landlord.

Tenant making payment to his landlord entitled to a receipt.

(2) The landlord shall prepare and retain a counterfoil of the receipt.

(3) The receipt and counterfoil shall specify such of the several particulars shown in the form of receipt given in Schedule II to this Act as can be specified by the landlord at the time of payment:

Provided that the Local Government may from time to time prescribe or sanction a modified form either generally or for any particular local area or class of cases.

(4) If a receipt does not contain substantially the particulars required by this section, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is shown, to be an acquittance in full of all demands for rent up to the date on which the receipt was given.

57. (1) Where a landlord admits that all rent payable by a tenant to the end of the agricultural year has been paid, the tenant shall be entitled to receive from the landlord, free of charge, within three months after the end of the year, a receipt in full discharge of all rent falling due to the end of the year, signed by the landlord.

Tenant entitled to full discharge or statement of account at close of year.

(2) Where the landlord does not so admit, the tenant shall be entitled, on paying a fee of four annas, to receive within three months after the end of the year a statement of account specifying the several particulars shown in the form of account given in Schedule II to this Act, or in such other form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government either generally or for any particular local area or class of cases.

(3) The landlord shall prepare and retain a copy of the statement containing similar particulars.

58. (1) If a landlord refuses or neglects to deliver to a tenant a receipt containing the particulars prescribed by section 56 for any rent paid by the tenant, the tenant may, within six months from the date of payment, institute a suit to recover from him such penalty, not exceeding double the amount or value of that rent, as the Court thinks fit.

(3) If a landlord fails to prepare and retain a counterfoil or copy of a receipt or statement as required by either of the said sections, he shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

59. (1) The Local Government shall cause to be prepared and kept for sale to landlords at all sub-divisional offices forms of receipts with counterfoils and of statements of account suitable for use under the foregoing sections.

Local Government to prepare forms of receipt and account.

(2) The forms may be sold in books with the leaves consecutively numbered or otherwise as the Local Government thinks fit.

60. Where rent is due to the proprietor, manager or mortgagee of an estate, the receipt of the person registered under the Land Registration Act, 1876, as proprietor, manager or mortgagee of that estate, or of his agent authorized in that behalf, shall be a sufficient discharge for the rent; and the person liable for the rent shall not be entitled to plead in defence to a claim by the person so registered that the rent is due to any third person.

(3) If no payment is made under this section before the expiration of three years from the date on which a deposit is made, the amount deposited may, in the absence of any order of a Civil Court to the contrary, be repaid to the depositor upon his application and on his returning the receipt given by the Court with which the rent was deposited.

(4) No suit or other proceeding shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council, or against any officer of the Government, in respect of anything done by a Court receiving a deposit under the foregoing sections; but nothing in this section shall prevent any person entitled to receive the amount of any such deposit from recovering the same from a person to whom it has been paid under this section.

Arrears of rent.

65. Where a tenant is a tenure-holder, a raiyat holding at fixed rates or an occupancy-raiyat, he shall not be liable to ejectment for arrears of rent, but his tenure or holding shall be liable to sale in execution of a decree for the rent thereof, and the rent shall be a first charge thereon.

Order for appraising or dividing produce.

69. (1) Where rent is taken by appraisement or division of the produce,—

(a) if either the landlord or the tenant neglects to attend, either personally or by agent, at the proper time for making the appraisement or division, or

(b) if there is a dispute about the quantity, value or division of the produce, the Collector may, on the application of either party, and on his depositing such sum on account of expenses as the Collector may require, make an order appointing such officer as he thinks fit to appraise or divide the produce.

(2) The Collector may, without such an application, make the like order in any case where in the opinion of the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate the making of the order would be likely to prevent a breach of the peace.

(3) Where a Collector makes an order under this section, he may by order prohibit the removal of the produce until the appraisement or division has been effected.

Procedure where officer appointed.

70. (1) When a Collector appoints an officer under the last foregoing section, the Collector may, in his discretion, direct the officer to associate with himself any other persons as assessors, and may give him instructions regarding the number, qualifications and mode of selection of those assessors (if any), and the procedure to be followed in making the appraisement or division; and the officer shall conform to the instructions so given.

(2) The officer shall, before making an appraisement or division, give notice to the landlord and tenant of the time and place at which the appraisement or division will be made, but if either the landlord or the tenant fails to attend either personally or by agent, he may proceed ex parte.

(3) When the officer has made the appraisement or division, he shall submit a report of his proceedings to the Collector.

(4) The Collector shall consider the report, and, after giving the parties an opportunity of being heard and making such enquiry (if any) as he may think necessary, shall pass such order thereon as he thinks just.

(5) The Collector may, if he thinks fit, refer any question in dispute between the parties for the decision of a Civil Court, but, subject as aforesaid, his order shall be final and shall, on application to a Civil Court by the landlord or the tenant, be enforceable as a decree.

(6) Where the officer makes an appraisement, the appraisement papers shall be filed in the Collector's office.

Rights and liabilities as to possession of crop.

71. (1) Where rent is taken by appraisement of the produce, the tenant shall be entitled to the exclusive possession of the produce.

(2) Where rent is taken by division of the produce, the tenant shall be entitled to the exclusive possession of the whole produce until it is divided, but shall not be entitled to remove any portion of the produce from the threshing-floor at such a time or in such a manner as to prevent the due division thereof at the proper time.

(3) In either case the tenant shall be entitled to cut and harvest the produce in due course of husbandry without any interference on the part of the landlord.

(4) If the tenant removes any portion of the produce at such a time or in such a manner as to prevent the due appraisement or division thereof at the proper time, the produce shall be deemed to have been as full as the fullest crop of the same description appraised in the neighbourhood on similar land for that harvest.

Definition of "improvement."

Improvement

(2) Until the contrary is shown, the following shall be presumed to be improvements within the meaning of this section:—

(a) the construction of wells, tanks, water-channels and other works for the storage, supply or distribution of water for the purposes of agriculture, or for the use of men and cattle employed in agriculture;

(b) the preparation of land for irrigation;

(c) the drainage, reclamation from rivers or other waters, or protection from floods, or from erosion or other damage by water, of land used for agricultural purposes, or waste-land which is culturable;

(d) the reclamation, clearance, enclosure or permanent improvement of land for agricultural purposes;

(e) the renewal or re-construction of any of the foregoing works, or alterations therein, or additions thereto; and

(f) the erection of a suitable dwelling-house for the raiyat and his family, together with all necessary out-offices.

(3) But no work executed by the raiyat of a holding shall be deemed to be an improvement for the purposes of this Act if it substantially diminishes the value of his landlord's property.

77. Where a raiyat holds at fixed rates, his landlord shall not be entitled, as such, to prevent him from making any improvement in respect of his holding.

[Section 88.

Right to make improvements in case of holding at fixed rates.

78. (1) Where a raiyat has an occupancy-right in his holding, neither the raiyat nor his landlord shall, as such, be entitled to prevent the other from making an improvement in respect of the holding, except on the ground that he is willing to make it himself.

Right to make improvement in case of occupancy-holding.

(2) If both the raiyat and his landlord wish to make the same improvement, the raiyat shall have the prior right to make it, unless it affects another holding or other holdings under the same landlord.

(3) If a question arises between the raiyat and his landlord—

(a) as to the right to make an improvement, or

(b) as to whether a particular work is an improvement, the Collector may, on the application of either party, decide the question, and his decision shall be final.

Improvements. works incidental thereto, and to erect a suitable dwelling-house for himself and his family, with all necessary out-offices; but shall not, except as aforesaid and as next hereinafter provided, be entitled to make any other improvement in respect of his holding without his landlord's permission.

(2) A non-occupancy-raiyat who would, but for the want of his landlord's permission, be entitled to make an improvement in respect of his holding, may, if he desires that the improvement be made, deliver, or cause to be delivered, to his landlord a request in writing calling upon him to make the improvement within a reasonable time; and, if the landlord is unable or neglects to comply with that request, may make the improvement himself.

[Section 91.] 80. (1) A landlord may, by application to such Revenue officer as the Local Government may appoint, register any improvement which he has lawfully made or which has been lawfully made at his expense or which he has assisted a tenant in making.

Registration of landlord's improvements.

(2) The application shall be in such form, shall contain such information, and shall be verified in such manner, by local inquiry or otherwise, as the Local Government from time to time by rule directs.

(3) The officer receiving the application may reject it if it has not been made within twelve months—

(a) in the case of improvements made before the commencement of this Act—from the commencement of this Act;

(b) in the case of improvements made after the commencement of this Act—from the date of the completion of the work.

Section 92.] 81. (1) If any landlord or tenant of a holding desires that evidence relating to any improvement made in respect thereof be recorded, he may apply to a Revenue-officer, who shall thereupon, at a time and place of which notice shall be given to the parties, record the evidence, unless he considers that there are no reasonable grounds for making the application, or it is made to appear that the subject-matter thereof is under inquiry in a Civil Court.

Application to record evidence as to improvement.

(2) When any matter has been recorded under this section, the record thereof shall be admissible in evidence in any subsequent proceedings between the landlord and tenant or any persons claiming under them.

[C. B., ss. 20 (e) and 29. Section 93.] 82. (1) Every raiyat who is ejected from his holding shall be entitled to compensation for improvements which have been made in respect thereof in accordance with this Act by him, or by his predecessor in interest, and for which compensation has not already been paid.

Compensation for raiyats' improvements.

(2) Whenever a Court makes a decree or order for the ejectment of a raiyat, it shall determine the amount of compensation (if any) due under this section to the raiyat for improvements, and shall make the decree or order of ejectment conditional on the payment of that amount to the raiyat. Improv

(3) No compensation under this section for an improvement shall be claimable where the raiyat has made the improvement in pursuance of a contract or under a lease binding him, in consideration of some substantial advantage to be obtained by him, to make the improvement without compensation, and he has obtained that advantage.

(4) Improvements made by a raiyat between the 2nd day of March, 1883, and the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to have been made in accordance with this Act.

(5) The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, make rules requiring the Court to associate with itself, for the purpose of estimating the compensation to be awarded under this section for an improvement, such number of assessors as the Local Government thinks fit, and determining the qualifications of those assessors and the mode of selecting them.

[Sectio

83. (1) In estimating the compensation to be awarded under the last foregoing section for an improvement, regard shall be had—

Principle on which compensation is to be estimated.

(a) to the amount by which the value, or the produce, of the holding, or the value of that produce, is increased by the improvement;

(b) to the condition of the improvement, and the probable duration of its effects;

(c) to the labour and capital required for the making of such an improvement;

(d) to any reduction or remission of rent or any other advantage given by the landlord to the raiyat in consideration of the improvement; and

(e) in the case of a reclamation or of the conversion of unirrigated into irrigated land, to the length of time during which the raiyat has had the benefit of the improvement at an unenhanced rent.

(2) When the amount of the compensation has been assessed, the Court may, if the landlord and raiyat agree, direct that, instead of being paid wholly in money, it shall be made wholly or partly in some other way.

Acquisition of land for building and other purposes.

84. A Civil Court may, on the application of the landlord of a holding, and on being satisfied that he is desirous of acquiring the holding or part thereof for some reasonable and sufficient purpose having relation to the good of the holding or of the estate in which it is comprised, including the use of the ground as building ground, or for any religious, educational or charitable purpose, and on being satisfied on the certificate of the Collector that the purpose is reasonable and sufficient, authorise the acquisition thereof by the landlord upon such conditions as the Court may think fit, and require the tenant to sell his interest in the whole or such part of the holding to the landlord upon such terms as may be approved by the Court, including full compensation to the tenant.

Sub-letting.

...letting,

85. (1) If a raiyat sub-lets otherwise than by a registered instrument, the sub-lease shall not be valid against his landlord unless made with the landlord's consent.

Restrictions on sub-letting.

(2) A sub-lease by a raiyat shall not be admitted to registration if it purports to create a term exceeding nine years.

(3) Where a raiyat has without the consent of his landlord granted a sub-lease by an instrument registered before the commencement of this Act, the sub-lease shall not be valid for more than nine years from the commencement of this Act.

Surrender and abandonment.

...der ...andon-

86. (1) A raiyat not bound by a lease or other agreement for a fixed period may, at the end of any agricultural year, surrender his holding.

Surrender.

...12 (3). ...70 (3). ...s. 72 ...95.]

(2) But, notwithstanding the surrender, the raiyat shall be liable to indemnify the landlord against any loss of the rent of the holding for the agricultural year next following the date of the surrender, unless he gives to his landlord, at least three months before he surrenders, notice of his intention to surrender.

(3) When a raiyat has surrendered his holding the Court shall in the following cases for the purposes of sub-section (2) presume, until the contrary is shown, that such notice was so given, namely:—

(a) if the raiyat takes a new holding in the same village from the same landlord during the agricultural year next following the surrender;

(b) if the raiyat ceases, at least three months before the end of the agricultural year at the end of which the surrender is made, to reside in the village in which the surrendered holding is situate.

(4) The raiyat may, if he thinks fit, cause the notice to be served through the Civil Court within the jurisdiction of which the holding or any portion of it is situate.

(5) When a raiyat has surrendered his holding the landlord may enter on the holding and either let it to another tenant or take it into cultivation himself.

(6) When a holding is subject to an incumbrance secured by a registered instrument, the surrender of the holding shall not be valid unless it is made with the consent of the landlord and the incumbrancer.

(7) Save as provided in the foregoing sub-section, nothing in this section shall affect any arrangement by which a raiyat and his landlord may arrange for a surrender of the whole or a part of the holding.

Surrender and abandonment

87. (1) If a raiyat voluntarily abandons his residence without notice to his landlord and without arranging for payment of his rent as it falls due, and ceases to cultivate his holding either by himself or by some other person, the landlord may, at any time after the expiration of the agricultural year in which the raiyat so abandons and ceases to cultivate, enter on the holding and let it to another tenant or take it into cultivation himself.

Abandonment.

[D. § 12 (4) C.B., s. 79 (4 B.B., s. 72 (4). Section 96.]

(2) Before a landlord enters under this section he shall file a notice in the prescribed form in the Collector's office stating that he has treated the holding as abandoned and is about to enter on it accordingly; and the Collector shall cause the notice to be published in such manner as the Local Government by rule directs.

(3) When a landlord enters under this section, the raiyat shall be entitled to institute a suit for recovery of possession of the land at any time not later than the expiration of two years, or, in the case of a non-occupancy-raiyat, six months, from the date of the publication of the notice; and thereupon the Court may, on being satisfied that the raiyat did not voluntarily abandon his holding, order recovery of possession on such terms, if any, with respect to compensation to persons injured and payment of arrears of rent as to the Court may seem just.

(4) Where the whole or part of a holding has been sub-let by a registered instrument, the landlord shall, before entering under this section on the holding, offer the whole holding to the sub-lessee for the remainder of the term of the sub-lease at the rent paid by the raiyat who has ceased to cultivate the holding, and on condition of the sub-lessee paying up all arrears due from that raiyat. If the sub-lessee refuses or neglects within a reasonable time to accept the offer, the landlord may avoid the sub-lease and may enter on the holding and let it to another tenant or cultivate it himself as provided in sub-sections (1) and (2).

Sub-division of tenancy.

88. A division of a tenure or holding or distribution of the rent payable in respect thereof shall not be binding on the landlord unless it is made with his consent in writing.

Sub-division of tenancy.

Ejectment.

Ejectment. [C. B., s. 79 (5), (6) & (7). B. B., s. 72 (5), (6) and (7). Section 98]

89. No tenant shall be ejected from his holding except in execution of a decree.

No ejectment except in execution of decree.

Measurements.

Measurements. [D. § 58. C.B., s. 75. B. B., s. 67. Section 99.]

90. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section and any contract, a landlord may, by himself, or by any person authorized by him on this behalf, enter on and measure all land comprised in his estate or tenure, other than land exempt from the payment of revenue.

Landlord's right to measure land.

(2) A landlord shall not, without the consent of the tenant, or the written permission of the Collector, be entitled to measure land more than once in ten years, except in the following cases :—

(a) where the area of the holding is liable, by reason of alluvion or diluvion, to vary from year to year, and the rent payable depends on the area ;

(b) where the area under cultivation is liable to vary from year to year and the rent payable depends on the area under cultivation;

(c) where the landlord is a purchaser otherwise than by voluntary transfer and not more than two years have elapsed since the date of his entry under the purchase.

(3) The ten years shall be computed from the date of the last measurement, whether made before or after the commencement of this Act.

[D. § 94. B B., ss. 176 & 177. Section 100].

91. (1) Where a landlord desires to measure any land which he is entitled to measure under the last foregoing section, the Civil Court may, on the application of the landlord, make an order requiring the tenant to attend and point out the boundaries of the land.

Power for Court to order tenant to attend and point out boundaries.

(2) If the tenant refuses or neglects to comply with the order, a map or other record of the boundaries and measurements of the land, prepared under the direction of the landlord at the time when the tenant was directed to attend, shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is shown.

[D. § 94. C.B., s. 76(a). B B, s. 68 (c). Section 101.]

92. (1) Every measurement of land made by order of a Civil Court, or of a Revenue-officer, in any suit or proceeding between a landlord and tenant, shall be made by the acre, unless the Court or Revenue-officer directs that it be made by any other specified standard.

Standard of measurement.

(2) If the rights of the parties are regulated by any local measure other than the acre, the acre shall be converted into the local measure for the purposes of the suit or proceeding.

Measure

(3) The Local Government may, after local enquiry, make rules declaring for any local area the standard or standards of measurement locally in use in that area, and every declaration so made shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is shown.

The Court of Wards Act, 1879, applicable to management by Court of Wards.

97. In any case in which the Court of Wards undertakes under section 95 the management of an estate or tenure, so much of the provisions of the Court of Wards Act, 1879, as relates to the management of immoveable property shall apply to the management.

Provisions applicable to manager.

98. (1) A manager appointed under section 95 may, if the District Judge thinks fit, be remunerated by a fixed salary or percentage of the money collected by him as manager, or partly in one way and partly in the other, as the District Judge from time to time directs.

(2) He shall give such security for the proper discharge of his duties as the District Judge directs.

(3) He shall, subject to the control of the District Judge, have, for the purposes of management, the same powers as the co-owners jointly might but for his appointment have exercised, and the co-owners shall not exercise any such power.

(4) He shall deal with and distribute the profits in accordance with the orders of the District Judge.

(5) He shall keep regular accounts, and allow the co-owners or any of them to inspect and take copies of those accounts.

(6) He shall pass his accounts at such period and in such form as the District Judge may direct.

(7) He may make any application which the proprietors could make under section 103.

(8) He shall be removeable by the order of the District Judge, and not otherwise.

Power to restore management to co-owners.

99. When an estate or tenure has been placed under the management of the Court of Wards, or a manager has been appointed for the same under section 95, the District Judge may at any time direct that the management of it be restored to the co-owners, if he is satisfied that the management will be conducted by them without inconvenience to the public or injury to private rights.

Power to make rules.

100. The High Court may from time to time make rules defining the powers and duties of managers under the foregoing sections.

CHAPTER X.

Record-of-rights and Settlement of Rents.

[Sections 110 & 117.]

Power to order preparation of record-of-rights.

101. (1) The Local Government may, in any case with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and may, if it thinks fit, without such sanction in any of the cases next hereinafter mentioned, make an order directing that a survey be made, and a record-of-rights be prepared, in respect of the lands in a local area by a Revenue-officer.

(2) The cases in which an order may be made under this section without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council are the following, namely:—

(a) where the landlord or a large proportion of the landlords or of the tenants applies for such an order and deposits, or gives security for, such amount, for the payment of expenses, as the Local Government directs;

(b) where the preparation of such a record is calculated to settle or avert a serious dispute existing or likely to arise between the tenants and their landlords generally;

(c) where the local area is comprised in an estate or tenure which belongs to or is managed by the Government or the Court of Wards; and (d) where a settlement of revenue is being made in respect of the local area.

(3) A notification in the official Gazette of an order under this section shall be conclusive evidence that the order has been duly made.

[Sections 111 & 118 (1).]

Particulars to be recorded.

102. Where an order is made under the last foregoing section, the particulars to be recorded shall be specified in the order, and may include, either without or in addition to other particulars, some or all of the following, namely:—

(a) the name of each tenant;

(b) the class to which he belongs, that is to say, whether he is a tenure-holder, raiyat holding at fixed rates, occupancy-raiyat, non-occupancy-raiyat or under-raiyat, and, if he is a tenure-holder, whether he is a permanent tenure-holder or not, and whether his rent is liable to enhancement during the continuance of his tenure;

(c) the situation, quantity and boundaries of the land held by him;

(d) the name of his landlord;

(e) the rent payable;

(f) the mode in which that rent has been fixed, whether by contract, by order of a Court, or otherwise;

(g) if the rent is a gradually increasing rent, the time at which, and the steps by which, it increases;

(h) the special conditions and incidents, if any, of the tenancy.

[Section 112.]

Power for Revenue-officer to record particulars on application of proprietor or tenure-holder.

103. On the application of a proprietor or tenure-holder, and on his depositing or giving security for the required amount for expenses, a Revenue-officer may, subject to and in accordance with rules made in this behalf by the Local Government, ascertain and record the particulars specified in the last foregoing section with respect to the estate or tenure or any part thereof.

[Section 118 (3).]

Procedure as to recording or settling rents.

104. (1) When, in any proceeding under this chapter, it does not appear that the tenant is holding land in excess of or less than that for which he is paying rent, and neither the landlord nor the tenant applies for a settlement of rent, the officer shall record the rent payable by the tenant, and the land in respect of which the rent is payable.

(2) When it appears that a tenant is holding land in excess of, or less than, that for which he is paying rent, or either the landlord or the tenant applies for a settlement of rent, or in any case under section 101, sub-section (2), clause (d), the officer shall settle a fair and equitable rent in respect of the land held by the tenant.

[Section 118 (4)

(3) In settling rents under this section, the officer shall presume, until the contrary is proved, that the existing rent is fair and equitable, and shall have regard to the rules laid down in this Act for the guidance of the Civil Court in increasing or reducing rents.

[Sections 118 & 118 (7).]

Publication of record.

105. (1) When the Revenue-officer has completed a record made under this chapter, he shall cause a draft thereof to be locally published in the prescribed manner and for the prescribed period, and shall receive and consider any objection which may be made to any entry therein during the period of publication.

(2) After the expiration of this period the Revenue-officer shall finally frame the record, and shall cause it to be locally published in the prescribed manner, and the publication shall be conclusive evidence that the record has been duly made under this chapter.

[Sections 114 & 118 (2).]

Procedure in case of dispute as to entries in record.

106. If at any time before the final publication of the record under the last foregoing section a dispute arises as to the correctness of any entry (not being an entry of a rent settled under this chapter), or as to the propriety of any omission, which the Revenue-officer proposes to make or has made therein or therefrom, the Revenue-officer shall hear and decide the dispute.

[Sections 114 & 118

Procedure to be adopted by Revenue-officer.

107. In all proceedings for the settlement of rents under this chapter, and in all proceedings under the last foregoing section, the Revenue-officer shall, subject to rules made by the Local Government under this Act, adopt the procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure for the trial of suits, and his decision in every such proceeding shall have the force of a decree. XIV 1882

Appeals from decisions of Revenue-officers.

108. (1) The Local Government shall appoint one or more persons to be a Special Judge or Special Judges for the purpose of hearing appeals from the decisions of Revenue-officers under the last foregoing section.

(2) An appeal shall lie to the Special Judge from the decision of a Revenue-officer under the last foregoing section, and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to appeals shall, as nearly as may be, apply to all such appeals. XIV 882

(3) Subject to the provisions of Chapter XLII of the Code of Civil Procedure, an appeal shall lie to the High Court from the decision of a Special Judge in any case under section 106 as if he were a Court subordinate to the High Court within the meaning of the first section of that chapter: XIV 1882.

[Sectio 118 (6)

Provided that, if in a second appeal the High Court alters the decision of the Special Judge in respect of any of the particulars with reference to which the rent of any holding has been settled, the Court may settle a new rent for the holding, but in so doing shall be guided by the rents of the other holdings of the same class comprised in the same record as ascertained or settled under section 104.

[Sectio & 118(

Undisputed entries in record to be presumptive evidence.

109. (1) Every record made under this chapter shall distinguish between the disputed and the undisputed entries therein.

(2) Every undisputed entry in the record shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved.

[Sectio

Time at which settlement of rent is to take effect.

110. When any rent is settled under this chapter, the settlement shall take effect from the beginning of the agricultural year next after the final publication of the record.

[Sectio (4).]

Stay of proceedings in Civil Court during preparation of record.

111. When an order has been made under section 101,—

(a) a Civil Court shall not, until the final publication of the record, entertain a suit or application for the alteration of the rent or the determination of the status of any tenant in the area to which the order applies; and

(b) the High Court may, if it thinks fit, transfer to the Revenue-officer any proceedings pending in a local Court for the alteration of any such rent or for the determination of any of the matters specified or referred to in section 102.

(Chaper XI.—Record of Proprietors' Private Lands.—Secs. 116-120.)

(Chapter XII.—Distraint.—Sec. 121.)

Power to authorize a special settlement in special cases.

112. (1) The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, on being satisfied that the exercise of the powers hereinafter mentioned is necessary in the interests of public order or of the local welfare, invest a Revenue-officer acting under this chapter with the following powers or either of them, namely :—

(a) power to settle all rents ;

(b) power, when settling rents, to reduce rents if in the opinion of the officer the maintenance of existing rents would on any ground, whether specified in this Act or not, be unfair or inequitable.

(2) The powers given under this section may be made exercisable within a specified area either generally or with reference to specified cases or classes of cases.

[20.] Period for which rents as settled are to remain unaltered.

113. When the rent of a tenure or holding is settled under this chapter, it shall not, except on the ground of a landlord's improvement or of a subsequent alteration in the area of the tenure or holding, be enhanced, in the case of a tenure or an occupancy-holding for fifteen years, and in the case of a non-occupancy-holding, if the rent is settled in any case under section 112 or on the application of the landlord under section 104, for five years. The periods of fifteen and five years shall be counted from the date of the final publication of the record.

21.] Expenses of proceedings under chapter.

114. Where an order is made under this chapter in any case except under section 101, sub-section (2), clause (d), the expenses incurred by the Government in carrying out the provisions of this chapter in any local area, or such part of those expenses as the Local Government may direct, shall be defrayed by the landlords and tenants of land in that local area, in such proportions as the Local Government, having regard to all the circumstances of each case, may determine ; and the proportion of those expenses so to be defrayed by any person shall be recoverable by the Government from him as if it were an arrear of revenue due by him.

Presumption as to fixity of rent not to apply where record has been prepared.

115. When the particulars mentioned in section 102, clause (b), have been recorded under this chapter in respect of any tenancy, the presumption under section 50 shall not thereafter apply to that tenancy.

CHAPTER XI.

Record of Proprietors' Private Lands.

Saving as to khámár land.

116. Nothing in Chapter V shall confer a right of occupancy in, and nothing in Chapter VI shall apply to, proprietor's private lands known in Bengal as khámár, nij or nij-jot, and in Behar as zirát, nij, sír or kamat, where any such land is held under a lease for a term of years or under a lease from year to year. [B. B., s. 19, Expl. III(b). Expl. IV (f) Section 30]

Power for Government to order survey and record of proprietor's private lands.

117. The Local Government may, from time to time, make an order directing a Revenue-officer to make a survey and record of all the lands in a specified local area which are a proprietor's private lands within the meaning of the last foregoing section. [B.B., ss. 76 & 82. Section 135.]

Power for Revenue-officer to record private land on application of proprietor or tenant.

118. In the case of any land alleged to be a proprietor's private land, on the application of the proprietor or of any tenant of the land, and on his depositing the required amount for expenses, a Revenue-officer may, subject to and in accordance with rules made in this behalf by the Local Government, ascertain and record whether the land is or is not a proprietor's private land. Rules for determination of proprietor's private land.

120. (1) The Revenue-officer shall record as a proprietor's private land— [C. B., s. 81. B.B., ss. 8 & 75. Section 138.]

(a) land which is proved to have been cultivated as khámár, zirát, sír, nij, nij-jot or kumat by the proprietor himself with his own stock or by his own servants or by hired labour for twelve continuous years immediately before the passing of this Act, and

(b) cultivated land which is recognized by village usage as proprietor's khámár, zirát, sír, nij, nij-jot or kamat.

(2) In determining whether any other land ought to be recorded as a proprietor's private land, the officer shall have regard to local custom and to the question whether the land was before the second day of March, 1883, specifically let as proprietor's private land and to any other evidence that may be produced ; but shall presume that land is not a proprietor's private land until the contrary is shown.

(3) If any question arises in a Civil Court as to whether land is or is not a proprietor's private land, the Court shall have regard to the rules laid down in this section for the guidance of Revenue-officers.

CHAPTER XII.

Distraint.

Cases in which an application for distraint may be made.

121. Where an arrear of rent is due to the landlord of a raiyat or under-raiyat, and has not been due for more than a year, and no [B. B., ss. 101, 104, 121 Section 139 security has been accepted therefor by the landlord, the landlord may, in addition to any other remedy to which he is entitled by law, present an application to the Civil Court requesting the Court to recover the arrear by distraining, while in the possession of the cultivator—

(a) any crops or other products of the earth standing or ungathered on the holding;

(b) any crops or other products of the earth which have been grown on the holding and have been reaped or gathered and are deposited on the holding, or on a threshing-floor or place for treading out grain, or the like, whether in the fields or within a homestead:

Provided that an application shall not be made under this section—

VII (B.C.) of 1876

(1) by a proprietor or manager as defined under the Land Registration Act, 1876, or a mortgagee of such a proprietor or manager, unless his name and the extent of his interest in the land in respect of which the arrear is due have been registered under the provisions of that Act; or

(2) for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable for the holding in the preceding agricultural year, unless that sum is payable under a written contract or in consequence of a proceeding under this Act or an enactment hereby repealed; or

[B. B., ss. 71, 25.]

(3) in respect of the produce of any part of the holding which the tenant has sub-let with the written consent of the landlord.

[B B., ss. 104 & 105. Section 140.]

122. (1) Every application under the last foregoing section shall specify—

Form of application.

(a) the holding in respect of which the arrear is claimed, and the boundaries thereof, or such other particulars as may suffice for its identification;

(b) the name of the tenant;

(c) the period in respect of which the arrear is claimed;

(d) the amount of the arrear, with the interest, if any, claimed thereon, and, when an amount in excess of the rent payable by the tenant in the last preceding agricultural year is claimed, the contract, or proceeding, as the case may be, under which that amount is payable;

(e) the nature and approximate value of the produce to be distrained;

(f) the place where it is to be found, or such other particulars as may suffice for its identification; and

(g) if it is standing or ungathered, the time at which it is likely to be cut or gathered.

(2) The application shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure for the signing and verification of plaints.

XI 18(

123. (1) The applicant shall, at the time of filing an application under the foregoing sections, file in Court such documentary evidence (if any) as he may consider necessary for the purposes of the application.

[B. 105 Sec

Procedure on receipt of application.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, examine the applicant, and shall, with as little delay as possible, admit the application or reject it, or permit the applicant to furnish additional evidence in support of it.

(3) Where a Court cannot forthwith admit or reject an application under sub-section (2), it may, if it thinks fit, make an order prohibiting the removal of the produce specified in the application pending the execution of an order for distraining the same or the rejection of the application.

(4) When an order for distraining any produce is made under this section at a considerable time before the produce is likely to be cut or gathered, the Court may suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may if it thinks fit make a further order prohibiting the removal of the produce pending the execution of the order for distraint.

124. If an application is admitted under the last foregoing section, the Court shall depute an officer to distrain the produce specified therein, or such portion of that produce as it thinks fit; and the officer shall proceed to the place where the produce is, and distrain the produce by taking charge of it himself or placing some other person in charge of it in his behalf, and publishing a notification of the distraint in accordance with rules to that effect to be made by the High Court:

[B Sec

Execution of order of distraint.

Provided that produce which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be distrained under this section at any time less than twenty days before the time when it would be fit for reaping or gathering.

125. (1) The distraining officer shall, at the time of making the distraint, serve on the defaulter a written demand for the arrear due, and the costs incurred in making the distraint, with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the distraint is made.

[B Se

Service of demand and account.

(2) Where the distraining officer has reason to believe that a person other than the defaulter is the owner of the property distrained, he shall serve copies of the demand and account on that person likewise.

(3) The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally; but if a person on whom they are to be served absconds or conceals himself, or cannot otherwise be found, the officer shall affix copies of the demand and account on the outer door of the house in which he usually resides.

[s. 109 (1) (a) and section 144.]

126. (1) A distraint under this chapter shall not prevent any person from reaping, gathering or storing any produce, or doing any other act necessary for its due preservation.

Right to reap, &c., produce.

(2) If the person entitled to do so fails to do so at the proper time, the distraining officer shall cause any standing crops or ungathered products distrained to be reaped or gathered when ripe, and stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used for the purpose, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood, or shall do whatever else may be necessary for the due preservation of the same.

(3) In either case the distrained property shall remain in the charge of the distraining officer, or of some other person appointed by him in this behalf.

[s. 113, section 145.]

127. (1) Unless the demand, with all costs of the distraint, be immediately satisfied, the distraining officer shall issue a proclamation specifying the particulars of the property distrained and the demand for which it is distrained, and notifying that he will, at a place and on a specified day, not being less than three or more than seven days after the time of making the distraint, sell the distrained property by public auction:

Sale proclamation to be issued unless demand is satisfied.

Provided that when the crops or products distrained from their nature admit of being stored but have not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of their being made ready for storing before its arrival.

(2) The proclamation shall be stuck up on a conspicuous place in the village in which the land is situate for which the arrears of rent are claimed.

[s. 114, section 146.]

128. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is, or at the nearest place of public resort if the distraining officer is of opinion that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

Place of sale.

[s. 111, section 147.]

129. (1) Crops or products which from their nature admit of being stored shall not be sold before they are reaped or gathered and are ready for storing.

When produce may be sold standing.

(2) Crops or products which from their nature do not admit of being stored may be sold before they are reaped or gathered, and the purchaser shall be entitled to enter on the land by himself, or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and do all that is necessary for the purpose of tending and reaping or gathering them.

[B.B., s. 115, Section 148.]

130. The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots, as the officer holding the sale may think advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distraint and sale, is satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distraint shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder Manner of sale.

[B. B., s. 116. Section 149.]

131. If, on the property being put up for sale, a fair price (in the estimation of the officer holding the sale) is not offered for it, and if the owner of the property, or a person authorised to act in his behalf, applies to have the sale postponed till the next day, or (if a market is held at the place of sale) the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until that day, and shall be then completed, whatever price may be offered for the property.

Postponement of sale.

[B. B., s. 117. Section 150.]

132. The price of every lot shall be paid at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale directs, and in default of such payment the property shall be put up again and sold.

Payment of purchase-money.

[B. B., s. 118. Section 151.]

133. When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate describing the property purchased by him and the price paid.

Certificate to be given to purchaser.

[B. B., s. 119. Section 152.]

134. (1) From the proceeds of every sale of distrained property under this chapter, the officer holding the sale shall pay the costs of the distraint and sale, calculated on a scale of charges prescribed by rules to be made by the Local Government in this behalf.

Proceeds of sale how to be applied.

(2) The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, with interest thereon up to the day of sale; and the surplus (if any) shall be paid to the person whose property has been sold.

[B. B., s 120. Section 153.]

135. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are prohibited from purchasing, either directly or indirectly, any property sold by such officers.

Certain officers may not purchase.

[B. B., ss. 111, 112 & 123. Section 154.]

136. (1) If at any time after a distraint has been made under this chapter, and before the sale of the distrained property, the defaulter, or the owner of the distrained property where he is not the defaulter, deposits in the Court issuing the order of distraint, or in the hands of the distraining officer, the amount specified in the demand served under section 125, with all costs which may have been incurred after the service of the demand, the Court or officer, as the case may be, shall grant a receipt for the same and the distraint shall forthwith be withdrawn.

Procedure where demand is paid before the sale.

(2) When the distraining officer receives the deposit, he shall forthwith pay it into the Court.

(3) A receipt granted under this section to an owner of distrained property not being the defaulter shall afford a full protection to him against any subsequent claim for the arrears of rent on account of which the distraint was made.

(4) After the expiration of one month from the date of a deposit being made under this section, the Court shall pay therefrom to the applicant for distraint the amount due to him, unless in the meanwhile the owner of the property distrained has instituted a suit against the applicant contesting the legality of the distraint and claiming compensation in respect of the same.

(5) A landlord shall not be deemed to have consented to his tenant's sub-letting the holding or any part thereof merely by reason of his having received an amount deposited under this section by an inferior tenant.

Amount paid by under-tenant for his lessor may be deducted from rent.

137. (1) When an inferior tenant, on his property being lawfully distrained under this chapter for the default of a superior tenant, makes any payment under the last foregoing section, he shall be entitled to deduct the amount of that payment from any rent payable by him to his immediate landlord, and that landlord, if he is not the defaulter, shall in like manner be entitled to deduct the amount so deducted from any rent payable by him to his immediate landlord, and so on until the defaulter is reached.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the right of an inferior tenant making a payment under the last foregoing section to institute a suit for the recovery from the defaulter of any portion of the amount paid which he has not deducted under this section.

[B.B., s. 126. Section 156.]

Conflict between rights of superior and inferior landlords.

138. When land is sub-let, and any conflict arises under this chapter between the rights of a superior and of an inferior landlord who distrain the same property, the right of the superior landlord shall prevail.

[Section 157.]

Distraint of property which is under attachment.

139. When any conflict arises between an order for distraint issued under this chapter and an order issued by a Civil Court for the attachment or sale of the property which is the subject of the distraint, the order for distraint shall prevail; but, if the property is sold under that order, the surplus proceeds of the sale shall not be paid under section 134 to the owner of the property without the sanction of the Court by which the order of attachment or sale was issued.

[Section 158]

Suit for compensation for wrongful distraint.

140. No appeal shall lie from any order passed by a Civil Court under this chapter; but any person whose property is distrained on an application made under section 121 in any case in which such an application is not permitted by that section may institute a suit against the applicant for the recovery of compensation.

Power for Local Government to authorize distraint in certain cases.

141. (1) When the Local Government is of opinion that in any local area or in any class of cases it would, by reason of the character of the cultivation or the habits of the cultivators, be impracticable for a landlord to realize his rent by an application to the Civil Courts under this chapter, it may, from time to time, by order, authorize the landlord to distrain, by himself or his agent, any produce for the distraint of which he would be entitled to apply to the Civil Court under this chapter:

Provided that every person distraining any produce under such authorization shall proceed in the manner prescribed by section 124, and shall forthwith give notice, in such form as the High Court may, by rule prescribe, to the Civil Court having jurisdiction to entertain an application for distraining the produce, and that Court shall, with no avoidable delay, depute an officer to take charge of the produce distrained.

(2) When an officer of the Court has taken charge of any distrained produce under this section, the proceedings shall thereafter be conducted in all respects as if he had distrained it under section 124.

(3) The Local Government may at any time rescind any order made by it under this section.

Power for High Court to make rules.

142. The High Court may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act for regulating the procedure in all cases under this chapter.

CHAPTER XIII.

JUDICIAL PROCEDURE.

[Section

Power to modify Civil Procedure Code in application to landlord and tenant suits.

143. (1) The High Court may, from time to time, with the approval of the Governor General in Council, make rules consistent with this Act declaring that any portions of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to suits between landlord and tenant as such or to any specified classes of such suits, or shall apply to them subject to modifications specified in the rules.

XIV of 1882.

(2) Subject to any rules so made, and subject also to the other provisions of this Act, the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to all such suits.

XIV of 1882.

[Section

Jurisdiction in proceedings under Act.

144. (1) The cause of action in all suits between landlord and tenant as such shall, for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure, be deemed to have arisen within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the possession of the tenure or holding in connection with which the suit is brought.

XIV of 1882.

(2) When under this Act a Civil Court is authorized to make an order on the application of a landlord or a tenant, the application shall be made to the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the possession of the tenure or holding in connection with which the application is brought.

Náib or gumáshtas to be recognized agents.

145 Every náib or gumáshta of a landlord empowered in this behalf by a written authority under the hand of the landlord shall, for the purposes of every such suit, be deemed to be the recognized agent of the landlord within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, notwithstanding that the landlord may reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is to be instituted or is pending.

Special register of suits.

146. The particulars referred to in section 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall, in the case of such suits, instead of being entered in the register of civil suits prescribed by that section, be entered in a special register to be kept by each Civil Court, in such form as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe in this behalf.

Successive rent-suits.

147. Subject to the provisions of section 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure, where a landlord has instituted a suit against a raiyat for the recovery of any rent of his holding, the landlord shall not institute another suit against him for the recovery of any rent of that holding until after three months from the date of the institution of the previous suit.

Procedure in rent-suits.

148. The following rules shall apply to suits for the recovery of rent:—

(a) sections 121 to 127 (both inclusive), 129, 305, and 320 to 326 (both inclusive) of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to any such suit;

(b) the plaint shall contain, in addition to the particulars specified in section 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a statement of the situation, designation, extent, and boundaries of the land held by the tenant; or, where the plaintiff is unable to give the extent or boundaries, in lieu thereof a description sufficient for identification;

(c) the summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit, unless the Court is of opinion that the summons should be for the settlement of issues only;

(d) the service of the summons may, if the High Court by rule, either generally, or specially for any local area, so directs, be effected, either in addition to, or in substitution for, any other mode of service, by forwarding the summons by post in a letter addressed to the defendant and registered under Part III of the Indian Post Office Act, 1866; when a summons is so forwarded in a letter, and it is proved that the letter was duly posted and registered, the Court may presume that the summons has been duly served;

(e) a written statement shall not be filed without the leave of the Court; [D., § 108 C. B., s 184. B B., s 206.]

(f) the rules for recording the evidence of witnesses prescribed by section 189 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply, whether an appeal is allowed or not; [BB., s. 214.] XIV of 1882.

(g) the Court may, when passing the decree, order on the oral application of the decree-holder the execution thereof, unless it is a decree for ejectment for arrears; [D., §§ 177 & 223 C. B., ss 155 & 197. B B., ss. 171 & 219.]

(h) notwithstanding anything contained in section 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an application for the execution of a decree for arrears obtained by a landlord shall not be made by an assignee of the decree unless the landlord's interest in the land has become and is vested in him. [C. B., s. 198. B B., s 220.] XIV of 1882.

Payment into Court of money admitted to be due to third person.

149. (1) When a defendant admits that money is due from him on account of rent, but pleads that it is due not to the plaintiff but to a third person, the Court shall, except for special reasons to be recorded in writing, refuse to take cognizance of the plea unless the defendant pays into Court the amount so admitted to be due. [Section 164]

(2) Where such a payment is made the Court shall forthwith cause notice of the payment to be served on the third person.

(3) Unless the third person within three months from the receipt of the notice institutes a suit against the plaintiff and therein obtains an order restraining payment out of the money, it shall be paid out to the plaintiff on his application.

(4) Nothing in this section shall affect the right of any person to recover from the plaintiff money paid to him under sub-section (3).

Payment into Court of money admitted to be due to landlord.

150. When a defendant admits that money is due from him to the plaintiff on account of rent, but pleads that the amount claimed is in excess of the amount due, the Court shall, except for special reasons to be recorded in writing, refuse to take cognizance of the plea unless the defendant pays into Court the amount so admitted to be due. [Section 165]

Provision as to payment of portion of money.

151. When a defendant is liable to pay money into Court under either of the two last foregoing sections, if the Court thinks that there are sufficient reasons for so ordering, it may take cognizance of the defendant's plea on his paying into Court such reasonable portion of the money as the Court directs. Court to grant receipt.

[D., § 179. C. B., ss. 157 & 220. B. B., ss. 173 & 242. Section 168.] 153. An appeal shall not lie from any decree or order passed, whether in the first instance or on appeal, in any suit instituted by a landlord for the recovery of rent where—

Appeals in rent-suits.

(a) the decree or order is passed by a District Judge, Additional Judge or Subordinate Judge, and the amount claimed in the suit does not exceed one hundred rupees, or

(b) the decree or order is passed by any other judicial officer specially empowered by the Local Government to exercise final jurisdiction under this section, and the amount claimed in the suit does not exceed fifty rupees;

unless in either case the decree or order has decided a question relating to title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, or a question of a right to enhance or vary the rent of a tenant, or a question of the amount of rent annually payable by a tenant:

Provided that the District Judge may call for the record of any case in which a judicial officer as aforesaid has passed a decree or order to which this section applies, if it appears that the judicial officer has exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him by law, or has failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested, or has acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity; and may pass such order as the District Judge thinks fit.

[C. B., ss. 96 & 98 (b). B. B., ss. 128 & 130, cl. (b). Section 169.] 154. A decree for enhancement of rent under this Act, if passed in a suit instituted in the first eight months of an agricultural year, shall ordinarily take effect on the commencement of the agricultural year next following; and, if passed in a suit instituted in the last four months of the agricultural year, shall ordinarily take effect on the commencement of the agricultural year next but one following; but nothing in this section shall prevent the Court from fixing for special reasons a later date from which any such decree shall take effect.

Date from which decree for enhancement takes effect.

[B B., ss. 21 (e), 31, 44 & 45 Vic., C. 41, s. 14. Section 170.] 155. (1) A suit for the ejectment of a tenant, on the ground—

Relief against forfeitures.

(a) that he has used the land in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of the tenancy, or

(b) that he has broken a condition on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between him and the landlord, liable to ejectment, shall not be entertained unless the landlord has served, in the prescribed manner, a notice on the tenant specifying the particular misuse or breach complained of, and, where the misuse or breach is capable of remedy, requiring the tenant to remedy the same, and, in any case, to pay reasonable compensation for the misuse or breach, and the tenant has failed to comply within a reasonable time with that request.

(2) A decree passed in favour of a landlord in any such suit shall declare the amount of compensation which would reasonably be payable to the plaintiff for the misuse or breach, and whether, in the opinion of the Court, the misuse or breach is capable of remedy, and shall fix a period during which it shall be open to the defendant to pay that amount to the plaintiff, and, where the misuse or breach is declared to be capable of remedy, to remedy the same.

(3) The Court may, from time to time, for special reasons, extend a period fixed by it under sub-section (2).

(4) If the defendant, within the period or extended period (as the case may be) fixed by the Court under this section, pays the compensation mentioned in the decree, and, where the misuse or breach is declared by the Court to be capable of remedy, remedies the misuse or breach to the satisfaction of the Court, the decree shall not be executed.

[C. B., B. B., Section

156. The following rules shall apply in the case of every raiyat ejected from a holding:—

Rights of ejected raiyats in respect of crops and land prepared for sowing.

(a) when the raiyat has, before the date of his ejectment, sown or planted crops in any land comprised in the holding, he shall be entitled, at the option of the landlord, either to retain possession of that land and to use it for the purpose of tending and gathering in the crops, or to receive from the landlord the value of the crops as estimated by the Court executing the decree for ejectment;

(b) when the raiyat has, before the date of his ejectment, prepared for sowing any land comprised in his holding, but has not sown or planted crops in that land, he shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of the labour and capital expended by him in so preparing the land, as estimated by the Court executing the decree for ejectment, together with reasonable interest on that value;

(c) but a raiyat shall not be entitled to retain possession of any land or receive any sum in respect thereof under this section where, after the commencement of proceedings by the landlord for his ejectment, he has cultivated or prepared the land contrary to local usage;

(d) if the landlord elects under this section to allow a raiyat to retain possession of the land, the raiyat shall pay to the landlord, for the use and occupation of the land during the period for which he is allowed to retain possession of the same, such rent as the Court executing the decree for ejectment may deem reasonable.

Power for Court to fix fair rent as alternative to ejectment.

157. When a plaintiff institutes a suit for the ejectment of a trespasser he may, if he thinks fit, claim as alternative relief that the defendant be declared liable to pay for the land in his possession a fair and equitable rent to be determined by the Court, and the Court may grant such relief accordingly.

Application to determine incidents of tenancy.

158. (1) The Court having jurisdiction to determine a suit for the possession of land held by a tenant may, on the application of either the landlord or the tenant, determine all or any of the following matters, namely :—

(a) the situation, quantity and boundaries of the land held by the tenant;

(b) the class to which he belongs, that is to say, whether he is a tenure-holder, raiyat holding at fixed rates, occupancy-raiyat, non-occupancy-raiyat, or under-raiyat, and, if he is a tenure-holder, whether he is a permanent tenure-holder or not and whether his rent is liable to enhancement during the continuance of his tenure; and

(c) the rent payable by him at the time of the application.

(2) If in the opinion of the Court any of these matters cannot be satisfactorily determined without a local inquiry, the Court may direct that a local inquiry be held under Chapter XXV of the Code of Civil Procedure by such Revenue-officer as the Local Government may authorize in that behalf by rule made under section 392 of the said Code.

(3) The order on any application under this section shall have the effect of, and be subject to the like appeal as, a decree.

CHAPTER XIV.

SALE FOR ARREARS UNDER DECREE.

General powers of purchaser as to avoidance of incumbrances.

159. Where a tenure or holding is sold in execution of a decree for arrears due in respect thereof, the purchaser shall take subject to the interests defined in this chapter as "protected interests", but with power to annul the interests defined in this chapter as "incumbrances:" Provided as follows :—

(a) a registered and notified incumbrance within the meaning of this chapter shall not be so annulled except in the case hereinafter mentioned in that behalf;

(b) the power to annul shall be exercisable only in manner by this chapter directed.

Protected interests.

160. The following shall be deemed to be protected interests within the meaning of this chapter— [D., §§ 12 (11) and 155. C. B., ss. 226, Expl., & 210. B. B., ss 228, Expl., & 232. Section 176.]

(a) any under-tenure existing from the time of the Permanent Settlement;

(b) any under-tenure recognized by the settlement proceedings of any current temporary settlement as a tenure at a rent fixed for the period of that settlement;

(c) any lease of land whereon dwelling-houses, manufactories or other permanent buildings have been erected, or permanent gardens, plantations, tanks, canals, places of worship or burning or burying grounds have been made;

(d) any right of occupancy;

(e) the right of a non-occupancy-raiyat to hold for five years at a rent fixed under Chapter VI by a Court, or under Chapter X by a Revenue-officer;

(f) any right conferred on an occupancy-raiyat to hold at a rent which was a fair and reasonable rent at the time the right was conferred; and

(g) any right or interest which the landlord at whose instance the tenure or holding is sold, or his predecessor in title, has expressly and in writing given the tenant for the time being permission to create.

Meaning of "incumbrance" and "registered and notified incumbrance."

161. For the purposes of this chapter— [Section 177.]

(a) the term "incumbrance", used with reference to a tenancy, means any lien, sub-tenancy, easement or other right or interest created by the tenant on his tenure or holding or in limitation of his own interest therein, and not being a protected interest as defined in the last foregoing section;

(b) the term "registered and notified incumbrance", used with reference to a tenure or holding sold or liable to sale in execution of a decree for an arrear of rent due in respect thereof, means an incumbrance created by a registered instrument of which a copy has, not less than three months before the accrual of the arrear, been served on the landlord in manner hereinafter provided. ment and sale of the tenure or holding in execution of the decree, he shall produce a statement showing the parganná, estate and village in which the land comprised in the tenure or holding is situate, the yearly rent payable for the same and the total amount recoverable under the decree.

Attachment and proclamation of sale to be issued simultaneously.

163. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, when the decree-holder makes the application mentioned in the last foregoing section, the Court shall, if under section 245 of the said Code it admits the application and orders execution of the decree as applied for, issue simultaneously the order of attachment and the proclamation required by section 287 of the said Code.

(2) The proclamation shall, in addition to stating and specifying the particulars mentioned in section 287 of the said Code, announce—

(a) in the case of a tenure or a holding of a raiyat holding at fixed rates, that the tenure or holding will first be put up to auction subject to the registered and notified incumbrances, and will be sold subject to those incumbrances if the sum bid is sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs, and that otherwise it will, if the decree-holder so desires, be sold on a subsequent day, of which due notice will be given, with power to annul all incumbrances; and

(b) in the case of an occupancy-holding, that the holding will be sold with power to annul all incumbrances.

(3) The proclamation shall, besides being made in the manner prescribed by section 289 of the said Code, be published by fixing up a copy thereof in a conspicuous place on the land comprised in the tenure or holding ordered to be sold, and shall also be published in such manner as the Local Government may, from time to time, direct in this behalf.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 290 of the said Code, the sale shall not, without the consent in writing of the judgment-debtor, take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days calculated from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been fixed up on the land comprised in the tenure or holding ordered to be sold.

[C. B., s 206, B. B., s 228 (a) and Expl. Section 180.]

Sale of tenure or holding subject to registered and notified incumbrances, and effect thereof.

164. (1) When a tenure or a holding at fixed rates has been advertised for sale under the last foregoing section, it shall be put up to auction, subject to registered and notified incumbrances; and, if the bidding reaches a sum sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs, including the costs of sale, the tenure or holding shall be sold subject to such incumbrances.

(2) The purchaser at a sale under this section may, in manner provided by section 167, and not otherwise, annul any incumbrance upon the tenure or holding not being a registered and notified incumbrance.

Sale of tenure or holding with power to avoid all incumbrances, and effect thereof.

165. (1) If the bidding for a tenure or a holding at fixed rates put up to auction under the last foregoing section does not reach a sum sufficient to liquidate the amount of the decree and costs as aforesaid, and if the decree-holder thereupon desires that the tenure or holding be sold with power to avoid all incumbrances, the officer holding the sale shall adjourn the sale and make a fresh proclamation under section 289 of the Code of Civil Procedure, announcing that the tenure or holding will be put up to auction and sold with power to avoid all incumbrances upon a future day specified therein, not less than fifteen or more than thirty days from the date of the postponement; and upon that day the tenure or holding shall be put up to auction and sold with power to avoid all incumbrances.

(2) The purchaser at a sale under this section may, in manner provided by section 167, and not otherwise, annul any incumbrance on the tenure or holding.

Sale of occupancy-holding with power to avoid all incumbrances, and effect thereof.

166. (1) When an occupancy-holding has been advertised for sale under section 163, it shall be put up to auction and sold with power to avoid all incumbrances.

(2) The purchaser at a sale under this section may in manner provided by the next following section, and not otherwise, annul any incumbrance on the holding.

Procedure for annulling incumbrances under the foregoing sections.

167. (1) A purchaser having power to annul an incumbrance under any of the foregoing sections and desiring to annul the same, may, within one year from the date of the sale or the date on which he first has notice of the incumbrance, whichever is later, present to the Collector an application in writing, requesting him to serve on the incumbrancer a notice declaring that the incumbrance is annulled.

(2) Every such application must be accompanied by such fee for the service of the notice as the Board of Revenue may fix in this behalf.

(3) When an application for service of a notice is made to the Collector in manner prescribed by this section, he shall cause the notice to be served in compliance therewith, and the incumbrance shall be deemed to be annulled from the date on which it is so served.

Power to direct that occupancy-holdings be dealt with under foregoing sections as tenures.

168. (1) The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that occupancy-holdings or any specified class of occupancy-holdings in any local area put up for sale in execution of decrees for rent due on them shall, before being put up with power to avoid all incumbrances, be put up subject to registered and notified incumbrances, and may by like notification rescind any such direction.

(2) While any such direction remains in force in respect of any local area, all occupancy-holdings, or, as the case may be, occupancy-holdings of the specified class in that local area, shall, for the purposes of sale under the foregoing sections of this chapter, be treated in all respects as if they were tenures.

Rules for disposal of the sale-proceeds.

169. (1) In disposing of the proceeds of a sale under this chapter, the following rules, instead of those prescribed by section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be observed, that is to say:—

(a) there shall first be paid to the decree-holder the costs incurred by him in bringing the tenure or holding to sale;

(b) there shall, in the next place, be paid to the decree-holder the amount due to him under the decree in execution of which the sale was made;

(c) if there remains a balance after these sums have been paid, there shall be paid to the decree-holder therefrom any rent which may have fallen due to him in respect of the tenure or holding between the institution of the suit and the date of the sale;

(d) the balance (if any) remaining after the payment of the rent mentioned in clause (c) shall, upon the expiration of two months from the confirmation of the sale, be paid to the judgment-debtor upon his application.

(2) If the judgment-debtor disputes the decree-holder's right to receive any sum on account of rent under clause (c), the Court shall determine the dispute, and the determination shall have the force of a decree.

Tenure or holding to be released from attachment only on payment into Court of amount of decree with costs, or on confession of satisfaction by decree-holder.

170. (1) Sections 278 to 283 (both inclusive) of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to a tenure or holding attached in execution of a decree for arrears due thereon.

(2) When an order for the sale of a tenure or holding in execution of such a decree has been made, the tenure or holding shall not be released from attachment unless, before it is knocked down to the auction-purchaser, the amount of the decree, including the costs decreed, together with the costs incurred in order to the sale, is paid into Court, or the decree-holder makes an application for the release of the tenure or holding on the ground that the decree has been satisfied out of Court.

(3) The judgment-debtor or any person having in the tenure or holding any interest voidable on the sale may pay money into Court under this section.

Amount paid into Court to prevent sale to be in certain cases a mortgage-debt on the holding.

[D., §§ 35,35, 154. C. B., s. 205. B. B., s. 227. Section 188.]

171. (1) When any person having, in a tenure or holding advertised for sale under this chapter, an interest which would be voidable upon the sale, pays into Court the amount requisite to prevent the sale,—

(a) the amount so paid by him shall be deemed to be a debt bearing interest at twelve per centum per annum and secured by a mortgage of the tenure or holding to him;

(b) his mortgage shall take priority of every other charge on the tenure or holding other than a charge for arrear of rent; and

(c) he shall be entitled to possession of the tenure or holding as mortgagee of the tenant and to retain possession of it as such until the debt, with the interest due thereon, has been discharged.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect any other remedy to which any such person would be entitled.

Inferior tenant paying into Court may deduct from rent.

[D., §§ 35, 36, 154. C. B., s. 205. B. B., s. 227. Section 189.]

172. When a tenure or holding is advertised for sale under this chapter in execution of a decree against a superior tenant defaulting, and an inferior tenant, whose interest would be voidable upon the sale, pays money into Court in order to prevent the sale, he may, in addition to any other remedy provided for him by law, deduct the whole or any portion of the amount so paid from any rent payable by him to his immediate landlord; and that landlord, if he is not the defaulter, may in like manner deduct the amount so deducted from any rent payable by him to his immediate landlord, and so on until the defaulter is reached.

Decree-holder may bid at sale; judgment-debtor may not.

XIV of 1882.

[C. B., s. 208 (1). B. B., s. 230 (1). Section 190.]

173. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 294 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the holder of a decree in execution of which a holding is sold under this chapter may, without the permission of the Court, bid for or purchase the tenure or holding.

(2) The judgment-debtor shall not bid for or purchase a holding so sold.

(3) When a judgment-debtor purchases by himself or through another person a holding so sold, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of the decree-holder or any other person interested in the sale, by order set aside the sale, and the costs of the application and order, and any deficiency of price which may happen on the re-sale, and all expenses attending it, shall be paid by the judgment-debtor.

Application by judgment-debtor to set aside sale.

174. (1) Where a tenure or holding is sold for an arrear of rent due thereon, then, at any time within thirty days from the date of sale, the judgment-debtor may apply to have the sale set aside, on his depositing in Court, for payment to the decree-holder, the amount recoverable under the decree with costs, and, for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per cent. of the purchase-money.

(2) If such deposit is made within the thirty days, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale:

XIV of 1882 — Provided that, if a judgment-debtor applies under section 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside the sale of his tenure or holding, he shall not be entitled to make an application under this section.

[Section 191.] XIV of 1882 — (3) Section 313 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not apply to any sale under this chapter.

[Section 192.] 175. Notwithstanding anything contained in Part IV of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, an instrument creating an incumbrance upon any tenure or holding which has been executed before the commencement of this Act, and is not required by section 17 of the said Registration Act to be registered, shall be accepted for registration under that Act if it is presented for that purpose to the proper officer within one year from the commencement of this Act.

Registration of certain instruments creating incumbrances.

III of 1877.

[C. B., s. 206, Expl. B B., s. 2, Expl. Section 193] 176. Every officer who has, whether before or after the passing of this Act, registered an instrument executed by a tenant of a tenure or holding and creating an incumbrance on the tenure or holding, shall, at the request of the tenant or of the person in whose favour the incumbrance is created, and on payment by him of such fee as the Local Government may fix in this behalf, notify the incumbrance to the landlord by causing a copy of the instrument to be served on him in the prescribed manner.

Notification of incumbrances to landlord.

177. Nothing contained in this chapter shall be deemed to enable a person to create an incumbrance which he could not otherwise lawfully create.

Power to create incumbrances not extended.

CHAPTER XV.

CONTRACT AND CUSTOM.

[Section 210.] 178. (1) Nothing in any contract between a landlord and tenant made before or after the passing of this Act—

Restrictions on exclusion of Act by agreement.

(a) shall bar in perpetuity the acquisition of an occupancy-right in land, or

(b) shall take away an occupancy-right in existence at the date of the contract, or

(c) shall entitle a landlord to eject a tenant otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or

(d) shall take away or limit the right of a tenant, as provided by this Act, to make improvements and claim compensation for them.

(2) Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and tenant since the 15th day of July, 1880, and before the passing of this Act shall prevent a raiyat from acquiring in accordance with this Act an occupancy-right in land.

(3) Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and tenant after the passing of this Act shall—

(a) prevent a raiyat from acquiring in accordance with this Act an occupancy-right in land;

(b) take away or limit the right of an occupancy-raiyat to use land as provided by section 23;

(c) take away the right of a raiyat to surrender his holding in accordance with section 86;

(d) take away the right of a raiyat to transfer or bequeath his holding in accordance with local usage;

(e) take away the right of a raiyat to sub let subject to and in accordance with the provisions of this Act;

(f) take away the right of a raiyat to apply for a reduction of rent under section 38 or section 52;

(g) take away the right of a landlord or tenant to apply for a commutation of rent under section 40; or

(h) affect the provisions of section 67 relating to interest payable on arrears of rent:

Provided as follows:—

(i) nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of a lease granted bonâ fide for the reclamation of waste land except that, where, on or after the expiration of the term created by the lease, the lessee would under Chapter V be entitled to an occupancy right in the land comprised in the lease, nothing in the lease shall prevent him from acquiring that right;

(ii) nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of any contract for the temporary cultivation of orchard land with agricultural crops.

179. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent a proprietor or a holder of a permanent tenure in a permanently-settled area from granting a permanent mukarrarí lease on any terms agreed on between him and his tenant.

Permanent mukarrarí leases.

Útbandi, chur and dearah lands. 180. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, a raiyat—

(a) who in any part of the country where the custom of útbandi prevails, holds land ordinarily let under that custom and for the time being let under that custom, and (b) who holds land of the kind known as chur or dearah,— shall not acquire a right of occupancy—

in case (a), in land ordinarily held under the custom of útbandi and for the time being held under that custom, in case (b), in the chur or dearah land—until he has held the land in question for twelve continuous years; and, until he acquires a right of occupancy in the land, he shall be liable to pay such rent for his holding as may be agreed on between him and his landlord.

(2) Chapter VI shall not apply to raiyats holding land under the custom of útbandi in respect of land held by them under that custom.

(3) The Collector may, on the application of either the landlord or the tenant or on a reference from the Civil Court, declare that any land has ceased to be chur or dearah land within the meaning of this section, and thereupon all the provisions of this Act shall apply to the land.

Saving as to service-tenures.

181. Nothing in this Act shall affect any incident of a ghátwálí or other service-tenure, or, in particular, shall confer a right to transfer or bequeath a service-tenure which, before the passing of this Act, was not capable of being transferred or bequeathed.

Homesteads.

182. When a raiyat holds his homestead otherwise than as part of his holding as a raiyat, the incidents of his tenancy of the homestead shall be regulated by local custom or usage, and, subject to local custom or usage, by the provisions of this Act applicable to land held by a raiyat.

Saving of custom.

183. Nothing in this Act shall affect any custom, usage or customary right not inconsistent with, or not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by, its provisions.

Illustrations.

(1) A usage under which a raiyat is entitled to sell his holding without the consent of his landlord is not inconsistent with, and is not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by, the provisions of this Act That usage, accordingly, wherever it may exist, will not be affected by this Act.

(2) The custom or usage that an under-raiyat should, under certain circumstances, acquire a right of occupancy is not inconsistent with, and is not expressly or by necessary implication modified or abolished by, the provisions of this Act. That custom or usage, accordingly, wherever it exists, will not be affected by this Act.

CHAPTER XVI.

LIMITATION.

Limitation in suits, appeals and applications in Schedule III.

[D., §§ 77, 78 & 79. C. B., s. 92. B. B., s. 98. Section 218.]

184. (1) The suits, appeals and applications specified in Schedule III annexed to this Act shall be instituted and made within the time prescribed in that schedule for them respectively; and every such suit or appeal instituted, and application made, after the period of limitation so prescribed, shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been pleaded.

(2) Nothing in this section shall revive the right to institute any suit or appeal or make any application which would have been barred by limitation if it had been instituted or made immediately before the commencement of this Act.

Portions of the Indian Limitation Act not applicable to such suits, &c.

[C. B. s. 93. B. B., s 99. Section 219.]

185. Sections 7, 8 and 9 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, shall not apply to the suits and applications mentioned in the last foregoing section. XV of 1877.

CHAPTER XVII.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Penalties.

Penalties for illegal interference with produce.

Penalties

[B B., ss. 91, 122. Section 220.]

186. (1) If any person, otherwise than in accordance with this Act or some other enactment for the time being in force,—

(a) distrains or attempts to distrain the produce of a tenant's holding, or

(b) resists a distraint duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any property duly distrained under this Act, or

(c) except with the authority or consent of the tenant, prevents or attempts to prevent the reaping, gathering, storing, removing or otherwise dealing with any produce of a holding,

he shall be deemed to have committed criminal trespass within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(2) Any person who abets within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code the doing of any act mentioned in sub-section (1) shall be deemed to have abetted the commission of criminal trespass within the meaning of that Code. XLV of 1860.

Agents and representatives of landlords.

Power for landlord to act through agent.

[Section 221.] Agents and representatives of landlords.

187. (1) Any appearance, application or act, in, before or to any Court or authority, required or authorised by this Act to be made or done by a landlord, may, unless the Court or authority otherwise directs, be made or done also by an agent empowered in this behalf by a written authority under the hand of the landlord.

Agents and representatives of landlords.

(2) Every notice required by this Act to be served on, or given to, a landlord shall, if served on, or given to, an agent empowered as aforesaid to accept service of or receive the same on behalf of the landlord, be as effectual for the purposes of this Act as if it had been served on, or given to the landlord in person.

(3) Every document required by this Act to be signed or certified by a landlord, except an instrument appointing or authorizing an agent, may be signed or certified by an agent of the landlord authorized in writing in that behalf.

[Section 222.]

Joint-landlords to act collectively or by common agent.

188. Where two or more persons are joint-landlords, anything which the landlord is under this Act required or authorized to do must be done either by both or all those persons acting together, or by an agent authorized to act on behalf of both or all of them.

Rules under Act.

[Section 223.] Rules under Act.

Power to make rules regarding procedure, powers of officers and service of notices.

189. The Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, make rules consistent with this Act—

(1) to regulate the procedure to be followed by Revenue-officers in the discharge of any duty imposed upon them by or under this Act, and may by such rules confer upon any such officer—

(a) any power exercised by a Civil Court in the trial of suits;

(b) power to enter upon any land, and to survey, demarcate and make a map of the same, and any power exerciseable by any officer under the Bengal Survey Act, 1875; and

V (B. C.) of 1875.

(c) power to cut and thresh the crops on any land and weigh the produce, with a view to estimating the capabilities of the soil; and

(2) to prescribe the mode of service of notices under this Act where no mode is prescribed by this or any other Act.

[Section 224.]

Procedure for making, publication and confirmation of rules.

190. (1) Every authority having power to make rules under any section of this Act shall, before making the rules, publish a draft of the proposed rules for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

(2) The publication shall be made, in the case of rules made by the Local Government or High Court, in such manner as may in its opinion be sufficient for giving information to persons interested, and, in the case of rules made by any other authority, in the prescribed manner:

Provided that every such draft shall be published in the official Gazette.

(3) There shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date, not earlier than the expiration of one month after the date of publication, at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration. Rules Act.

(4) The authority shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(5) The publication in the official Gazette of a rule purporting to be made under this Act shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made.

(6) All rules made under this Act may, from time to time, be amended, added to or cancelled by the authority having power to make the same.

Provisions as to temporarily-settled districts.

Provi as to rarily distri

Saving as to land held in a district not permanently settled.

191. Where the area comprised in a tenure is situate in an estate which has never been permanently settled, nothing in this Act shall prevent the enhancement of the rent upon the expiration of a temporary settlement of the revenue, unless the right to hold beyond the term of the settlement at a particular rate of rent has been expressly recognized in settlement-proceedings by a Revenue-authority empowered by the Government to make definitively or confirm settlements.

COLMAN MACAULAY,
Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

NOTIFICATION.

The 19th February 1885.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 19 of the Chota Nagpore Encumbered Estates Act, 1876, as amended by Act V of 1884, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has, with the approval of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, made the following rules:—

Rule 1.—An application under section 2 shall not ordinarily be submitted by the Commissioner for the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, unless—

(1) the property consists of an estate paying revenue direct to Government, or entered in the register of revenue-free lands, and having a rental of not less than Rs. 2,000 a year;
(2) the holder is a person of position and influence, and belongs to one of the old families in the Division; and
(3) the debts can be liquidated in 15 years.

In special cases an application may be submitted by the Commissioner in respect of a permanent tenure, when the other conditions above specified exist.

Ordinarily, no immoveable property other than land, or permanent interests in land, shall be brought under the provisions of the Act.

Rule 2.—Every application under section 2 of the Act shall, if made by the holder of immoveable property, or by his heir, or guardian, committee or other legal curator of such holder or heir, be accompanied by a statement of all debts and liabilities due by such holder, together with the names of the creditors and a specification of the date on which each debt was incurred, and also by a statement showing of what property such holder is possessed or to which he is entitled in his own right, or which he is entitled to redeem, and the income derivable therefrom. These statements may, if the Commissioner deem it necessary, be sent to the Deputy Commissioner of the district or districts in which the immoveable property is situated, for enquiry into the correctness or otherwise of such statements, and for report as to whether the property is solvent or not. The Commissioner shall refrain from issuing the vesting order under section 2, if it appears to him on such report or otherwise that the property is hopelessly insolvent.

Rule 3.—When a Deputy Commissioner is of opinion that any property should be brought under the provisions of the Act, he shall ascertain, as far as possible, what debts and liabilities are due by the holder of such property, and what immoveable property he has in his possession, and the income derivable therefrom, and, after enquiry into the solvency or otherwise of the holder, he shall submit the whole of the papers to the Commissioner, who shall issue the vesting order or not according as, in his opinion, the property is solvent or not.

Rule 4.—After the vesting order has been issued, it shall be the duty of the manager to enquire carefully into the solvency of the property, and to make early report on this point to the Commissioner, with a view to the restoration of the property to the owner (under section 12 of the Act, as amended by Act V of 1884) should the property prove to be insolvent.

Rule 5.—Wherever the manager appointed under the Act is not the Deputy Commissioner of the district, the Deputy Commissioner will (subject to such orders, consistent with the provisions of the said Act, as the Commissioner may from time to time issue) exercise a general control over the management of all the properties in his district.

Rule 6.—The security to be required from any manager not being a Government servant, and from subordinate officers under this Act, shall be fixed from time to time by the Commissioner of the Division with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor; provided that no such manager or subordinate officer shall be required to give security for an amount exceeding 25 per cent. of the annual rents and profits of the property on account of which he is employed.

Rule 7.—To every notice published under section 5 of the Act shall be appended a copy of section 6. The notice shall be published at the district cutcherries, moonsifs' courts, and thanas within the jurisdiction of which the property is situated, and shall be affixed to the bhandar of all villages contained within the property and published in all such villages by beat of drum. Whenever possible, special service of such notice shall be made on every known creditor of the property; but the absence of such special service shall not be a bar to proceedings under the Act.

Rule 8.—When any property is restored to the holder or his heir, in accordance with section 12 of the Act, notice of the restoration shall be published at the places mentioned in the preceding rule and in the Calcutta Gazette.

Rule 9.—On the publication of the vesting order under section 2 of the Act, the holder of the property, or his legal representative, shall be called upon to deliver to the manager, within fifteen days, all accounts and other papers connected with the management of the property.

Rule 10.—In determining the amount of any principal debt or liability under section 8 of the Act, claims equitably due may be admitted by the manager if acknowledged by the holder of the property or his legal representative, notwithstanding the existence of some legal defence, such as limitation or insufficiency of stamp.

Rule 11.—The allowance of interest on any principal debt or liability shall not exceed 12 per cent. per annum from the date on which it was incurred to the date of determination, or from the date of determination to the date of payment.

Rule 12.—Notice shall be given to each creditor of the date on which orders will be passed by the manager on his claim. If any oral evidence in support of the claim is adduced, it shall be recorded by the manager in the English language, and shall be filed with the papers relating to the claim. The manager may from time to time, as seems necessary, adjourn the passing of orders on any claim. Notice of such adjournment shall be given to the claimant or his representative.

Rule 13.—The manager shall record in the English language reasons for his decision on each claim, and within one week of the date of such decision, a copy thereof shall be prepared in the vernacular of the district for delivery to the creditor on application.

Rule 14.—The scheme mentioned in section 11 of the Act shall be submitted by the manager through the Deputy Commissioner, who will forward it with his opinion to the Commissioner. The manager shall note in such scheme the order in which he proposes to pay the admitted debts. The manager in determining the order for payment of the debts, will, as far as possible, give preference first to claims of mortgagees and conditional vendees removed from possession; secondly, to claims of creditors to whom lands have been pledged (without possession given) as security for repayment; thirdly, to decrees of court; and fourthly, to bond debts.

Rule 15.—Applications by the manager under section 16 of the Act, for the removal of a mortgagee or conditional vendee from possession, shall not be made without the sanction of the Commissioner.

Rule 16.—The power to lease under section 17 of the Act shall be subject to the following provision:—No lease shall be given for any term exceeding three years without the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner, or exceeding four years without the sanction of the Commissioner.

High Court, Original Side, the 13th day of February 1885. (1036—1)

In the Court of the Second Subordinate Judge of 24-Pergunnahs, Alipore.

EXECUTION CASE No. 161 OF 1884.

Ramkristo Nusker, decree-holder.

Koybullya Nath Biswas, judgment-debtor.

IN the above case the undermentioned share of talook No. 147 of the 24-Pergunnahs collectorate, the property of the said judgment-debtor will be sold at public auction by the Nazir of the 24-Pergunnahs Judge's Court, on Monday, the 2nd March next, to satisfy the decree on account of the mortgage lien created thereon by the judgment-debtor in favour of the decree-holder; the amount now due to the decree-holder is Rs. 2,022-13-9.

Within the jurisdiction of the Sub-Registrar of Alipore, Sealdah, and Khurdaha, and police-station of Sonarpore, Vangore, and Nubabgunge in pergunnah Calcutta, kismut Banota and others, known as mehal Sribati. The annual revenue of the entire talook, payable to the said collectorate, being Rs. 3,673-9-7, deducting eight annas share of revenue of Baboo Krista Nundo Biswas, deceased, the other eight annas share of the said talook No. 147 and the revenue thereof, being Rs. 1,836-12-11, are recorded in the Collector's touzee in the names of Bissonath Biswas, Kassi Nath Biswas, Shumbhoo Nath Biswas, Chunder Nath Biswas, and Tarack Nath Biswas, each having one-fifth share. The one-fifth share of Bisso Nath Biswas and the other one-fifth share of Chunder Nath Biswas, i.e. total two-fifths share, having been put up to sale at auction by the District Judge of 24-Pergunnahs on the 1st July 1878, the said two-fifth share was purchased by the aforesaid judgment-debtor Koybullya Nath Biswas. The said Koybullya Nath having obtained possession of the said share of the talook settled it in putni to one Surbessur Ghose of Burha Jagulia. The said two-fifth share of the moiety of the said talook will be sold to realize the amount due to the said decree-holder.

For further particulars apply to Baboo Bacharam Ghose, vakeel for the decree-holder.

AMRITALAL PAL, Second Subordinate Judge.

5. Letters addressed to camp followers cannot be sent at the nine pie rate, and such letters will therefore be charged at the ordinary rate to Egypt, viz. three annas.

6. No British troops are being sent from India to Egypt, but letters addressed to British Soldiers and Seamen, or to any of the privileged class mentioned in clause 190 of the Indian Postal Guide, who may be serving in Egypt, will be sent of course at the special rates, subject to the conditions laid down in that clause and the following clauses.

7. Articles intended for persons other than the above will be charged at the ordinary postage rates mentioned opposite to "Egypt" in the Foreign Post Schedule of the Postal Guide.

8. Official correspondence for the Indian Field Force will be governed by the same rules as ordinary private correspondence for Egypt. It should be prepaid by service postage labels under the superscription and signature prescribed in clause 353 of the Postal Guide.

9. Money orders will be exchanged with the Indian Field Force under the rules governing the exchange of Asiatic money orders (clauses 261 to 265 of the Postal Guide).

10. Parcels may be forwarded to the Indian Field Force under the rules governing the despatch of foreign parcels from India, and they should be addressed in the same way as correspondence.

11. Insured and value-payable articles cannot be received for despatch to the Indian Field Force, Egypt. India Postal Notes will be sold, but not paid, by the Field Post Office.

A. U. FANSHAWE, Officiating Director-General of the Post Office of India.
Calcutta, the 20th February 1885.

FROM the 1st March 1885, applications will be received from the public at all Head Post Offices and Selected Sub-Offices to telegraph particulars of foreign money orders to the Indian offices* of exchange. The orders regarding which particulars are so telegraphed will then be advised by post to the foreign countries of payment, by the Indian offices of exchange, in the same way as ordinary foreign money orders. It should be clearly understood that the orders will be telegraphed only as far as the Indian office of exchange and not to the foreign country of payment.

* Bombay.
Madras.
Calcutta.

2. These rules will apply to money orders drawn upon any of the foreign countries, British Colonies or Native States with which foreign money orders are exchanged by India. The general conditions governing the issue of foreign money orders, as detailed in the Postal Guide, will apply to orders advised by telegraph, except that the charges on such orders will be as detailed below.

3. The remitter of a foreign money order, advised by telegraph under these rules will be required to pay—

(a) The equivalent in Indian currency of the value of the order, according to the schedule in force for the time being;

(b) A fixed charge of Rs. 2 for the cost of the telegraphic advice;

(c) Commission on the value of the order, at the prescribed rate. For foreign orders expressed in sterling, this rate of commission will be—

			Rs.	A.
On sums not exceeding	£ 2	... ...	0	8

4. The remitter of a foreign money order, advised by telegraph under these rules, should fill up the prescribed form and write across it the words "By Telegraph." The form should then be presented at the Post Office, together with the amount payable.

5. Foreign sterling money orders drawn upon the United Kingdom, the Continent of Europe, America, or the West Indies, cannot be advised by telegraph from any Post Office on the day fixed for the departure of the foreign mail steamer from Bombay.

A. U. FANSHAWE, Offg Director-General of the Post Office of India.

CANUNGOES AND PUTWARIS.

The Hon. Mr. MacDonnell introduced the Bill to amend and consolidate the law relating to Canungoes and Putwaris, and moved that it be read in Council. In doing so, he said:—

When asking for leave, Sir, to introduce the Bill, I took the opportunity of explaining the origin of the system of canungoes and putwaris, and the causes which have reduced that system to its present unsatisfactory condition. It is, I think, unnecessary that on this occasion I should go over the same ground, but it may be well that I should remind hon. members of the chief conclusions which I deduced from the history of the system. The first conclusion which I deduced was that these village accountants were, under native as well as under British rule, always regarded as servants of the State and responsible to the State for their trusts. My second conclusion was that zemindars are, and always have been, under an obligation to maintain these village accountants. My third conclusion affirmed the complete failure of the attempt made by Regulation XII of 1817 to make the putwari serve two masters—the zemindar and the State. My fourth conclusion pointed to the hopelessness of expecting any permanent good from the provisions of the Tenancy Bill regarding records of rights, unless existing village establishments were reorganized, and unless a competent agency under official control was established to maintain the record up to date in a correct and useful condition. I trust I am not oversanguine in hoping that the remarks which I made at our last sitting have secured for these conclusions the assent of this Council.

In the Bill which I have now the honour to introduce an effort has been made to give effect to the principles which the history of the question seems to me to justify. The Bill is a short Bill, and hon. gentlemen have no doubt so fully mastered it that any lengthened explanation on any part of its provisions is necessary. Should, however, the course of the debate which may be raised bring to light the existence of any misconception as to its nature and extent, or should any assaults on its principles be made, I shall have, in accordance with the rules of this Council, an opportunity afforded me for explanation and reply. At present, therefore, I propose to be brief in my account of the nature and objects of the measure.

As I stated this day fortnight, the fundamental principles of the Bill are three in number. The first principle is that the putwaris are to be Government servants, and no longer directly controlled by the zemindar. The second principle is that they are to be altogether severed from the collection of rent, and restricted to the registration and maintenance of the village accounts. The third principle is that they are to be paid by the parties interested in the lands of which they keep the accounts. The first and second of these three principles are embodied in sections 4, 20, and 22 of the Bill, which constitute the putwari a Government servant and his accounts public documents. To the third principle effect is given in sections 5 to 11 generally on the plan followed in the Road Cess and Public Works Cess Acts.

When asking for leave to introduce the Bill, I expressed a hope that it would be found possible to provide the funds required for an efficient establishment of village accountants by regulating payments now made by the raiyats in accordance with long standing custom. I added that, as long as the amount leviable from the raiyats did not exceed half-an anna in the rupee of rental, we might reasonably continue to levy that amount from them. We accordingly take power in section 10 of the Bill to levy a putwari cess from the raiyats up to half-an-anna in the rupee of his rent. If the raiyat now pays a putwari cess of half-an-anna in the rupee, whether it be credited separately in zemindar's accounts or consolidated with the rent, we propose to levy no more from him. We shall control the amount already payable, and make use of it for the purposes of this Bill. Should the amount be, however, insufficient for these purposes in any locality, we propose to increase the fund to a sufficient sum by raising an additional pice or one-quarter anna in the rupee from the zemindars. As I pointed out at our last meeting, the zemindars are now bound by law to maintain village accountants, so that they can have no valid legal ground for objection to this portion of the Bill. And apart altogether from the legal aspect of the case, the advantages zemindars will derive from an established and careful system of accounts will fully reward them for the slight expenditure to which we ask them to agree. The limits of assessment, however, are subject to reconsideration by the Select Committee, should the Bill be referred to a Committee, and no doubt further light will be thrown upon their appropriateness before the Bill assumes its final shape. Assuming, then, that we have our putwari and the money wherewith to pay him, it remains to say a word as to the manner in which we propose that he should perform his duty. On this part of the subject our proposal is that the zemindar should be left to keep his private accounts, to collect his own rents, and to give receipts without let or hindrance from the Government putwari. But we at the same time propose to lay the zemindar under an obligation to deposit, periodically, with the Government putwari, copies of his accounts in forms prescribed by the Government, and also to inform the putwari of all changes which occur in the tenure of land in the village. To enforce the fulfilment of the zemindars' duties in this respect, we propose to make him liable to fine on default, in the usual way; and we further propose to revive the provisions of Regulation IX of 1833, which deprive zemindars of the power of suing for arrears of rent if they have not filed the putwaris' papers with the Collector.

When the putwari has thus received the zemindars' accounts, it will be his duty to compare them with the information recorded in his own registers, and to test their accuracy in any other way provided by rules which the Government will prescribe for his guidance. The putwari will be specially bound to explain the zemindars' accounts to the raiyats, and to record the raiyats' objections against disputed items. As the putwari will be a public servant, all persons will be bound to supply him with information as far as may be, and to assist him in the enquiries which in the due discharge of his functions he may have to make. The canungoes and revenue officers will supervise the putwari in the discharge of his duties, will see that his papers are duly maintained as an efficient record of facts, and that proper statistical returns are submitted to the Government.

This is an outline of the plan on which we propose to proceed, but the outline is, of course, subject to modification, should the need for change in any direction be suggested by the criticisms to which, no doubt, this Bill will, when published, be exposed. The only other explanation I need now give is that the Act will not extend suo vigore to any district; and that until it is extended by order of the Government to any particular tract, the existing law will there remain intact. With these remarks, I now beg leave to introduce the Bill and to move that it be read in Council.

The Hon. Abdul Jubbar said:—I beg leave to make a few observations on the Bill which has just been introduced by the hon. member to the left. The object of the Bill is, I understand, to reorganize the system of canungoes and putwaris,—a system which has entirely ceased to exist in Bengal, and has worked mischievously in Behar. The reason for this state of things is not far to seek. In Bengal the law which requires the zemindars to appoint putwaris has been rendered nugatory by inexecution, and in Behar putwaris have been looked upon as servants of the zemindars and not as responsible public functionaries. If putwaris are to properly discharge the duties required of them, they should be placed under the control and supervision of the revenue authorities and made quite independent of the zemindars. By imposing on the zemindars the obligation of maintaining an establishment of putwaris, the statesmen of the time of the decennial settlement meant that they should be servants of the State. It was not intended that putwaris should owe a dual allegiance, and have to serve two masters. Therefore by converting putwaris into a Government agency, the Bill does not contemplate the enunciation of a new principle of law, but purposes to legislate on the lines of the earliest Regulations on the subject

I have said that the putwari system has worked mischief in Behar, and I think that I ought to explain what I mean. From my seventeen years' experience of that province, I know that under the existing system it is impossible to get from the putwaris reliable information on any point in dispute between landlords and tenants. Where the putwari is under the orders of the zemindars, he is hostile to the raiyats, and where he takes the side of the latter, he does all he can to sacrifice the interests of the former. There is at present no record of the rights and interests of the agricultural community to which evidential value can safely be attached, and from the absence of such records arises the difficulty of protecting the raiyats from over-assessments and over-payments. The authors of the Permanent Settlement seem to have considered that a trustworthy putwari or village accountant was as necessary for the preservation of the raiyat's interests in land as the village chowkidar for guarding his moveables. The village chowkidar is no longer the zemindar's servant, and I do not see why the putwari should be otherwise. If the putwari did what is desired, much of the unprofitable litigation in which zemindars and raiyats are often involved would come to an end, and the Government would be in possession of the agricultural statistics essential to efficient administration, and so the re-establishment of the putwari system on a sound and satisfactory footing would be advantageous both to the Government and the landlord. Putwaris' records, if accurately kept up, would enable the zemindar and the raiyat to settle disputes out of Court, and would be a help to the Government in all matters of administration. No one, I presume, can deny that the public at large will benefit by what improves the machinery of good government.

The question may be raised whether it will be practicable to secure on low salaries the services of a staff of putwaris who will fairly do their work. It is true that for putwaris' places we cannot get men who will be above suspicion, but I am not hopeless that under proper supervision and surveillance they will do their work satisfactorily. By close and constant supervision of their work, and by subjecting them to penalties for neglect and dishonesty, we may change their character and force them to be honest. In no department of the public service will underlings do their work well if they are not placed under efficient and strong control of superiors.

The last point for consideration is how and by whom putwaris are to be paid. The Bill provides for the levy of a cess, and if it becomes law, the putwaris, like all other Government servants, will receive their pay from the Collector. The cess will not be an additional burden on the raiyats, as where putwaris exist the raiyats pay them in some shape or other. The zemindars should not, however, be called upon to contribute towards the cess. As the Bill imposes upon them the duty of collecting the cess, I think they are entitled to some consideration. Not only will the putwaris do no work for the zemindars, but the zemindars will have to advance the cess before it is collected from the raiyats. With these remarks, I beg to support the introduction of the Bill, to the general scope of which I have not the slightest objection.

The Hon. Kumar Boikantonath Dey said:—Hon. Sir,—I have very carefully studied the papers connected with the subject now before the Council, and the learned dissertation with which the hon. member in charge of the Bill moved to obtain sanction for its introduction. The remarks made this day are equally valuable, and include all that can be said in support of the Bill. I regret, however, that I do not feel convinced that the proposed measure is, as it now stands, fair and expedient. It is not usual at the first reading of a Bill to discuss its details: the rule, I understand, is to confine the attention of the Council solely to the general principles involved. I do not find this in the standing orders, but I shall not on that account venture to disturb the course of the ordinary procedure of the Council. Confining myself to the general principles involved, I have to face, first, the propriety of reviving the putwari system; and second, the responsibility of the people connected with land to defray the cost of the scheme. These are the two grand principles which govern the Bill. The history of the measure given by the hon. mover is as full as could be desired, and members situated like me must feel thankful to him for the exhaustive resumé he has given. The papers laid on the table bear him out in every particular, and conclusively demonstrate that for well-nigh a hundred long years the scheme has repeatedly broken down, notwithstanding the most strenuous efforts, both legislative and executive, made to give it currency; and the questions arise, what causes have hitherto defeated the efforts of Government, and how are they now to be avoided? Under these heads the information given, I feel compelled to confess, is not sufficient. The causes are patent enough, but the remedy proposed is, in my humble opinion, totally inadequate. In fact, the only remedy proposed is to make the putwari a servant of Government, acting exclusively under the orders of the District Collector. This is, however, not a new plan It was proposed many, many years ago by the late Court of Directors, and the Government of India in their despatch of 6th January 1815 emphatically condemned it as pernicious. They said:—

"By such an appointment, if his natural connexion with the zemindars were not destroyed, it might be found that the putwari in many cases would be rendered only the more capable (from his character as a public officer) of being the tool of oppression on the raiyat and of fraud on the Government. In other cases, fostering the intrigues of the raiyats, he might bring ruin on the zemindars, and seriously injure the public revenue; while, if the putwari maintained his public character, his intrusion would, in all probability, be odious both to the zemindar and the raiyat, and all their efforts would be directed to defeat the object of his office."

What have we now before us to show that these apprehensions were not well founded? Nothing. On the contrary, the hon. mover quoted largely to show that every effort has been made by both zemindar and raiyat, and not ineffectually, to frustrate the object of the putwari system. The canungoe supervisor was there, and the Collector too, but they failed to prevent the epithets "worse than useless" and "positively mischievous" being applied to it; and what have we to show that things will get on better now? The Collector has more work now to do than what he had before. His time is fully occupied by multifarious and harassing duties, and he cannot now prove a more effectual supervisor than what he was before, and the canungo changes not his position in the least. I admit that higher pay is promised, but I am sure it will not, and cannot, under the nature of things, be so high as to place the canungo and the putwari beyond temptation. The present pay of the putwari varies from Rs. 2-8 to Rs. 4 a month. Let the amount be doubled or even trebled, and still he will not be better off than many menial servants in Calcutta. A good coachman here costs Rs. 16, and who will think that he is above a gratuity, and that gratuity so easy of access and so proof against detection as the putwari's will be The Government revenue is fixed now, and there is, of course, no fear of its suffering; but between the zemindar and raiyat, what is there to protect them? The rich zemindar with his long purse will vitiate the putwari, and the raiyat must suffer the evil, or the poor small zemindar must suffer by the machinations of the rich raiyat, or a combination of raiyats. The Bill provides no remedy for these inevitable evils, and I cannot but condemn it on that ground.

Supposing, however, for the sake of argument, that measures could be devised to make the putwari honest and useful, I beg to ask, how can the zemindars, in fairness, be made to contribute towards his maintenance? Originally, he was a village officer serving for the commune, and was paid by the commune. The Bill, however, does not recognize this, and the zemindar and the raiyat are thereby not free. The hon. members to my right and front will show clearly the state of things in Bengal and Behar, and I shall not anticipate them. But as regards Orissa, the case is peculiar, and nothing short of a positive breach of contract can justify the Government in imposing a cess of this kind on the people of that province. That province is temporarily settled, and at every settlement the question of communal lands was carefully considered. Lands were originally provided for the village watch, the village barber, the village putwari and others, but most of these have been resumed during different settlements. At the last settlement the lands for putwaris were, with a few exceptions, resumed by Government and included in the mal land, and the Government cannot, after taking away the land, insist upon a cess for the putwaris during the currency of the present settlement, which will last for many years yet. Such a cess cannot but amount to an arbitrary addition to the jumma fixed at the time of settlement. The Board of Revenue was consulted on this point in 1871, and I take the liberty of quoting a paragraph from their report. They say:—

"The Board deprecate any alteration in the present arrangement of the canungoes, or any reduction in the existing strength, and are of opinion that the zemindars cannot be required to provide for the remuneration of putwaris in estates in which no provision at the time of the settlement has been made for the purpose, and that the procedure of Regulation XII of 1817 cannot be enforced in Orissa because, subsequently to its enactment, that province was subjected to a regular detailed settlement, in which the appointment and remuneration of certain putwaris were distinctly provided for. The Board are also of opinion that, if putwaris are to be generally introduced in the district of Orissa, whether in each estate or a circle of estates, the expenses of their remuneration must be provided by Government."

The report of Mr. Ravenshaw, the Commissioner of the Orissa Division, was equally emphatic. It says that "out of 5,304 estates in Orissa, there are only 404 in which provision was made for putwaris at the time of settlement": that "if it be determined to appoint putwaris to every estate during the currency of the present settlement, the cost must fall upon Government"; that "he does not think that sub-divisional canungoes are required," and that "the whole district statistics, reports, and returns should be tabulated and recorded under the Collector's eye by the Sudder Canungoe." Of course, in the 404 cases in which special provision was made for putwaris, there can be no objection to Government resuming the land, or, letting alone the land, insisting on a cess, but they cover only a small fraction of the total of 5,304, and I leave them entirely out of consideration The Government has full right, and is welcome to do whatever it thinks proper with them.

I respectfully pray, therefore, the Council will take this matter into serious consideration before adopting any measure which is calculated to produce in the minds of the people the impression, and a well grounded one, that contracts with Government are liable to be set aside in the way proposed. The people cherish the highest confidence in the inviolability of Government contracts, and, in my humble opinion, nothing should be done to disturb that confidence. It is the farthest from my wish to offer the smallest opposition to the collection of regular and systematic statistics of the rural economy of the country. They are necessary for efficient government, and they should by all means be collected. But I hold that such statistics belong to the Government, and the community at large benefit by them, and Government, as representing the community, should defray the cost of the scheme. The zemindars and the raiyats are not the only parties concerned, and they should not be specially selected as the parties responsible for the cost. The subject was fully discussed in all its bearings by Sir George Campbell, and he was convinced that the cost should fall on the Imperial Funds, and the canungoes he employed for the collection and tabulation of statistical returns are to this day paid out of the Imperial Funds. Nothing has since transpired to show that he was wrong, and nothing has yet been said in this Council to prove that the work now being done by canungoes in every district and sub-division of this Government rightly falls only on zemindars and raiyats.

The Bill does not at all disclose the particular duties which the putwaris are to perform, and the owners and lessees of land are called upon by section 13 to submit to the putwari whatever may be called for, leaving the widest possible margin for the most diverse and discordant returns. A Commissioner of Orissa wants putwaris for census work, and some Collectors look upon canungoes as useful assistants in the collectorate office. Surely these are not duties for which owners of land alone should pay. In the orders of Sir Richard Temple of February 1876, seven different tables were named as required to be filed, and two of them were soon after shown to be what could not be supplied by zemindars, and had to be set aside by specific orders. The others proved so unmanageable that they had practically to be abandoned. At present, of the different returns to which the hon. mover of the Bill has called attention, I find some are already supplied to Government and others cannot be supplied by owners of land, and if supplied by them must be worthless for all correct statistical purposes, if not positively mischievous. For instance, the first item is the "precise area of every holding." This can be best supplied only by a cadastral survey, and not by men who are taught in Bengali arithmetic (if they are ever taught that) that half or even one-fourth of a katha should be reckoned as one full katha. The second is the quality of the soil, and this zemindars cannot give precisely, and what they can give will be of no practical use. "The status and rights of the raiyat" have yet to be determined by regular suits in Civil Courts, and until they are so determined no returns can be worth the paper on which they are written. The zemindar will call a man "a tenant-at-will," and the tenant will claim the right of a khudkast raiyat, and no putwari can settle the dispute satisfactorily. Moreover, returns of all the raiyats and their rents are regularly furnished now by all owners under the Road Cess Act, and a second set of the same papers cannot be wanted. It is true these returns are not now properly used: they are generally allowed to rot in the archives of the collectorate. These should certainly be digested and tabulated, but that is just the work which belongs to Government, and Government should pay for it. Clerks are now wanted to do that work, and it cannot be commendable to call the clerks putwaris and canungoes, and under cover of those names to demand a cess from the owners of land. I may be mistaken in this idea, but I cannot shake it off. The putwari of old acted as the umpire in dividing the produce where rent was paid in kind; the proposed one will do no such thing. The putwari of old cast the little accounts of the raiyats; the new one will do nothing of the kind, but insist upon the account being done elsewhere and regularly filed in his office, every default being visited by a fine of Rs. 50. The putwari of old collected the rent due to the zemindar; the new one will lose his official independence if he did so. The putwari of old kept the village accounts of the zemindars; the new one will demand such accounts to be ready prepared for him by the zemindar under heavy penalties. The putwari of old was one of the people, a servant of the commune; the new one will be a Government officer, serving as a petty tyrant and spy on the community. I must confess that I fail to see any similitude between the two pictures, except in the name, or any trace of the "immemorial antiquity" in the new one to which the hon. mover has appealed.

Taking these facts into consideration, I am of opinion that the principles involved in the Bill are wrong, and that the Bill should therefore be withdrawn.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds said:—I have a few remarks to make with reference to what has fallen from the hon. member who last spoke. I cannot help thinking that in a good deal of what he said he overlooked what I understood the hon. member in charge of the Bill to put forward as rather an important element in his proposals. The hon. member in the course of his remarks observed that persistent efforts had been made for many years past to revive the putwari system, and to give effect to it, but that heretofore all these efforts had ended in failure. The argument now used is that the present efforts will be equally unsuccessful, as the only remedy now proposed is to make the putwaris the servants of the Government. Then, after speaking of what he considered the inequity of expecting the zemindars to pay the putwaris, he referred to the case of Orissa, which I shall mention hereafter. He then brought some objections to bear on the nature of the returns which he understood would be called for from putwaris. I think the hon. member quite overlooked a very important passage in the speech of the hon. member when he moved for leave to introduce the Bill. The hon. member said—"I have stated that this Bill, if passed into law, will ordinarily be enforced only in districts or tracts in which a survey and record of rights have been carried out." I would ask the hon. member opposite to observe that that makes a very important and fundamental difference in the conditions under which it is now intended to revive the system, as compared with the conditions under which it was previously attempted. It is not the case that the only remedy now proposed is to make the putwaris Government servants. The remedy is to have an effective and authoritative survey and record of rights, with the formation of which the putwari will have nothing to do. This survey and record of rights having been completed, it will then be the business of the putwaris and canungoes, under the supervision of the Collector, to maintain and keep up these records. That is a very different thing from any proposal which would invest the putwaris with power to decide disputes. All that the zemindar would be required to do will be to give the putwaris notice of the changes in the record which it is their business to maintain. Then it is said that the Collectors are overworked, and that they could not supervise this work. It is quite true that the Collectors are overworked, and I fear they are likely to become more and more so, but I think that I may say that the Government of Bengal will look upon the effectual supervision and maintenance of village records, and the preparation of as correct statistics as it is possible to obtain, as one of the most important duties of district officers

With regard to the case of Orissa, I understand the hon. member to say that it will be impossible to impose a cess or any contribution for the maintenance of putwaris there without a breach of faith on the part of the Government. But what I have already stated will show that it is not intended to bring this Act into operation except where a survey and record of rights is to be maintained, and I may remind the hon. member that the Bengal Tenancy Bill is not by its own application to extend to Orissa, and I do not think that there is any great probability of its being extended to Orissa during the term of the present settlement. When the settlement of Orissa falls in, I think in about twelve years to come, it will be open to the Government to make such arrangements as it thinks necessary for the maintenance of village records in that province. I believe that if these considerations are taken into account, many of the objections which the hon. member put forward as objections to the introduction of the Bill will disappear, and I therefore trust that the hon. member will not press his objection to the motion before the Council.

The Hon. Joy Prokash Lall said:—Sir,—The Government of Bengal is to be congratulated on the recognition of the principle that the present anomalous position of the putwari as a quasi-Government official with obligation of service to the Government which do not pay him, and the zemindar who pays, should not be allowed to exist. This was condemned by the Behar Rent Commission and the Behar landholders have persistently urged that whatever other directions the revision of the putwari laws may take, the present anomalous system under which the nomination of the putwari was vested in them, and appointment and dismissal with the Collector, and under which, while they have to pay the putwari, the Collector can at any time, and for any length of time, command his services should not be allowed to exist. In so far therefore as the present Bill proposes to repeal Regulation XII of 1817, under which this dual system was established, I have only to offer my heartiest thanks to Government for this concession made to the complaints of the Behar landholders.

But, Sir, while the present Bill proposes to repeal an admitted evil, it will serve to create another and a more serious one in its stead. It will divide the province into putwaris' circles, and place a putwari, whom it will create a public servant, at each one of those circles. A petty Government official on a paltry salary, further removed from all manner of official supervision, will be a veritable tyrant, under the cloak of his official authority, to the people over whom he will be placed. True, there are to be canungoes to check them, but the salary which will possibly be given to these canungoes cannot tempt to set up honest men to accept service. In 1815 the Court of Directors said—"By such an appointment, if his natural connections with the zemindar were destroyed, it might be feared that the putwari would, in many cases, be rendered only the more capable (from his character as a public servant) of being the tool of oppression on the raiyat and fraud on Government. In other cases fostering the intrigues of the raiyats, he might bring ruin on the zemindar and severely injure the public revenue."

It is said that, if the putwari system, as at present proposed, has succeeded on the right bank of the Karamnassa, there is no reason why it should not succeed on its left bank. Well, Sir, as to this success we know only that from only a few years the putwari has been declared to be a public servant, and a metamorphosis has not yet reached beyond the experimental stage, even on the other side of the Karamnassa; and even at this stage, if the true feelings of the people were known, it would not redound to the credit of the experiment. But, Sir, the reasons which make it expedient and necessary for the interest of Government to have such an officer located in the villages in the North-Western Provinces, not yet permanently settled, except a few districts, do not exist in Bengal. Well, Sir, it is hard to understand how the putwari, unless he was bent on mischief, could furnish any other accounts regarding rights in villages beyond those to be placed in his hands by the raiyat and the zemindar. When this is so, what is the good of having him at all? If he does not, however, accept these accounts as correct, who will care to test his accounts? The canungoes cannot do it, and the Collector and the Deputy Collector have no time to do it, especially when the Government interest will in no way be endangered thereby. The matter will thus cease creating endless disputes as regards private rights.

Sir, I do not exactly know what is the precise number of villages in the territories under the Government of Bengal, but I was reading the other day Mr. Wilson's report on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, and he roughly estimates that number at four lakhs. If we are to have a putwari at a group of, say, four villages in average, their number will thus be one lakh, and at even the small amount of salary of Rs. 10 per mensem, the Government of Bengal would have to spend one crore of rupees for putwaris alone. Then there are canungoes, their establishment and a number of innumerable etceteras. The present rental of these provinces has been grossly computed at 13 crores. Now where is this money to come from? Surely a 5 per cent. putwari cess on the rental which is proposed to be levied will not cover the amount. Will the Provincial revenue be then spent in paying the establishment of putwari? Why, your Honor's Government might surely utilize that amount, if available, to better purposes. This matter of cost alone might induce your Honor's Government to drop this Bill. It will, perhaps, be said that it will be experimentally introduced in some portions of the territories under your Honor's Government; but the principle applies to the whole and in giving sanction to the principle, your Honor's Government ought to see to the cost it will entail.

Then, Sir, as to the extra cess to be levied from the zemindars and raiyats. It will be shortly an infringement of the principles of the Permanent Settlement. In the language of the fifth report, the cess would bear so strong an affinity to a direct increase of the land tax as almost inevitably to be viewed as an infringement of the Permanent Settlement—a consequence to be most anxiously avoided. Already, Sir, the cesses amount to 6½ per cent. of the rental. The additional 5 per cent. would make it more than 11 per cent. The Maharajah of Dumraon alone will have to pay more than Rs. 40,000 a year as the putwari cess, and why should the zemindars and raiyats pay alone? The statistics needed will be for public purposes, and if surely a separate establishment is necessary, the expenses ought to be met from the Provincial funds. It is said that the zemindars and raiyats pay this neg for the putwari at the rate of half an anna on the rupee, and the cess will be nothing more than the collection of this amount. But admittedly it is proposed to levy the cess at a higher rate than the neg, whereas the neg is at two pice a rupee, it is proposed to make the cess three pice.

Now enquiries would have shown that the neg or hisabana do not exist in all the districts of Behar, and where it exists, it is not paid by all the raiyats, and by none to the extent the Bill proposes to levy, whereas in some places it is considered as an illegal abwab. Again, wherever paid, it is paid for services rendered. In the lieu of the neg the raiyat expects that all his rent receipts should be properly written out by the putwari and other writing business done. The zemindar expects that he (the putwari) should keep all his village accounts. These duties no longer pertaining to the office of the putwari, the zemindar will have to seek out another man for the performance of these duties, and to find means to pay. The raiyat will find his old friend, the putwari, in this new servant of the zemindar; thus while the neg will come to be levied by Government as a cess, the raiyat and the zemindar will have to find out money to pay for the services of their own putwari.

I may also add that in the North-Western Provinces the zemindars and raiyats have been relieved of the putwari cess.

Then, Sir, as to the collection of the cess. They are to be levied from the zemindars by the same process as other cesses, which means of course the issue of certificate of demand, arrest, seizure and sale of properties, moveable and immoveable, belonging to him. Will the zemindars receive any compensation for the fresh liabilities and responsibilities to be thrown on them? They may or may not be able to collect the cess on their own account, but they will nevertheless have to pay, if not under the Sunset law, but a law not less stringent. I pray your Honor to pause before throwing these fresh responsibilities on the zemindars who are already burdened with too much responsibilities, and what they are already paying is at a very heavy sacrifice. The collection of a tax which Government chooses to impose forms no part of the zemindar's duty under any regulation or law. The Bill simply forces this duty of a public servant with grave responsibilities, even to the extent of having his all sold for default of this duty without giving him any wages for his labour, trouble, and anxiety.

The present Bill, I believe, originates in a certain recommendation of the Famine Commission. They say in one paragraph of their Report—"In the case of Bengal, what is specially needed, in addition to the reforms suggested above, is the introduction of field registers and village accounts, together with more active administration. In order to effect the first of these two reforms, it is necessary, as you have already urged, to carry out a field survey and to restore or create the body of village accountants. The position and duties of these officers should be defined with as much distinctness as possible, and it should be made quite clear that, though paid by a rate on the land, they are public servants amenable to the authority of the Government. We cannot too strongly condemn the present system under which the putwari, as far as he exists at all, though nominally a public officer, is, in reality, nothing more than the zemindar's servant." It is a policy fraught with mischief to attempt to introduce a more active administration with the putwaris as the local units of such administration. If a link is really wanted between the officials and landholders, a local unit in aid of more active administration, better people themselves may supply the link. In time, under your Honor's fostering care, under the Local Self-Government Bill, the whole of the territories under your Honor's administration will come to be thickly strewn with Union Committees and Local Boards. It will be more in accord with the spirit of the times, and, in fact, much better if these Union Committees or Local Boards were to be utilized with such help of establishment for the purposes of general statistics and as centres of more active administration than an under-paid official, a little tyrant within his little work, furthest removed from all manner of official supervision.

As for the zemindari statistics, i.e., statistics relating to the zemindars and raiyat, why the zemindars have at present to file periodically jamabundies in the Road Cess office. These, certainly, if properly looked into, will furnish all the informations required and available, and then with the spread of primary education every raiyat can certainly be expected to look to his own, and to be the custodian of his own record of rights. What then, Sir, is the necessity of such a measure? With these remarks I beg to say that the Bill should not be introduced.

The Hon. Ban Behary Kapur said:—I desire respectfully to oppose the introduction of this Bill into the Council. In my opinion, a law of this character is not required. I do not entertain any hope of its proving in any way beneficial to the raiyat or to the zemindar. In fact, it cannot fail, if passed into law, to lead to great misunderstanding between the landlord and his tenants. The putwari will be a middleman, who will merely enrich himself at the expense of both raiyat and zemindar. If the Civil Courts have to depend upon the papers submitted by the putwaris, and if those papers are received as evidence in courts of justice, it will, in my opinion, substantially defeat the ends of justice. The times are completely changed, and the circumstances are totally different from those which have been referred to by the hon. member in charge of the Bill. What was found effective and possibly necessary in the time of Akbar would prove useless and even injurious at the present time. The hon. member is of course perfectly correct in stating that the putwari system existed in old time, as is clearly evidenced in the "Ayeen Akbary." But a careful consideration will show that the system was introduced by Akbar when the rents were collected under the system of "Khoshtasheel." His especial object was the collection of rents immediately from the raiyats, hence the necessity for the putwaris in those days, but at the present time the imposition of such a system in Bengal, at all events, would be a mischievous anachronism. We should do well to remember that the putwari cess or "Hisabanna" which the raiyats are stated to pay at the present time in Behar is not compulsory. It may therefore be maintained, with much show of reason, that if such a cess be made binding upon the tenants, they would necessarily regard it as a very great hardship. As far as the zemindars are concerned, they will naturally not only feel acutely the indignity of being subjected to the supervision of a class of men who at the present time are their own paid servants, but they will in addition have imposed upon them the necessity of retaining other men to realize their rents and keep their accounts. Virtually, therefore, they will be required to pay two pice or more in the rupee, which will operate as a very oppressive and additional burden of taxation. The measure will also, in my opinion, if permitted to pass into law, have the effect of opening a flood of litigation, which will result in proving a constant source of harassing irritation, both to zemindars and raiyats. On these grounds, as well as others which it is needless to mention at present, I venture to object to the whole policy of the Bill.

I would, however, suggest also, with reference to the details of the Bill, that there are means ready to hand of avoiding the imposition of the proposed cess. There is a large saving in Bengal from the receipts of Court fees. A portion of this could not be better applied, if this Council were to determine to pass the Bill, than in paying the cost of a system which, it is alleged by the Government, will be an improvement of the administration of justice with reference to landed interests. This, however, is a question of detail which may at present be postponed. I deem the whole policy of the Bill to be so injurious as to think it incumbent on me to oppose even its introduction. I beg, therefore, respectfully, in conclusion, to oppose the introduction of this Bill.

The Hon. Mr. Miller said:—I desire to object at this stage to the introduction of the Bill, and for one reason only, namely that this Bill appears to me to be absolutely premature. It seems to me that this Bill is a supplement to uncompleted legislation which is being discussed at the present moment in another Council. If the Bengal Tenancy Bill fails to pass into law, we will be placed in this very illogical position, that we shall have been engaged in inaugurating and discussing a measure absolutely useless and absolutely unprofitable. If this Bill is to pass merely as a measure supplementary to the Bengal Tenancy Bill, it appears to me that we ought at least to wait until that Bill passes into law, and then we shall be in a logical position to discuss a Bill which deals with the policy of that measure. For this reason I think this Bill ought not to be introduced at the present time, and that we ought to wait until we know whether the Bengal Tenancy Bill passes into law. It will be very inconvenient to open out a discussion on the principles of the Bengal Tenancy Bill in this Council; but it appears to me that by introducing a Bill here, which is avowedly supplementary to that measure, we give occasion for a discussion of the principles of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, which some members at all events of this Council believe to be vicious in principle, and the result of which will be vicious in practice. I beg, therefore, to protest against the introduction of the Bill at the present time as inopportune.

The Hon. Mr. MacDonnell, in reply, said:—Sir,—In rising to answer the objections which have been urged against this Bill, I promise the Council that I shall not trespass upon their attention longer than I can help. The first objection which I desire to notice is that taken by the hon. gentleman who has just sat down (Hon. Mr. Miller). The hon. gentleman objects to this Bill because, being under the impression that it is a mere supplement or corollary to the Tenancy Bill, he considers it to be premature. But it seems to me that in making this objection the hon. member is labouring under some misapprehension. It is no doubt true that the enactment of this measure is essential to the successful working of those most useful provisions of the Tenancy Bill which refer to records of rights and settlements of rents. But apart altogether from the Bengal Tenancy Bill, the measure now under notice will be of use in estates managed by the Court of Wards, and in temporarily settled estates on the occasion of a resettlement. These two classes of estates cover such a large area that in regard to them alone the introduction of this Bill would be justifiable, and this way of looking at the question borrows additional force from the consideration that such estates do not exhaust the lands to which this Bill, if it becomes law, would be applicable, without any reference to the provisions of the Tenancy Bill which deal with records of rights. I trust that the hon. member will thus see that, even if the Tenancy Bill were not to become law, there would still be a proved necessity for the measure now before the Council.

I turn now to the objections taken by my hon. friends opposite (Rai Joy Prokash Lall and Kumar Bykantonath Dey), and by my hon. friend to my right (Lalla Ban Behari Kapur). Well, the remarks of the hon. gentlemen, as I have been able to follow them, seem to fall under two heads. My hon. friends object to the Bill, firstly, because of the alleged impropriety of reviving the existing law; secondly, because the Bill provides for the imposition of a new tax, contrary, as they allege, to the engagements of the Permanent Settlement. These heads seem to me to cover the objections that have been urged against the Bill by my hon. friends, and if I cannot compliment them on the freshness of the arguments or the accuracy of the information by which they have supported their objections, I may at all events acknowledge the temper with which their views have been urged. The first objection with which I desire to deal is that this Bill is a needless interference between landlord and tenant. The gravamen of this objection is that in the relations between landlord and tenant in these provinces no such cause for misgiving is to be found as would justify a measure of this sort. I confess, Sir, to a feeling of surprize that after all that has passed in connexion with the Bengal Tenancy Bill, a member of this Council could be found to commit himself to a statement of that nature. At all events I should deserve the disapproval of this Council if I were to inflict on them a repetition of the evidence which has satisfied the Local Government, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State, that interference between landlord and tenant is both necessary and desirable. Human life would be too short for repetitions of that sort; and patience, a limited commodity with most people, would be exhausted. I therefore think that I shall meet the wishes of the Council by declining on this occasion to be led into a discussion as to the necessity of legislative interference between landlord and tenant in Bengal. Those who are not convinced of the necessity from all that has passed during the past ten years are not likely to have their prejudices abated by any words of mine. All I can do under the circumstances is to advise my hon. friends who question the necessity for such a measure as this, to study the literature on the rent question. But while giving them that advice, I cannot help pitying them if they adopt it. It is, I think, Lord Macaulay who tells us that a criminal was once offered a choice between instant death and a perusal of Guicciardini's history. The criminal weakly chose the history, but repenting of his choice, after years of torture, craved immediate execution. Now, at the risk of suggesting to my hon. friends an obvious retort, I would advise them not to imitate the indiscretion of the Florentine criminal, but to accept this Bill as a lesser evil than a thorough study of the rent question.

The second head of objection urged against the measure is, that it is a violation of the engagements made with the zemindars at the time of the Permanent Settlement. I meet the objection with a two-fold argument. In the first place, I maintain the legality and justice of this measure on the special ground that it is precisely such a measure for "securing the welfare and prosperity of the raiyats" as the Government by Article VII of the Permanent Settlement proclamation reserved to itself the right to enforce. In the second place, I maintain the legality and justice of the Bill on the wider ground of the supremacy of the State, and of its right to impose taxes, if necessary, with a view to the public welfare, or for the special benefit of the particular class affected by such taxation. In regard to the special ground of justification, namely that depending on the interpretation of Regulation I of 1793, I need not trouble the Council with many words. In my speech this day fortnight I established the position that these village accountants were always regarded as public servants, and the zemindars were bound, by the Regulation which made them what they are, to provide for the maintenance of these village establishments. I would again invite the attention of the Council to the 62nd section of Regulation VII of 1793, and again submit that its terms fully support the argument I have based upon it. In further support of argument, I now call attention to the extract from the letter of the Court of Directors, dated 12th July 1820, which embodies the final views of the highest authority on the controversy which the hon. gentlemen opposite seeks to revive. This letter is, it will be observed, of a later date than that quoted by the Hon. Kumar

Boykantonath De, and the decision contained in it, being the final orders passed on a controversy in which the letter cited by the hon. gentleman was only an incident, must be taken as overruling the opinion on which my hon. friend laid such great stress The extract will be found at the commencement of the Blue Book which has been presented to Council The sixth paragraph of that extract runs as follows:—

"With regard to putwaris, the office did not require to be re-established, for it continued in existence, and the maintenance of a putwari for every village was imposed as an obligation upon the zemindars by the terms of the perpetual settlement. It had been found, however, that the accounts which were kept by those putwaris were altogether unworthy of trust and so framed as to promote the sinister interest of the zemindars by whom they were paid, both in defrauding the Government and in oppressing the raiyats. When we turned our attention to the means of rendering the ancient accounts of the country subservient to the affording of that knowledge which might enable us more perfectly to secure both the interest of the Government and those of the raiyats, it was necessary, of course, to consider the means of obtaining true instead of false accounts from the putwaris. For this purpose it appeared to us to be absolutely necessary to remove them from all dependence upon the zemindars. We accordingly give you explicit directions to make them servants of Government by transferring the choice, the pay and superintendence of them wholly to the Collector."

Thus we have the regulation imposing on zemindars the duty of maintaining these village accountants. We have the supreme authority of the Court of Directors declaring, with no uncertain voice, the right of Government to bring these accountants under official control. We have the fact established that, as at present constituted, the system of village accounts does not fulfil its objects. We find it manifest that if the system be not remodelled on the plan we propose, the beneficial results of the provisions of the Tenancy Bill regarding the records of rights will be wholly frustrated, while the beneficial action of Government in wards' and temporarily settled estates, and other tracts under official management will be seriously impeded. Thus the necessity for the proposed control exists, its legality is established, and the financial responsibility of the zemindars for the maintenance of those village establishments is interwoven with their titles to their estates I find it therefore very difficult to understand how any member, with these facts before him, can seriously assume a position of antagonism to this part of the measure.

I now wish to say a few words on the objection raised by the Hon. Ban Behari Kapur, who declares it to be impossible to make a system of village accountants an efficient means of safeguarding the interests of the agricultural community. A similar point was also taken by the Hon. Rai Bahadur Jai Prokash Lal, who affirmed that whatever necessity there may be for such a measure as this in the temporarily settled parts of India, there is none in permanently settled Bengal. If I were to meet this objection with a recital of the reasons why in permanently settled Bengal such legislation is necessary, I should largely occupy the time of this Council. I content myself however, by saying that the proposals now made by the Bengal Government on this matter are not without precedent. I will remind the Council of the fact that what we now propose to do has been done in the permanently-settled districts of the North-Western Provinces. The legislation we now propose closely follows the lines of the legislation which has there proved so successful. The questions now raised, the objections now urged, against our proposals were no doubt raised and urged at its inception against the law now prevailing across the Karamnassa. Such objections, too, must in that case have been raised and urged, not in a Provincial Council, but in the Council of India. It is surely a guarantee of the correctness and justice of our principles that similar principles under similar circumstances were approved and carried into successful action in the districts bordering on these provinces.

But the objection that this Bill is outside the power of interference reserved to Government by the Permanent Settlement Regulation has another and a wider aspect than those to which I have been referring. The wider ground is in fact a claim on the part of the zemindars to the exemption of the land from all future taxation, and its assertion in this Council requires that I should allude to a controversy which I had thought had been long ago consigned to the limbo of exploded fallacies. The point was fully discussed in 1870, when the road cess was introduced, and again in 1877 in connexion with the Provincial Public Works Cess. On the first occasion the Secretary of State, after mature consideration, decided that zemindars are not under the terms of the Permanent Settlement in any way exempted from taxation for local or other purposes. I will quote the words of this important decision, dated May 19th, 1870—

"In view therefore of these various facts and considerations, Her Majesty's Government have now to intimate to your Excellency the conclusion to which they have come, after a careful consideration of a controversy which has now been going on for a long course of years. This conclusion is that rating or local expenditure is to be regarded, as it has hitherto been regarded in all the provinces of the Empire, as taxation separate and distinct from the ordinary land revenue; that the levying of such rates upon the holders of land, irrespective of the amount of their land assessment, involves no breach of faith on the part of the Government, whether as regards holders of permanent or of temporary tenures; and that, where such rates are levied at all, they ought, as far as may be possible, to be levied equally, without distinction and without exemption, upon all the holders of property accessible to the rate."

These orders were passed, as I have said, in connexion with the Road Cess Act, but the question was again re-opened by the zemindars in connexion with the Public Works Cess, and again the zemindars received, this time from Sir Ashley Eden's Government, a very forcible repudiation of their claim, and in that repudiation the Government of India expressed their entire concurrence.

"If," said the Viceroy in Council, "the arguments which are now urged, and which have been repeatedly refuted, were to be admitted, it is hardly too much to say that no fresh taxation, which in any way touched the landholders of Bengal, could be imposed by the British Government. If such taxes as the income tax and cesses for works of local utility cannot be imposed, it would be difficult to specify any taxes which would not be liable to similar objections, and we should be brought to the conclusion that in consequence of an arrangement made with the zemindars of Bengal nearly a century ago—an arrangement, it must be added, which now leads to the annual loss by the State of several millions sterling of revenue—the Government must virtually abandon the right to levy fresh taxation in the province which is naturally richer and which is far less heavily taxed than any province of the Empire. Fortunately, as the Lieutenant-Governor has observed, no such questions actually arise, because no such claims for exemption can ever be admitted."

It is in face of these repeated declarations of the highest authorities in India and in England that we are now told that this Bill is ultra vires. In effect we are told that, because of the advantages conferred on zemindars by the Permanent Settlement, they are entitled to claim still further advantages to which no other class of the community lay any claim. It is possible that the hon. gentlemen who have raised these grounds of objection were not aware of the despatches from which I have quoted, and if this be the case, they will, now that they are aware of them, probably withdraw from an untenable position. But if, on the other hand, they persist in claiming exemption from taxation for all future time for such purposes as that which forms the subject of this Bill, then all I can say is that argument with the hon. gentlemen would lead to no useful result. There would be no room for argument, and I should have to content myself with affirming it to be clear that the Government, both under the strict letter of the settlement and in accordance with its general power to impose rates for local expenditure, has an indisputable right to levy a cess on zemindars for the maintenance of these village establishments.

I do not think, Sir, that I need say more on the present occasion. I will therefore conclude by repeating that the method in which the cess should be levied, or its precise amount, or other matters of detail not touching the principles of the measure to which hon. members have referred, are questions which no doubt will receive due attention from the Select Committee if the Bill be referred to one. To the adoption of the provisions on these minor points of the Bill as now drafted the Bengal Government does not absolutely bind itself; and if any modifications on these points are proposed and supported by cogent reasons, no doubt they will be fully considered by the Select Committee. But the principles of the Bill seem to me to be above the reach of attack, and I trust that I may have so far brought the hon. gentlemen who have opposed the Bill round to the same view, that they will not persist in the attitude of opposition which they have assumed. I now propose that the Bill be read in Council.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said:—I wish only to say a few words, before putting the motion to the Council, to remove a misapprehension which has arisen in reference to what has fallen from one or two hon. members regarding the objects of this Bill. I would allude, first, to the objection which was taken by my hon. friend Mr. Miller, that we are legislating here admittedly upon a Bill which is supplementary to the Bengal Tenancy Bill, now under the consideration of the Government of India; that as the Tenancy Bill has not yet passed, it is premature to initiate legislation of this kind, and that we are in an illogical position in attempting to do so. My hon. friend who is in charge of the Bill has shown that, even if we had to deal only with our own khas mehals, a Bill of this kind would be necessary, though it would be a very small measure compared to the number of estates and extent to which it would apply as regards the whole of Bengal and Behar. Still, even if we had to legislate for our own property only, I think it would be necessary to legislate. But beyond this, I have told hon. members that I have no intention to pass this Bill this session; and if the motion to-day is carried and the Bill is referred to a Select Committee, and if the Select Committee submit their preliminary report before we break up in the ordinary time, my desire is to circulate the Bill with the report of the Select Committee for the consideration of all district and local officers. Consequently there will be no possibility of our passing this Bill, if we carry out that intention, before the supreme Legislature has come to a decision on the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Therefore the argument which my hon. friend has adduced as to the illogical position in which we are placed is dispelled, for we shall certainly not legislate here finally until we know the result of the larger measure before the Government of India.

Then as regards the objection which I think my hon. friend Baboo Joy Prokash Lal put forward. I will not enter with him into a discussion as to this Bill being a breach of the intentions of the Permanent Settlement, because they have been partly answered by my friend to the right (Mr. MacDonnell.) I will only observe this, that any measure of the kind which is brought forward, whether an income tax or a road cess, or a customs duty, is always opposed by zemindars as a breach of the Permanent Settlement. It seems as if no legislation which at all touches land can be attempted without raising the plea, which is so frequent and common in the mouths of zemindars, that we are breaking faith with them as regards the Permanent Settlement. Now I would remind hon. members that the zemindars of Bengal are very much better off than the zemindars in other parts of the country. Considering the extent of Bengal, its population and its richness, it pays infinitely less revenue than any other province in India. If we have regard to the details of my contention, let us look to the irrigation system as it is carried out at the expense of the Government. In the North Western Provinces the Government has been able to recoup itself to some extent by a charge on the zemindars for the benefits derived by them from the use of the water, but here in Bengal the zemindars are absolutely free against any such charge, and not only are they free, but they enjoy all the advantages of the large expenditure which the Government has incurred in the construction of canals for the supply of water, and gain the whole benefit of enhancement of rent resulting from our irrigation works. Therefore I say that the zemindars of Bengal are a favoured class; they pay much less revenue than any other similar class in any other part of the country, and have less right than others to object to their liability to assist the Government in a measure of this kind.

Objection has been taken by my hon. friend who has recently joined the Council (Babu Ban Behary Kapur), and by the hon. member from Dumraon, as to a Bill like this not being required, and as being one likely to create and promote litigation. Well, I must answer to that, that Bengal again in this matter enjoys purely exceptional advantages and an exceptional position. In every province in India some system of this kind of village agencies obtains. There are Thougyies in Burma, patels in Bombay, mouzadars in Assam, and putwaris in the Central Provinces, in the North-Western Provinces, and in the Punjab. Bengal is the only province which has no such village system at all; and not only has there been no litigation, and no trouble in those provinces by the existence of such institutions, but a very superior and direct advantage has accrued in them, both to the Administration and to the people, including proprietors and tenants, and I think we may fairly look to the same advantage resulting to Bengal by the proper introduction of a measure of this nature. I have no doubt that its first introduction may cause some litigation, but by its tentative introduction and gradual assimilation to the circumstances of districts, I believe that the fears which have been expressed to-day regarding litigation, disputes, and disturbances between zemindars and raiyats are very much exaggerated. It is proposed to apply it very gradually to one district at a time, and it will depend upon its success there how soon and quickly it can be extended to other parts of the country.

I will now turn to the objection of the member who represents Orissa. He may be perfectly sure that, not only as long as I am Lieutenant-Governor, but as long as other Lieutenant-Governors occupy the place I do, there never will be any intention of breaking the engagements which the Government have made with the zemindars in any part of the country during the currency of a settlement. The settlement in Orissa will come to an end in 1897, and I hope by that time the Government of the day will be able to take up the detailed survey and settlement of the province on a proper and complete system. It will be time enough then to consider whether a measure like this will be required in Orissa. As matters stand, the hon. member is crying out before he is hurt. He has twelve years more to enjoy the current settlement, and at the end of that time, if this measure is successful in Bengal and Behar, it will be for the Government then to extend it to Orissa.

The object of the Bill is to get at the facts connected with the agricultural economy of the country. For the last ninety years we have been endeavouring without any success to arrive at these facts. Everybody complains; those who have been discussing the Rent Bill for the last six or seven years complain; gentlemen who come to India to make enquiries about it complain; the zemindars themselves and the raiyats, if they could speak, also admit, that neither the Government nor the zemindar, nor the raiyats, have any positive knowledge of the facts which exist in regard to their relations to one another as regards their own property. The zemindars have always contended that any interference of this kind is unnecessary, because they possess the information themselves. But there are two objections to that statement. First, the information that they possess is not always correct; and second, whenever it is brought forward in Courts, it is objected to as coming from no authoritative source and founded upon no proper basis. I will give an illustration of what I mean. We were discussing the other day a question in Select Committee on the Rent Bill as to the form of receipts. The form of receipt submitted for acceptance simply proposed to give the name of the tenant, his father's name, the extent of his holding and position, and some sort of information as to the crops he grew and the inclusion of miscellaneous payments in regard to phulker, bunkur, and jhalkar. An hon. member in the Select Committee, speaking with a good deal of experience, said that not one zemindar in a hundred would be able to give a return of that kind of the raiyats on his estate. That assertion seemed to me to expose the darkness which prevails as between raiyats and zemindars in a more marked manner than I had ever conceived to be possible; that the zemindar should not be able to say how much every raiyat in his property holds, what rent he pays, what crops he generally grew, and so on. If the zemindar has not been able to give what the Government has hitherto been unable to get, it seems to me to open the door to every kind of collusion and fraud, and I am satisfied that until you get to the basis of that knowledge you will never get any peace in the country. In this dark ignorance lies the chief cause of the litigation of which you complain. In this Bill it is attempted to get at those facts which every one desires to obtain, and yet not to attempt to get at them too hurriedly, but carefully and tentatively. Certainly there is no wish to force ourselves into legislation which can be seriously regarded as a breach of the Permanent Settlement, and as an unjust interference with the zemindars' rights. The experience of other parts of the country shows that this is not the case. I therefore most strongly support the Bill. I do not say that I support every detail which appears in it, but I hope it will be allowed to go to the Select Committee to receive that attention which a Bill of this character should receive. I am glad to know that it is proposed to place on the Select Committee three native gentlemen possessing an intimate knowledge of the subject, and I hope that that Committee will in time place before us a measure which will realize our hopes and wishes, and place in our possession that united knowledge and information which it is necessary for the Government to secure for effective administration and the maintenance of peace and order.

The question that the Bill be read in Council being put, the Council divided :—

Ayes.	Noes.
Hon. Mr. Reynolds.	Hon. Mr. Miller.
Hon. Mr. Phillips.	Hon. Boykantonath De.
Hon. Mr. Macaulay.	Hon. Joy Prokash Lall.
Hon. Mr. MacDonnell.	Hon. Ban Behari Kapur.
Hon. Mr. Garrett.
Hon. Abdul Jabbur.
The President.

The motion was therefore carried.

The HON. MR. MACDONNELL then moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon. Mr. Reynolds, the Hon. Mr. Garrett, the Hon. Abdul Jabbur, the Hon. Joy Prokash Lall, the Hon. Ban Behari Kapur and the Mover.

The motion was agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 21st instant.

RESOLUTION ON THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE PORT OF CHITTAGONG IN 1883-84.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT—MARINE.

Calcutta, the 21st February 1885.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Annual Report of the Administration of the Port of Chittagong in 1883-84.

THE trade of the Port, which had been growing steadily for several years, has somewhat fallen off during the past year, owing to a depression in the rice trade with the West Indies and the Mauritius, and owing to diminished exportation of jute. It is noteworthy, however, that, though lesser quantities of both rice and jute were exported during the year under review than in the preceding year, the value of the exports in the former period exceeded the value of the exports in 1882-83.

2. The number and tonnage of vessels visiting the Port during the past two years are shown in the following statement :—

PARTICULARS.	1882-83.		1883-84.		INCREASE.		DECREASE.
	Number.	Tonnage.	Number.	Tonnage.	Number.	Tonnage.	Number.	Tonnage.
European vessels trading with Europe	39	43,789	34	48,297	.....	4,508	5	.....
Do. foreign trade	34	18,554	26	20,405	.....	1,851	8	.....
Do. coasting trade	15	8,411	5	3,762	.....	...	10	4,649
Chittagong vessels	31	6,103	47	9,987	16	3,884	.....	.....
Other native vessels	58	5,779	104	8,012	46	2,233	.....	.....
Naraingunj inland trade	762	73,803	611	61,808	.....	.....	151	11,995
Mail steamers	103	55,858	105	54,509	2	.....	.....	1,349
Trading steamers	20	19,464	22	22,086	2	2,622	.....	.....
Balam boats	2,205	30,460	2,050	28,739	.....	.....	155	1,721
Total ...	3,267	262,221	3,004	257,605	66	15,098	329	19,714

3. It will thus appear that as regards the foreign trade of Chittagong, the same tendency towards increased tonnage is observable as has been noticed in the case of Calcutta. The numbers of ships diminish, but the tonnage increases.

4. In the Resolution for the previous year, the Lieutenant-Governor desired that information should be furnished regarding the quantity and value of the jute exported, that being the most important of the exports. This has now been supplied, and the following statement exhibits the statistics for the main items of trade during the past two years :—

PARTICULARS.	1882-83.		1883-84.
	Quantity.	Value.	Quantity.	Value.
	Tons	Rs.	Tons.	Rs.
Jute	57,463	73,23,050	53,228	76,69,330
Rice and paddy ... Foreign ports	39,138	18,20,132	33,849	20,52,185
Rice and paddy ... Home ports	42,177	14,49,205	31,743	13,78,575
	81,315	32,69,337	65,592	34,30,760
Salt	11,755	1,93,472	16,393	2,74,828
	Gallons.		Gallons.
Mineral oil	197,058	77,992	294,444	1,46,287

The decrease in the quantity of jute and rice and paddy is compensated by the increase in value. The statistics as regards the jute are sufficiently explained by the shortness of the crop; but the falling off in the quantity of rice and paddy, amounting as it does to 15,723 tons, and affecting both the home and foreign trade, should, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, have received full explanation. The increase under the heads of salt and mineral oil is satisfactory; and the Commissioner remarks that kerosine oil has now entirely superseded earth-oil in Chittagong. The increase in the trade of Chittagong and other native vessels is said to be due to the decrease in the Narainganj inland trade.] Unable to get a jute cargo, the Chittagong vessels cleared with rice and paddy for ports on the west coast, and the native boats, which came in the expectation of earning freight by the jute trade with Narainganj, were obliged, on account of the short jute crop, to return to their own ports either in ballast or with other cargo. The decline as regards balam boats is natural under the narrowed business of the Port.

5. The receipts of the Port Fund (composed of port dues, pilotage and mooring fees, and miscellaneous items) amounted to Rs. 81,340 as against Rs. 73,855 in 1882-83, the increase being due to pilotage and mooring fees. The new rules under which the mail steamer captains pilot their own vessels work well, and satisfaction is expressed at the increased mooring facilities provided in the port.

6. The expenditure of the Port rose from Rs. 78,917 in 1882-83 to Rs. 82,867 in the year under review, the chief source of enhanced expenditure being dockyard charges and the new pilot rules, under which the captains of mail steamers receive half the pilotage fees for piloting their own vessels. The dockyard charges have been heavy and have swallowed up most of the balance that had accrued in former years, but the Port has been greatly improved and the expenditure will no doubt prove remunerative.

7. Twelve new vessels were built at the port with a tonnage of 1,829 as against six with a tonnage of 906 in 1882-83, the increase being due to the prospects of the jute trade. Permission was granted to dig one new dock on the river bank.

8. The jetty is reported to be in satisfactory condition and use. The buoyage of the river has been now completed according to the orders of the Government of India No. 2941, dated 30th September 1880, black conical buoys marking the right side of the river, and red can-shaped buoys the left side. The whistling buoy off the South Patch, unlike the buoys at the mouth of the Hooghly, is reported to have been found of benefit by vessels making for the port, but information has been received from other sources which attaches but an indifferent value to it. Slight modifications have taken place at the mouth of the river, which the Commissioner conjectures will tend to improve the navigation there, but higher up the channel has in parts deteriorated. The leading marks for the navigation of the river are satisfactory. One conspicuous mark exists for every track, and the piloting has been rendered very easy.

9. The light tower and revetment at Kutubdea are in satisfactory condition, but the existing lights and lanterns were condemned by Colonels Trevor and Lovett, who inspected them. Estimates for new dioptric lights have been sanctioned.

10. The number of casualties was six as against nine in the previous year, and none appear to have entailed serious damage. The number of wrecks was large, five vessels engaged in the jute trade with Narainganj having been wrecked to the north of Sundeep, and several lives lost, through under-ballasting and the ignorance of the masters. The Port Officer reports that the native serangs still give trouble by their neglect of the rules as to lights and fog signals, and the Lieutenant-Governor approves of the measures that Mr. Good has taken to ensure compliance with the Board of Trades' requirements. Finally, the health of the Port has been very good, and although the year has not been one of active trade, there is much to show that the Port is rising in favour. Its situation in the midst of a large rice and jute-producing tract is advantageous, and with the provision of reasonable facilities for the ships visiting the Port, the stability of its trade should be assured. Those facilities in the shape of better buoyage, lighting, mooring, and water-supply have been and are being attended to as far as finances will permit.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor thanks the Commissioner for his report, and is glad to notice the commendation passed on the Port Officer.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

A. P. MACDONNELL,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT ON PUBLIC INSTRUCTION IN BENGAL FOR 1883-84.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT—EDUCATION.

Calcutta, the 23rd February 1885.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Report on Public Instruction in Bengal in 1883-84.

THE Report is submitted by Mr. A. W. Croft, C.I.E., Director of Public Instruction. Mr. Bollett officiated as Director from the beginning of the year to the 9th December 1883, when he was relieved by Mr. Croft. The chief event of the past year was the publication of the Report of the Education Commission, which, for some time to come, will determine the direction of educational progress in Bengal. There will, however, be less disturbance of existing conditions in these provinces than in other parts of India, for on many, if not most, of the leading points discussed by the Commission the principles ultimately adopted were those already recognized in Bengal. Even where reform is admitted to be called for, no conflict of principle is discerned between the policy already followed in Bengal and that recommended by the Commission. That the grant for primary education is insufficient; that the standard of instruction should be raised; that primary schools should be inspected more frequently and the qualification of their teachers improved; that private colleges have a claim to more liberal aid from Government, and that a supply of female teachers should be provided—all these are objects which have been steadily kept in view in Bengal, and which have been furthered from time to time as funds permitted. The financial difficulties by which this Government is hampered in the matter of education, and the uncertainty as to the shape that may be taken by the sections dealing with education in the Local Self-Government Bill, have already been represented to the Government of India in a separate communication. Here it is sufficient to remark that the ideal scheme for the development of education in Bengal laid down by the Commission will be steadily borne in mind and worked up to, though the Provincial finances will not admit of its being introduced in its entirety at once.

2. While the Education Commission was sitting, a special Committee was appointed to revise educational forms of statistics, and their suggestions have been followed in the present report. The new forms, although tending to obscure financial differences, do not differ from the old sufficiently to prevent an intelligible comparison being made of general educational results. The progress made during the year in schools of all classes which submit returns to the Department is exhibited in the following statement:—

The heading "Public Institutions" includes those which follow a course of study prescribed by the Department or by the University, and which either are inspected by the Department, or present pupils at examinations held by the Department or the University. A remarkable decline is noticeable in the ratio of increase, both of schools and pupils. The statistics for the last five years are as follows:—

	Schools.	Pupils.
In 1879 a gain of	2,060	86,307
„ 1880 „	6,094	91,323
„ 1881 „	8,131	109,459
„ 1882 „	10,572	178,156
„ 1883 „	10,809	204,447
„ 1884 „	1,369	81,517

Thus the increase in schools has fallen from 10,809 to 1,369 and in pupils from 2,04,447 to 81,517. The Director observes that the increase of pupils has been in a much higher ratio than the increase of schools, and infers from this that the existing schools have been better attended. This view is borne out by the fact that the proportion of children attending school, calculated in the usual manner, has risen in the case of boys from less than one in four to more than one in four, and in the case of girls from one in 89 to one in 75. It is explained that the apparent increase of 30 in the number of special schools is due to the inclusion under this head of 35 Kyoungs, or schools attached to Buddhist monasteries in Chittagong and the Hill Tracts with 561 pupils.

3. The expenditure of the Department from public and private sources during the last two years is shown as follows:—

(b) Exclusive of ditto ditto ditto ditto.

In accordance with the new rules, expenditure incurred in the maintenance of private schools as now defined has been excluded from the statement for 1883-84. If that item be also struck out of the accounts for 1882-83, it will be seen that the private expenditure on public institutions has increased by Rs. 1,70,000. Government expenditure, on the other hand, has decreased by Rs. 1,14,000, and the proportion which such expenditure forms of the total expenditure has fallen from 40·4 to 39·3 per cent. The cost of collegiate education has risen by Rs. 16,000, while that of secondary education has fallen by Rs. 39,000, of which Rs. 18,000 is nominal only. The average yearly cost of each pupil to the State in the various classes of schools was as follows:—

	Government institutions.	Municipal institutions.	Aided institutions.
	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
High English schools ...	9 14 6	0 9 7	4 4 0
Middle ditto	12 1 7	.....	4 4 9

Upper primary	3 13 8	... ..	1 11 8
Lower ditto	4 8 1	.....	0 8 2

4. The classification of pupils during the last two years, according to the stage of educational progress they have reached, is illustrated by the following abstract table :—

Stage.	Number of Pupils		Increase.	Decrease
	1882-83.	1883-84.
High	8,611	11,928	3,317	.....
Middle	38,416	35,270	...	3,146
Upper primary	62,057	70,229	8,178	.....
Lower „ (upper section)	455,361	648,913	193,552	.. ...
Ditto (lower section)	708,567	592,897	.....	115,678
Total ...	1,273,006	1,359,237	86,231	.....

The decrease of pupils in the middle stage is attributed to more accurate classification, while that in the lower section of the primary stage is due partly to bonâ fide progress, and partly to a change of system under which the only point taken into account is the mode of instruction, without entering upon the question whether a given pupil can actually read a printed book or not.

5. From another table, dealing with caste and creed, it is gathered that of the pupils in all public institutions, 69 per cent. are Hindus, 28 per cent. Mahomedans, nearly 1 per cent. Christians (half being Native Christians), and nearly 2 per cent. aborigines. Of the Hindus at school, 40 per cent. belong to the dominant and literate castes of Brahmans, Rajputs, Kayasths, &c.; 27 per cent. to the "Nabasakh," or group of nine castes, from whom a Brahman may take water; 27 per cent. to Banias and artizan castes; and 6 per cent. to the lower or servile castes of Chamars, Domes, Haris, &c. The relative strength of the different groups varies with curious regularity in the different classes of schools. Thus in colleges the literate castes outnumber the rest by five to one, and in high schools by three to one; while in lower primary schools they form less than one-fourth of the pupils. In the case of the lower castes, on the other hand, the order of distribution is reversed. For every 1,000 pupils of the literate castes there are of the lower castes 7 pupils in high schools, 17 in middle English schools, 40 in middle vernacular schools, 115 in upper primary and 211 in lower primary schools. Mr. Croft appeals to these statistics to prove that the constitution of the pathsalas, maintained by the village community, has always been perfectly democratic, and goes on to remark that Government interference with the village schools has diminished the relative proportion of the higher classes among the pupils. In village pathsalas outside the departmental system the proportion of pupils of the superior or literate castes is said to be 57 per cent., while in the aided primary schools it is only 23 per cent.

It is possible, however, to draw another conclusion. The figures might suggest that the original constitution of the pathsala was hardly so democratic as the Director's observations would imply it to be. Education, in fact, was the privilege of the literate castes, whose superior status was fully recognized in the village community, and the lower castes were only gradually admitted to share in this privilege. The supervision of pathsalas by the State has tended, as the Director points out, to diminish the proportion of boys belonging to the literate castes, but it has done so, not by reducing their numbers, but by increasing the numbers of the other castes—in short, by making the pathsala more democratic than the traditions of native society would of themselves permit.

6. No administrative changes were made in the controlling agencies of the Department during the year. Complete information is, for the first time, furnished regarding the amount of inspection done by the various grades of inspecting officers. Excluding the Inspector of European Schools, whose duties are of a special kind, the average length of tour made by the ten superior inspecting officers was 155 days, during which 141 schools were visited in situ, and in the case of eight officers a large number of pathsalas was examined at a central gathering arranged for the purpose. For Deputy Inspectors of Schools a tour of 150 days in the year is considered reasonable, having regard to the heavy office work they have in many districts to perform. Of the 43 officers of this grade, 25 attained or exceeded and 18 fell short of this standard. The average for the grade was
